OUTCOME OF PROCEEDINGS

From:	Working Party on Social Questions
On:	13 October 2014
No. prev. doc.:	13011/14 SOC 612 EGC 34 ECOFIN 808 DRS 110 CODEC 1789
Subject:	Proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on improving the gender balance among directors of companies listed on stock exchanges and related measures

I. INTRODUCTION

At its meeting on 13 October 2014, the Working Party on Social Questions continued its examination of the above proposal. The discussion was based on a set of Presidency drafting suggestions (doc. 13011/14) concerning , in particular, Recitals 11, 24 and 29a and Articles 4 and 4b. A number of technical improvements based on suggestions made by the Council Secretariat's quality advisors were also included in the text.

SE entered a general scrutiny reservation, pending examination of the proposal by the new Swedish government.

LU informed the Working Party that it now supported the proposed Directive.

II. MAIN ITEMS DISCUSSED

Latest figures

Cion informed the Working Party that the latest figures ¹ showed that the average share of women on the boards of the largest publicly listed companies in the EU had risen to 18.6% (in April 2014). However, the situation differed widely between the Member States, some making rapid progress (often -- but not always -- through the implementation of binding measures) while others lagged far behind, leading to a widening gap.

Exchange of information and good practice (Recital 11)

ES, LT and EL were unable to accept the deletion of the elements encouraging the Member States to share information and to exchange good practice. The Chair explained that an alternative to deletion could be keeping the text and adding a corresponding provision in the articles.

Right to information versus the right to respect for private life (Recital 28)

FR and Cion felt that the explanation in Recital 28 concerning the need to balance competing rights (right to information versus the right to respect for private life) in the context of transparency in the selection of candidates could be improved. The Chair undertook to reflect on this issue.

Deadline for attaining the quantified objectives (Article 4)

BG reiterated its view whereby 1 January 2020 was too optimistic a deadline for reaching the quantified objectives set out in Article 4. FR also recognised the possible need to discuss the timeline foreseen in the draft Directive.

Suspension for Member States who have taken equally effective measures (Article 4b)

Delegations (BE, ES, FR, PT) welcomed the attempt to introduce more clarity to the text and saw a need to clarify and fine-tune the sample criteria related to the suspension available to Member States that have taken equally effective national measures, including the idea of a 7.5 percentage point increase in the level of representation of the underrepresented sex (BE, PT). The Chair explained that the 7.5% percentage point figure was based on the idea of a 1.5% percentage point increase per year. Cion added the observation that a 1.5 percentage point increase in the representation of the under-represented sex was close to the EU average and that the level of progress required for the use of the suspension clause should be at least equivalent to EU average.

Stressing the need to strike a balance between legal certainty and flexibility, Cion recalled, moreover, that the open list of criteria explicitly set out watertight scenarios that would allow Member States to qualify for the exemption, yet left open the possibility that other scenarios might also qualify for the exemption. Cion offered to help the Presidency prepare an explanatory note elucidating the practical meaning of the examples listed in Article 4b(1a).

FR and PT raised the concern that the derogations contained in Article 4b(1a)(a) and (b), which were based on lower target figures as compared with the quantified objectives set out in Article 4, had the effect of watering down the text. Cion recalled that the numerical objectives set in Article 4 were in any case non-binding, the only binding legal requirements being the procedural rules for selection of candidates for appointment or election.

Further details of delegations' comments are set out in footnotes to the text in the annex. Changes in relation to the previous version (13011/14) are set out as follows: new text is in bold and deletions are marked "[...]". For additional information on delegations' positions, see also doc. 12876/14.

III. CONCLUSION

The Chair informed the Working Party that the next meeting was likely to take place during the first half of November. Delegations were invited to submit written suggestions no later than 21 October 2014.

² OJ C , , p. .

- (1) Equality between women and men is one of the Union's founding values and core aims under Article 2 and Article 3(3) of the Treaty on European Union (TEU). Under the terms of Article 8 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU), the Union has to aim to eliminate inequalities, and to promote equality, between men and women in all its activities. Article 157(3) of the Treaty provides a legal basis for the adoption of Union measures to ensure the application of the principle of equal opportunities and equal treatment of men and women in matters of employment and occupation.
- (2) The role the principle of positive action can play in achieving effective equality between women and men in practice is recognised in Article 157(4) TFEU and in Article 23 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (Charter), which provides that equality between women and men needs to be ensured in all areas and that the principle of equality cannot prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in favour of the under-represented sex.
- (3) Council Recommendation 84/635/EEC³ recommended that Member States take steps to ensure that positive action includes, as far as possible, actions having a bearing on active participation by women in decision-making bodies. Council Recommendation 96/694/EC⁴ recommended that Member States encourage the private sector to increase the presence of women at all levels of decision-making, in particular by the adoption, or within the framework, of equality plans and positive action programmes.

³ Council Recommendation 84/635/EEC of 13 December 1984 on the promotion of positive action for women (OJ L 331, 19.12.1984, p. 34).

⁴ Council Recommendation 96/694/EC of 2 December 1996 on the balanced participation of women and men in the decision-making process (OJ L 319, 10.12.1996, p.11).

- (4) In recent years the Commission has presented several reports taking stock of the situation concerning gender diversity in economic decision-making. It has encouraged publicly listed companies in the Union to increase the number of women on their boards by self-regulatory measures and to make concrete voluntary commitments in that regard. In 2010, in its Communication entitled "A Strengthened Commitment to Equality between Women and Men - A Women's Charter", the Commission underlined that women still do not have full access to the sharing of power and decision-making in political and economic life and reaffirmed its commitment to use its powers to promote a fairer representation of women and men in positions of responsibility. Improving the gender balance in decision-making was defined by the Commission's Communication entitled "Strategy for equality between women and men 2010-2015" as one of its priority tasks.
- (5) In 2011, the Council adopted the European Pact for Gender Equality (2011-2020), acknowledging that gender equality policies are vital to economic growth, prosperity and competitiveness, reaffirming its commitment to close the gender gaps with a view to meeting the objectives of the Europe 2020 Strategy, especially in three areas of great relevance to gender equality, namely employment, education and social inclusion, and urging action to promote the equal participation of women and men in decision-making at all levels and in all fields, in order to make full use of all available talent.
- (6) The European Parliament, in its resolution of July 2011 on women and business leadership, urged companies to attain the critical threshold of 30 % female membership of management bodies by 2015 and 40 % by 2020. It called on the Commission, if the steps taken by companies and the Member States were found to be inadequate, to propose legislation by 2012, including quotas. The European Parliament reiterated that call for legislation in its resolution of 13 March 2012 on equality between women and men in the Union.

(9)

(10) Europe has a large pool of highly qualified women. Improving the gender balance on company boards is essential for making more efficient use of existing human capital, which is key to addressing the Union's demographic challenges. Moreover, it is widely acknowledged that the presence of women in the boardroom improves corporate governance and numerous studies have shown a positive correlation between gender diversity at the top management level and a company's financial performance and profitability. Despite evidence of the beneficial impact of gender balance on companies themselves and the economy in general, and despite the existing Union legislation prohibiting sex discrimination and Union-level actions encouraging self-regulation, women continue to be vastly outnumbered by men in the highest decision-making bodies of companies throughout the Union. In the private sector and especially in listed companies, this gender imbalance is particularly significant and acute.

(10a) The Commission's key indicator of gender representation on corporate boards shows that the proportion of women involved in top-level business decision-making remains very low. According to the Commission's Report on Progress on Equality between Women and Men in 2013, women account for an average of 17.8 % of the members of boards of directors in the largest publicly listed companies, only 4.8 % of chairpersons, and 2.8 % of chief executive officers.

(10b) The Europe 2020 Strategy for Smart, Sustainable and Inclusive Growth recognised that increasing women's labour market participation is a precondition for boosting growth and for tackling demographic challenges in Europe. The Strategy set a headline target of reaching an employment rate of 75 % for women and men aged 20 to 64 years by 2020, which can only be reached if there is a clear commitment to gender equality and a reinforced effort to address all barriers to women's participation in the labour market. The recent economic crisis highlighted the Union's ever-growing need to rely on knowledge, competence and innovation and to make full use of the pool of available talent. Enhancing women's participation in economic decision-making, on company boards in particular, is expected to have a positive spill-over effect on women's employment in the companies concerned and throughout the whole economy.

(11) The proportion of women on company boards is progressing very slowly, with an average annual increase of just 0.6 percentage points during the past years. The rate of improvement has differed in Member States and has led to highly divergent results. Much more significant progress was noted in the Member States where binding measures have been introduced. That divergence is likely to increase given the very different approaches to ensuring a more balanced representation of women and men on boards.

(13) The current lack of transparency in the selection process and qualification criteria for board positions in most Member States represents a significant barrier to more gender diversity among board members and negatively affects both the board candidates' careers and freedom of movement, as well as investor decisions. Such lack of transparency prevents potential candidates for board positions from applying to boards where their qualifications would be most required and from challenging gender-biased appointment decisions, thus restricting their freedom of movement within the internal market. On the other hand, investors have different investment strategies that require information linked also to the expertise and competence of the board members. More transparency in the qualification criteria and the selection process for board members enables investors to better assess the company's business strategy and to take informed decisions.

(14) While this Directive does not aim to harmonise national laws on the selection process and qualification criteria for board positions in detail, the introduction of certain minimum standards as regards the requirement for listed companies without balanced gender representation to select candidates for election or appointment to the posts of non-executive directors on the basis of an objective comparative assessment of their qualifications in terms of suitability, competence and professional performance is necessary for improving the gender balance. Only a measure at Union level can effectively help to ensure a competitive level-playing field throughout the Union and avoid practical complications in business life.

- (16) The Union should therefore aim to increase the presence of women on company boards, in order both to boost economic growth and the competitiveness of European companies and to achieve effective gender equality on the labour market. This aim should be pursued through minimum requirements on positive action in the form of binding measures aiming at attaining a quantitative objective for the gender composition of boards of listed companies, in view of the fact that Member States and other countries which have chosen this or a similar method have achieved the best results in ensuring a more balanced representation of women and men in economic decision-making positions.
- (17) Companies listed on stock exchanges have a particular economic importance, visibility and impact on the market as a whole. These companies set standards for the wider economy and their practices can be expected to be followed by other types of companies. The public nature of the listed companies justifies their being regulated to a greater extent in the public interest.
- (17a) The measures provided for in this Directive should apply to listed companies, which are defined as companies having their registered office in a Member State and whose shares are admitted to trading on a regulated market within the meaning of Directive 2004/39/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council,⁵ in one or more Member States. This Directive does not affect the existing legislation on determining the seat of a listed company.
- (17b) For the purposes of the implementation of this Directive the Member State competent to regulate the matters under this Directive should be the Member State in which the listed company in question has its registered office, rather than the Member State on whose regulated market the listed company trades its shares. The applicable law should be the law of the Member State in which the listed company has its registered office.

- (18) This Directive should not apply to small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), as defined by Commission Recommendation 2003/361/EC of 6 May 2003 concerning the definition of micro, small and medium-sized enterprises⁶.
- (19) There are various systems of board structures for listed companies in the Member States, the main distinction being between a dual with both a management board and a supervisory board ('two-tier system') and a unitary combining the management and supervisory functions in a single board ('one-tier system'). There are also mixed systems, which feature aspects of both systems or give companies an option between different models. This Directive should apply to all board systems in the Member States.
- (20) All board systems distinguish, de jure or de facto, between executive directors, who are involved in the daily management of the company, and non-executive directors who are not involved in the daily management but do perform a supervisory function. This Directive aims to improve the gender balance among both categories. In order to strike the right balance between the need to increase the gender diversity of boards and the need to minimise interference with the day-to-day management of a company, this Directive distinguishes between the two categories of Director.
- (21) The quantitative objectives provided for in this Directive should apply to all non-executive directors. In several Member States, a certain proportion of the non-executive directors can or must be appointed or elected by the company's workforce and/or by employee organisations pursuant to national law or practice. The quantitative objectives should also apply to these directors. However, in view of the fact that some non-executive directors are employee representatives, the means for ensuring that those objectives are attained should be defined by the Member States concerned, with due regard to the specific rules for the election or designation of employee representatives as laid down in Member States' legislation and respect the freedom of vote in the election of employee representatives.

- (22) Listed companies in the Union should aim to attain the objective of having at least 40 % of non-executive directors of the under-represented sex no later than 1 January 2020.
- Alternatively, since listed companies should aim to increase the proportion of the under-represented sex in all decision-making positions, Member States may provide that listed companies may aim to attain the objective that members of the under-represented sex hold at least 33 % of all director positions, irrespective of whether they are executive or non-executive. These objectives concern the overall gender diversity among directors and do not interfere with the concrete choice of individual directors from a wide pool of male and female candidates in each individual case. In particular, this Directive does not exclude any particular candidates for director positions, nor does it impose any individual directors on companies or shareholders. It respects the shareholders' rights and the freedom of vote at the assembly of shareholders. The decision on the appropriate board members thus remains with the companies and shareholders.
- (23)
- (24) Determining the number of director positions necessary to attain the objectives requires further specification since, given the size of most boards, it is not possible mathematically to attain the exact share of 40 % or, where applicable, 33 %. Therefore, the number of board positions necessary to meet the objective should be the number closest to 40 %, or, where applicable, 33 %, and in both cases should be less than 50 %.
- (24a) Since the gender composition of the workforce may have a direct impact on the availability of candidates of the under-represented sex, Member States may provide that the quantitative objectives concerning the representation of men and women among directors laid down in this Directive do not apply to listed companies where the members of the under-represented sex make up less than 10 % of the employees. Such companies should nevertheless set their own quantitative objectives regarding gender-balanced representation of both sexes among all director positions and aim to attain those objectives by 1 January 2020.

- (25) In its case-law on positive action and the compatibility thereof with the principle of non-discrimination based on sex (now also laid down in Article 21 of the Charter), the Court of Justice of the European Union accepted that priority may in certain cases be given to the under-represented sex in selection for employment or promotion, provided that the candidate of the under-represented sex is equally qualified as compared with the competitor of the other sex in terms of suitability, competence and professional performance, that the priority is not automatic and unconditional but may be overridden if reasons specific to an individual candidate of the other sex tilt the balance in that candidate's favour, and that the application of each candidate is the subject of an objective assessment which specifically applies all the selection criteria to the individual candidates.⁷
- (26) In line with that case-law, Member States should ensure that those listed companies on whose boards members of the under-represented sex hold less than 40 % of non-executive director positions, or less than 33 % of all director positions, respectively, carry out the selection of the best qualified candidates for election or appointment to those positions on the basis of a comparative analysis of the qualifications of candidates by applying clear, neutrally formulated and unambiguous criteria established at the beginning of the selection process, with a view to attaining the said percentage no later than 1 January 2020. Examples of types of selection criteria that listed companies could apply include professional experience in managerial and/or supervisory tasks, knowledge in specific relevant areas such as finance, controlling or human resources management, leadership and communication skills and networking abilities.

⁷ C-450/93 Kalanke [1995] ECR I-3051, C-409/95 Marschall [1997] ECR I-6363, C-158/97 Badeck [2000] ECR I-1875, C-407/98 Abrahamsson [2000] ECR I-5539.

- (27) The methods of selecting candidates for appointment or election to the posts of directors differ from one Member State to another and from one company to another. They may involve the pre-selection of candidates to be presented to the shareholders' assembly, for example by a nomination committee or by executive search firms. The requirements concerning the selection of candidates should be met at the appropriate stage of the selection process in accordance with national law and the articles of association of the listed companies concerned, prior to the election of a candidate by shareholders, for example while preparing a shortlist. In this respect, this Directive only establishes minimum standards for the process of selection of candidates for appointment or election to the posts, making it possible to apply the conditions provided for by the case-law of the Court of Justice with a view to attaining the objective of a more balanced representation of women and men on boards of listed companies. This Directive respects the shareholders' rights and the freedom of vote at the assembly of shareholders.
- (28) In view of the objectives of this Directive, listed companies should be required upon the request of a candidate, to inform that candidate of the qualification criteria upon which the selection was based, the objective comparative assessment of those criteria and, where relevant, the considerations tilting the balance in favour of a candidate who is not of the under-represented sex. It is conceivable that the information requirement might constitute a limitation to the right to respect for private life. However, these limitations to the right to respect for private life with regard to the processing of personal data, recognised by Articles 7 and 8 of the Charter are necessary and, in conformity with the principle of proportionality, genuinely meet recognised objectives of general interest. They are therefore in line with the requirements for such limitations laid down in Article 52(1) of the Charter and with the relevant case-law of the Court of Justice and should be applied in compliance with the provisions of Directive 95/46/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council⁸.

⁸ Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council of 24 October 1995 on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data (OJ L 281, 23.11.1995, p.31).

- (29) Where a candidate of the under-represented sex establishes the presumption that they were equally qualified as compared with the selected candidate of the other sex, the listed company should be required to demonstrate the correctness of the choice.
- (29a) In certain Member States, measures may have already been taken or may yet be taken providing for equally effective⁹ means to ensure a more balanced representation of women and men on the boards of listed companies or there may be evidence of progress coming close to the objectives set by this Directive, before the deadline for its implementation. For those Member States the requirements relating to the process of selection of candidates may be suspended.
- (29b) With a view also to improving the gender balance among directors involved in daily management tasks, listed companies should be required to set individual quantitative objectives regarding a more balanced representation of both sexes among executive directors, with the aim of attaining such objectives by the date set out in this Directive. These objectives should help companies to achieve tangible progress as compared with their current situation. This obligation should not apply to listed companies which pursue the objective of 33 % relating to all directors, whether executive or non-executive.
- (29d) Member States should require listed companies to provide information on the gender composition of their boards as well as information on the measures taken with a view to attaining the objectives laid down in this Directive, on a yearly basis to the competent national authorities in order to enable them to assess the progress of each listed company towards a more balanced representation of men and women among directors. Such information should be published by listed companies in an appropriate and accessible manner on their websites. Where a listed company has not met the applicable quantitative objectives, such information should also include a description of the measures that the company intends to take in the future in order to meet the objectives.

⁹ ES: concerns over the notion of equal effectiveness.

(30) The obligations relating to the process of selection of candidates for appointment or election, the obligation to set a voluntary target in relation to executive directors, and reporting obligations should be enforced by measures which are effective, proportionate and dissuasive. Without prejudice to national law on the imposition of enforcement measures, as long as listed companies comply with those obligations, they should not be penalised for failing to attain the quantitative objectives concerning the representation of men and women among directors. Enforcement measures should not be applied to listed companies themselves if under national law a given action or omission is not attributable to the company, but to other natural or legal persons such as individual shareholders.

(33)

(35b) Member States or listed companies may introduce or maintain more favourable measures to ensure a more balanced representation of men and women.

(36) This Directive respects fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised by the Charter. In particular, it contributes to the fulfilment of the right to equality between women and men (Article 23 of the Charter), the right to freedom to choose an occupation and the right to engage in work (Article 15 of the Charter). This Directive seeks to ensure full respect for the right to an effective remedy and a fair hearing (Article 47 of the Charter). The limitations on the exercise of the freedom to conduct business (Article 16 of the Charter) and of the right to property (Article 17(1) of the Charter) respect the essence of those rights and freedoms and are necessary and proportionate. They genuinely meet objectives of general interest recognised by the Union and the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.

- (37) While some Member States have taken regulatory action or encouraged self-regulation with mixed results, the majority of Member States have not taken action or indicated their willingness to act in a way that would bring about sufficient improvement. Projections based on a comprehensive analysis of all available information on past and current trends as well as intentions show that a balanced representation of women and men among board members across the Union in line with the objectives set out in this Directive will not be attained by Member States acting individually at any point in the foreseeable future. In the light of those circumstances and given the growing discrepancies between Member States in terms of the representation of women and men on company boards, the gender balance on corporate boards across the Union can only be improved through a common approach, and the potential for gender equality, competitiveness and growth can be better achieved through coordinated action at Union level rather than through national initiatives of varying scope, ambition and effectiveness.
- (38) Since the objectives of this Directive cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States and can, therefore, by reason of the scale and effect of action, be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on European Union.¹⁰ In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that same Article, this Directive is limited to setting common objectives and principles and does not go beyond what is necessary in order to attain those objectives. Member States are given sufficient freedom to determine how the objectives laid down in this Directive should best be attained taking national circumstances into account, in particular rules and practices concerning recruitment to board positions. This Directive does not interfere with the possibility for listed companies to appoint the most qualified board members, and it grants a sufficiently long period of adaptation.

¹⁰ Cion: return this sentence to Recital 37, which concerns the principle of subsidiarity. Chair: will reflect.

- (39) In accordance with the principle of proportionality, the objective to be met by listed companies should be limited in time and remain in force only until sustainable progress has been achieved in the gender composition of boards. For that reason, the Commission should regularly review the application of this Directive and report to the European Parliament and the Council. Furthermore, this Directive provides for an expiry date. The Commission should assess, in its review, if there is a need to extend the duration of the Directive beyond that period.
- (40) In accordance with the Joint Political Declaration of Member States and the Commission of 28 September 2011 on explanatory documents,¹¹ Member States have undertaken, in justified cases, to accompany the notification of their transposition measures with one or more documents explaining the relationship between the components of a directive and the corresponding parts of national transposition instruments. With regard to this Directive, the legislator considers the transmission of such documents to be justified,

HAVE ADOPTED THIS DIRECTIVE:

1. Member States shall ensure that listed companies:

(a) aim to attain, by 1 January 2020, the objective that members of the under-represented sex hold at least 40 % of non-executive director positions

or

(b) aim to attain, by 1 January 2020, the objective that members of the under-represented sex hold at least 33% of all director positions, including both executive and non-executive directors

1b.

¹² BE: aim of Directive is not full balance but an improved balance. Chair: will reflect.

2. The number of non-executive director positions that shall be deemed necessary to attain the objective laid down in paragraph 1(a) shall be the number closest to the proportion of 40 %, but less than 50 %, while the number of all director positions that shall be deemed necessary to attain the objective laid down in paragraph 1(b), shall be the number closest to the proportion of 33 %, but less than 50%. Those numbers are set out in the Annex.
- 3.
- 4.
- 5.
6. Member States may provide that listed companies in which the members of the under-represented sex represent less than 10 % of the employees are not subject to the provisions laid down in this Article.
- 7.

Article 4a

Means to attain the objectives

1. Member States shall ensure that, with the aim of attaining the objective laid down in Article 4(1) [...], in listed companies which do not meet those objectives the selection of candidates for appointment or election to the positions referred to in Article 4(1) [...] is carried out on the basis of a comparative analysis of the qualifications of each candidate, by applying clear, neutrally formulated and unambiguous criteria established in advance of the selection process.

2. In the selection of candidates for appointment or election to the positions referred to in Article 4(1) [...], Member States shall ensure that, when choosing between candidates who are equally qualified in terms of suitability, competence and professional performance, priority shall be given to the candidate of the under-represented sex, unless an objective assessment taking account of all criteria specific to the individual candidates tilts the balance in favour of the candidate of the other sex.
3. While respecting the provisions of Directive 95/46/EC, Member States shall ensure that, in response to a request from a candidate who has been considered in the selection for appointment or election, listed companies are obliged to inform that candidate of the following:
 - (a) the qualification criteria upon which the selection was based,
 - (b) the objective comparative assessment of those criteria, and,
 - (c) where relevant, the considerations tilting the balance in favour of a candidate of the other sex.
4. Member States shall take the necessary measures, in accordance with their national judicial systems, to ensure that where a candidate of the under-represented sex establishes facts from which it may be presumed that he or she was equally qualified as compared with the candidate of the other sex selected for appointment or election, it shall be for the listed company to prove that there has been no breach of Article 4a(2).

Article 4b

Suspension of the application of Article 4a
