Subject:	Proposal for a DIRECTIVE OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL amending Directive (EU) 2017/1132 as regards cross-border conversions, mergers and divisions

I. INTRODUCTION

1. On 25 April 2018, the Commission adopted the "Company Law package", which consists of two proposals for Directives amending Directive (EU) 2017/1132: a Directive on the use of digital tools and processes in company law and a Directive on cross-border conversions, mergers and divisions. The package aims to facilitate the use of digital technologies throughout a company's lifecycle and cross-border conversions, mergers and divisions.

2. The "mobility" proposal aims to provide specific and comprehensive procedures for cross-border conversions, mergers and divisions to foster cross-border mobility while, at the same time, offering adequate protection to company stakeholders in order to safeguard the fairness of the Single Market. At this point, only mergers are covered by EU law for cross-border operations. The jurisprudence Polbud from October 2017 reaffirmed the absolute nature of the freedom of establishment and confirmed the limited scope of possible derogations on the grounds of public order. The aim of this proposal is to reinstate a predictable framework, legal certainty and create common standards of procedures for assessing cross-border operations in the EU. Main elements of the proposal that required technical work are the alignment and consistency between the three types of the cross-border operations; the protection of members and employees; as well as the protection of creditors, in particular the applicable law and jurisdiction.

II. STATE OF PLAY

3. The Working Party on Company Law examined the proposal at eleven occasions during the Bulgarian, Austrian and Romanian Presidencies.
4. The European Parliament adopted the JURI Committee report during the Plenary on 15 January 2019. The Rapporteur Ms REGNER (S&D/AT) was granted a mandate to start negotiations with the Council on this basis.
5. Although there remain a number of technical adjustments that delegations would like to see integrated in the text, there was broad support at the Working Party on Company Law (Attachés) on 24 January 2019 to move this text forward considering the tight deadlines. In view of this support and of reaching a possible rapid agreement with the European Parliament, the Presidency submits to this Committee, in the Annex to this Note, a compromise package. Changes are compared to doc. 5380/1/19 REV 1 and marked in bold underlined and ~~striketrough~~. The latest elements of the compromise package are explained under Section III. The Presidency considers this text could provide the basis for finding a qualitative overall compromise package agreement with the European Parliament.
6. FR, UK entered a parliamentary scrutiny reservation.

III. MAIN ISSUES/ LATEST ELEMENTS OF THE COMPROMISE PROPOSAL

7. Scope ( Articles 86c, 120, 160c), recital (11): a number of delegations wished a wider opt-out by addressing directly the situation of the voluntary liquidation in cross-border mergers and divisions and that of companies which are subject to crisis prevention measures dealt with by the Resolution Directive 2014/59/EU. Some other delegations preferred that the current approach in mergers be reflected while in the same time allowing greater flexibility for the Member States to accommodate other procedures in the scope of this Directive. The Presidency tried to find a balanced compromise, narrowing the exceptions from the scope to companies that are in liquidation and have begun to distribute their assets.

8. Protection of members (Articles 86j, 126a, 160l, recitals (20)-(25)): this issue was discussed at length in many Working Party meetings. The Presidency compromise proposal presented at the Working Party meeting on 7 January 2019 (doc. 15678/18), which was largely accepted by Member States. During that Working Party meeting, most delegations supported the option reflected in the Annex to this Note as regards the applicable law and jurisdiction in case of a challenge of the share exchange ratio in cross-border mergers and divisions. This option follows the principle deriving from the current Article 127(3) of Directive (EU) 2017/1132 taking into account that the alignment to the existing rules in cross-border mergers was frequently pointed out as being important for delegations. Further flexibility has been added to the exit right regime in respect of cash compensation .

9. Protection of creditors (Article 86k, recitals (26)-(29)): it has been clarified in Article 86k paragraph 4 as well as in Recitals (20) to (25) that despite the fact that the cross-border conversion has taken effect and the registered office of the company has been transferred to the Member State of destination, creditors with claims antedating the disclosure of the draft terms which have not fallen due at the time of disclosure would have a choice to file their claim in the jurisdiction in the Member State of departure (i.e. where the registered office was situated prior to the cross-border conversion) or follow rules on jurisdiction laid down in Brussels Ia Regulation.

Following the suggestion of delegations, the scope of the provisions was widened so as to provide the same regime for all creditors whose claims antedate the disclosure of the draft-terms. Following the opinion of Legal Service of the Council, a solution on an alternative jurisdiction was created, which is in accordance with Brussels Ia Regulation.

Furthermore, the question of balance between the company's interest in detaching from a Member State and protection of creditors was answered, as some delegations suggested, by providing a shorter period available to creditors for making use of their national jurisdiction.

IV. OTHER ISSUES

10. Employee participation (Articles 86l, 133, 160n, recital (30)): a few delegations would have preferred keeping the Commission proposal. This was however not supported by the vast majority of delegations.
11. Minimal standards for the Liability of independent expert (Articles 86t, 133a, 160v): these were reintroduced, taking into consideration the positions expressed at the last Working Party meeting by some delegations that the national legislation already regulating these aspects should be sufficient and remain applicable.

IV. CONCLUSION

The Permanent Representatives Committee is invited to mandate the Presidency to start negotiations with the European Parliament with a view to reaching a first reading agreement on the basis of the compromise package as set out in the Annex.

Proposal for a

DIRECTIVE OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL

amending Directive (EU) 2017/1132 as regards cross-border conversions, mergers and divisions

(Text with EEA relevance)

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 50 (1) and (2) thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee<sup>1</sup>,

Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,

Whereas:

- (1) The Directive (EU) 2017/1132 of the European Parliament and of the Council regulates cross-border mergers of limited liability companies. These rules represent a significant milestone in improving the functioning of the Single Market for companies and firms and to exercise the freedom of establishment. However, evaluation of these rules shows that there is a need for modifications in cross-border merger rules. Furthermore, it is appropriate to provide for rules regulating cross-border conversions and divisions, since Directive (EU) 2017/1132 only provides rules for domestic divisions of public limited liability companies.

- (2) Freedom of establishment is one of the fundamental principles of Union law. Under the second paragraph of Article 49 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union ('TFEU'), when read in conjunction with Article 54 of the TFEU, the freedom of establishment for companies or firms includes, inter alia, the right to form and manage such companies or firms under the conditions laid down by the legislation of the Member State of establishment. This has been interpreted by the Court of Justice of the European Union as encompassing the right of a company or firm formed in accordance with the legislation of a Member State to convert itself into a company or firm governed by the law of another Member State, provided that the conditions laid down by the legislation of that other Member State are satisfied and, in particular, that the test adopted by the latter Member State to determine the connection of a company or firm to its national legal order is satisfied.
- (3) In the absence of harmonisation of Union law, the definition of the connecting factor that determines the national law applicable to a company or firm falls, in accordance with Article 54 of the TFEU, within the competence of each Member State to define. Article 54 of the TFEU places the connecting factors of the registered office, the central administration and the principal place of business of a company or firm at the equal footing. Therefore, as clarified in case-law, the fact that only the registered office (and not the central administration or principal place of business) is transferred does not as such exclude the applicability of the freedom of establishment under Article 49 of the TFEU.
- (4) These developments in the case-law have opened up new opportunities for companies in the Single Market in order to foster economic growth, effective competition and productivity. At the same time, the objective of a Single Market without internal borders for companies must also be reconciled with other objectives of European integration such as social protection (in particular the protection of employees), the protection of creditors and the protection of members.

- (5) The lack of a legal framework on cross-border conversions and divisions leads to legal fragmentation and legal uncertainty, and thus to barriers to the exercise of the freedom of establishment. It also leads to a suboptimal protection of employees, creditors and minority members within the Single Market.
- (6) deleted
- (7) The European Parliament has called upon the Commission to adopt harmonised rules on cross-border conversions and divisions. A harmonised legal framework would further contribute to the removal of restrictions on the freedom of establishment whilst at the same time providing adequate protection for stakeholders such as employees, creditors and members.
- (8) As regards the existing rules on cross-border mergers, the Commission announced in its Communication entitled ‘Upgrading the Single Market: more opportunities for people and business’, that it would assess the need to update those rules in order to make it easier for SMEs to choose their preferred business strategy and to better adapt to changes in market conditions, whilst at the same time not weakening the existing employment protection. In its Communication entitled ‘Commission Work Programme 2017 Delivering a Europe that protects, empowers and defends’, the Commission announced an initiative to facilitate the implementation of cross-border mergers.
- (9) Besides the new rules on conversions this Directive lays down rules on cross-border divisions, both for partial and full divisions, but only through the formation of new companies. This Directive does not provide a harmonised framework for cross-border divisions in which a company transfers assets and liabilities to more than one existing company as these instances had been viewed as being very complex, requiring the involvement of competent authorities from several Member States and entailing additional risks in terms of the circumvention of national and EU-rules. The possibility to form a company through a division by separation as provided for in this Directive offers companies a new harmonised procedure in the Single Market, however, companies should be free to directly set up subsidiaries in other Member States.

(10) deleted

(11) This Directive should not apply to companies in liquidation where the distribution of assets has begun. In addition, Member States may decide also to exclude companies subject to other liquidation proceedings. Member States should also be able to choose not to apply this Directive to companies subject to insolvency proceedings, as defined by the national law, or to preventive restructuring frameworks, as defined by the national law, no matter whether such proceedings are part of a national insolvency framework or regulated outside of it, and to companies subject to crisis prevention measures in the meaning of Directive 2014/59/EU. This Directive should be without prejudice to the Directive on preventive restructuring frameworks, second chance and measures to increase the efficiency of restructuring, insolvency and discharge procedures.

(12) Given the complexity of cross-border conversions, mergers or divisions (hereinafter referred to as cross-border operations) and the multitude of the interests concerned, it is appropriate to provide for a scrutiny of the legality of the cross-border operation before it takes effect in order to create legal certainty. To that effect, the competent authorities of the Member States involved should ensure that a decision on the approval of a cross-border operation is taken in a fair, objective and non-discriminatory manner on the basis of all elements required by national and EU law.

(13) To allow all stakeholders' legitimate interests to be taken into account in the procedure governing a cross-border operation, the company should disclose the draft terms of the proposed operation containing the most important information about it. Such information should at least include the envisaged legal form of the company or companies, the instrument of constitution, where applicable, the statutes and details of the safeguards offered to members and creditors. Member States may among others require that the draft terms include information on the reasons for the planned operation. In that respect information on the head office, the place of effective management and the place of significant economic activity of the company can be of a special interest. Member States may also decide that the independent expert report and a notice to the stakeholders inviting them to submit comments on the proposed cross-border operation are disclosed.

(13a) deleted

(14) In order to provide information to its members, the company carrying out the cross-border operation should prepare a report for members. The report should explain the legal and economic aspects of the proposed cross-border operation, in particular the implications of the cross-border operation for members with regard to the future business of the company. It should also include potential remedies available to members, especially information about their exit right. This report should also be made available to the employees of the company carrying out the cross-border operation.

- (15) In order to provide information to its employees, the company carrying out the cross-border operation should prepare a report explaining the implications of the proposed cross-border operation for employees. The report should explain in particular the implications of the proposed cross-border operation on the employment situation, whether there would be any material change in the employment relationships and the locations of the companies' places of business and how each of these factors would affect any subsidiaries of the company. This requirement should not however apply where the only employees of the company are in its administrative organ. Furthermore, in order to enhance the protection afforded to the employees, employees or their representatives should be able to provide their opinion on the report setting out the implications of the cross-border operation for them. The provision of the report and the possibility to provide an opinion should be without prejudice to the applicable information and consultation proceedings instituted at national level including those following the implementation of Directive 2002/14/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council or Directive 2009/38/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council .This report should also be available to the members of that company.
- (16) In order to alleviate the administrative burden for companies, the companies should be allowed to combine the reports to members and employees and draw up a single report containing all the required information and explanations.
- (17) The draft terms of cross-border operation, the offer of cash compensation by the company to those members who wish to exit the company and, where applicable, the share-exchange ratio including the amount of a possible complementary cash payment included in the draft terms should be examined by an expert who is independent from the company. With regard to the independence of the expert, Member States should take into account the principles laid down in Articles 22 and 22b of Directive 2006/43/EC.

(18) The information disclosed by the company should be comprehensive and make it possible for stakeholders to assess the implications of the intended cross-border operation. However, companies should not be obliged to disclose confidential information, the disclosure of which would be prejudicial to their business position. Such non-disclosure should not undermine the other requirements under this Directive.

~~(18a) This Directive does not aim to reduce the level of protection of holders of securities other than shares in comparison to that provided for in EU law in the case of domestic merger and division. Therefore, the provisions of this Directive concerning members of the company should be deemed as extended to the holders of securities other than shares, if this is consistent with the provisions of EU law related to domestic merger and division.~~

(19) On the basis of the draft terms and the reports, the general meeting of the members of the company or companies should decide on whether or not to approve those draft terms and the necessary amendments to the instruments of constitution, including the statutes. It is important that the majority requirement for such a vote should be sufficiently high in order to ensure that the decision is based on a solid majority. In addition, members should also have the right to vote on any arrangements concerning employee participation, if they have reserved that right during the general meeting.

(20) The lack of harmonisation of safeguards for members has been identified as an obstacle for cross border operations. Companies and members face a wide variety of different forms of protection leading to complexity and legal uncertainty. Members should, therefore, be offered the same minimum level of protection regardless of the Member State in which the company is situated. Member States may therefore maintain or introduce additional protection rules for members, unless they are in conflict with those provided by this Directive or with the freedom of establishment. Members' individual rights to information remain unaffected.

- (21) As a consequence of a cross-border operation, members often face a situation whereby the law applicable to their rights would change, because they would become members in a company governed by the law of a Member State other than the law applicable to the company before the operation. Therefore, Member States should, at least, offer the right to exit the company and receive a cash compensation for their shares equivalent to their value for members holding shares with voting rights and who voted against the approval of the draft terms. However, Member States may decide to offer this right also to other members, for example for members holding shares without voting rights or members who, as a result of a cross-border division, would acquire shares in the company in different proportions than what they held before the operation or to members for whom there was no change of applicable law but for whom certain rights have changed due to the operation.
- (23) Companies should be able to estimate, to the extent possible, the costs related to the cross-border operation. Members should therefore be required to declare to the company, whether they exercise the right to dispose of their shares. This should be without prejudice to any formal requirements set up by national law. Members could also be required to indicate together with the declaration or within a specific time limit, whether they intend to challenge the offered cash compensation and demand additional cash compensation.
- (24) The calculation of the offer of cash compensation should be based on generally accepted valuation methods. Members should have a right to challenge the calculation and question the adequacy of the cash compensation before a competent administrative or judicial authority or a body mandated under national law including arbitral tribunals. Member States should be able to provide that members who have exercised the right to dispose of the shares are entitled to join the proceedings and Member States should be able to establish time limits for doing it in national law.

- (25) In case of a cross-border merger or division, members who did not have or did not exercise an exit right should, however, have a right to challenge the share exchange ratio. When assessing the adequacy of the share-exchange ratio, the competent administrative or judicial authority or a body mandated under national law should also take into account the amount of a possible complementary cash payment included in the draft terms. ~~When a merger takes effect, a succession in the pending proceedings occurs, and the company arising from the merger takes the place of the company being acquired. Consequently, the judicial proceedings shall continue with the acquiring company.~~
- (26) Following a cross-border operation, the former creditors of the company or companies carrying out that operation may see their claims affected where the company which is liable for the debt is thereafter governed by the law of another Member State. Currently, creditor protection rules vary across Member States which adds significant complexity to the cross-border operation process and leads to uncertainty both for the companies involved and for their creditors in relation to the recovery or satisfaction of their claim.
- (27) In order to guarantee the appropriate protection of creditors in cases where they are not satisfied with the protection offered by the company in the draft terms, and where they may not have found a satisfactory solution with the company, creditors may apply for safeguards to the competent authority. When assessing these safeguards, the appropriate authority should take into account whether the creditor's claim against the company or a third party is of at least equivalent value and of a commensurate credit quality as before the cross-border operation and whether the claim may be brought in the same jurisdiction.

- (28) Member States should ensure adequate protection for those creditors, who entered into a relationship with the company before the company had made public its intention to carry out a cross-border operation. In addition to the general rules set out in the Brussels Ia Regulation, Member States should therefore provide that such creditors should have the choice of filing a claim in the departure Member States for a period of two years after the disclosure of the draft terms of the cross-border conversion .After the draft terms have been disclosed, creditors should be able to take into account the potential impact of the change of jurisdiction and applicable law as a result of the cross-border operation. Creditors of a company to be protected could also be active and former employees with occupational vested pension rights and persons receiving occupational pension benefits. Also, the two year protection measure envisaged by this directive with respect to the jurisdiction to which creditors whose claims antedate the disclosure of the draft-terms of the cross-border conversion may apply, shall be without prejudice to national law determining the statute of limitations of claims.
- (29) In addition, in order to protect the creditors against the risk of insolvency of the company following the cross-border operation, Member States should be allowed to require the company or companies to make a declaration of solvency stating that they are not aware of any reason why the company or companies resulting from the cross-border operation should not be able to meet their liabilities. In those circumstances, Member States should be able to make the members of the management organ personally liable for the accuracy of that declaration. As legal traditions vary amongst Member States with regard to the use of solvency declarations and their possible consequences, it should be up to Member States to draw appropriate consequences for providing inaccurate or misleading declarations, including effective and proportionate sanctions and liabilities in compliance with Union law.

(30) In order to ensure that employee participation is not unduly prejudiced as a result of the cross-border operation, where the company carrying out the cross-border operation has implemented an employee participation system, the company or companies resulting from the cross-border operation should be obliged to take a legal form allowing for the exercise of such participation, including through the presence of representatives of the employees in the appropriate management or supervisory organ of the company or companies. Moreover, in such a case, where a bona fide negotiation between the company and its employees takes place, it should be carried out along the lines of the procedure provided for in Directive 2001/86/EC, with a view to finding an amicable solution reconciling the right of the company to carry out a cross-border operation with the employees' rights of participation. As a result of those negotiations, either a bespoke and agreed solution or, in the absence of an agreement, the application of standard rules as set out in the Annex to Directive 2001/86/EC should apply, mutatis mutandis. In order to protect either the agreed solution or the application of those standard rules, the company should not be able to remove the participation rights through carrying out subsequent domestic or cross-border conversion, merger or division within three years.

(31) deleted

(32) To ensure a proper allocation of tasks among Member States and an efficient and effective ex-ante control of cross-border operations, the competent authorities of the Member States of the company or companies carrying out the cross-border operation should have the power to issue a pre-conversion, pre-merger or pre-division certificate (herein referred to as 'pre-operation certificate'). Without such a certificate the competent authorities of the Member States of the converted company or of the company or companies resulting from the cross-border operation should not be able to complete the cross-border operation procedures.

- (33) In order to issue the pre-operation certificate the Member States of the company or companies carrying out the cross-border operation should designate, in accordance with national law, an authority or several authorities competent to scrutinise the legality of the operation. The competent authority or authorities may comprise: courts, notaries or other authorities or bodies a tax authority or financial service authority. The competent authority or authorities should assess the compliance with all relevant conditions and the proper completion of all procedures and formalities in that Member State and should ~~normally~~ decide whether to issue a pre-operation certificate, ~~normally~~ within three months of the application by the company, unless the examination requires further inquiries or assessment of relevant facts. The competent authority should be able to receive the application for the pre-conversion certificate, including submission of any information and documents, online, unless exceptionally technically impossible for the authority. Member States should be able to stipulate which are the possible consequences on the issuance on the pre-operation certificate of the procedures initiated by members and creditors in accordance with this Directive.
- (34) The right of companies to carry out a cross-border operation may, in certain circumstances, be used for abusive or fraudulent purposes such as for circumvention of the rights of employees, social security payments or tax obligations or for criminal purposes. Since it may be difficult to establish the abusive or fraudulent nature of the operation ex ante, it should be left to Member States how to best tackle this risk. Member States may decide that their competent authorities should refuse to issue the pre-operation certificate where they find that the cross-border operation is to be set up for abusive or fraudulent purposes, leading or aimed to lead to the evasion or circumvention of national or EU law or for criminal purposes.

- (35) With a view to a possible refusal to issue the pre-operation certificate where a Member State finds that the cross-border operation is to be set up for abusive or fraudulent purposes, Member States may grant their competent authorities the power to carry out an in-depth assessment which may need more than three months to be completed. The competent authority should consider in its assessment all relevant facts and circumstances and may take into account, for instance, the characteristics of the establishment in the Member State in which the company or companies are to be registered after the cross-border operation, including the intent of the operation, the sector, the investment, the net turnover and profit or loss, number of employees, the composition of the balance sheet, the tax residence, the assets and their location, the habitual place of work of the employees and of specific groups of employees, the place where social contributions are due and the commercial risks assumed by the company or companies before and after the cross-border operation. All these elements should only be considered as indicative factors in the overall assessment and therefore should not be regarded in isolation. The competent authority may consider it as an indication of absence of circumstances leading to abuse or fraud if the cross-border operation results in having the place of the effective management and/or the economic activity of the company in the Member State, where the company or companies are to be registered after the cross-border operation.
- (36) Member States should provide for procedural safeguards, in particular for the possibility to review the decisions of the competent authorities in the proceedings concerning cross-border operations in line with the general principles of access to justice.
- (37) In order to provide for the appropriate level of transparency and use of digital tools and processes, the pre-operation certificates issued by the competent authorities in different Member States should be shared by means of the system of interconnection of business registers and should be made publically available. In accordance with the general principle underlying this Directive, such exchange of information should always be free of charge.

- (38) The carrying out of a cross-border conversion entails a change of the legal form for a company without losing its legal personality. However, neither a cross-border conversion nor a cross-border merger or division should lead to the circumvention of the requirements for incorporation in the Member State in which the company is to be registered after the operation. Such conditions, including the requirements to have the head office in the destination Member State and those relating to the disqualification of directors, should be fully respected by the company. However, in case of cross-border conversions, the application of such conditions by the destination Member State may not affect the continuity of the converted company's legal personality.
- (39) After having received a pre-operation certificate, and after verifying that the legal requirements of the Member State in which the company is to be registered after the operation are fulfilled, including the check whether the transaction constitutes a circumvention of national or EU law where such check is laid down in national law, the competent authorities should register the company in the business register of that Member State. Only after this registration should the competent authority of the former Member State of the company or companies carrying out the cross-border operation strike the company off its own register. It should not be possible for the competent authorities of the Member State in which the company is to be registered after the cross-border operation to challenge the information provided by the pre-operation certificate.
- (40) To enhance the transparency about the cross-border operations, it is important that the registers of the Member States involved contain necessary information from the other register or registers about the companies involved in the cross-border operation in order to be able to track the history of those companies. In particular, the file in the register of the company where it was registered prior to the cross-border operation should contain the new registration number of the company attributed to it after the cross-border operation. Similarly, the file in the register of the company where it was registered after the cross-border operation should contain the initial registration number of the company attributed to it prior to the cross-border operation.

- (41) As a consequence of the cross-border conversion, the converted company should retain its legal personality, its assets and liabilities and all rights and obligations, including rights and obligations arising from contracts, acts or omissions.
- (42) As a consequence of the cross-border merger, the assets and liabilities and all rights and obligations, including rights and obligations arising from contracts, acts or omissions should be transferred to the acquiring company or to the new company and the members of the merging companies, who do not exercise the exit-right, should become members of the acquiring or the new company respectively.
- (43) As a consequence of the cross-border division, the assets and liabilities of the company being divided should be transferred to the recipient companies in accordance with the allocation specified in the draft terms of division and the members of the company being divided who do not exercise the exit-right should become members of the recipient companies or remain members of the company being divided or should become members of both.
- (44) Any cross-border operation should be without prejudice to the liability for tax obligations related to the company's or companies' activity before that operation.
- (45) To guarantee the employees' rights other than rights of participation, Directive 2009/38/EC, Council Directive 98/59/EC, Directive 2001/23/EC, and Directive 2002/14/EC, are not affected by this Directive. National laws should also apply to matters outside the scope of this Directive such as tax or social security.
- (46) The provisions of this Directive do not affect the legal or administrative provisions, including the enforcement of tax rules in cross-border conversions, mergers and divisions, of national law relating to the taxes of Member States, or its territorial and administrative subdivisions.

- (47) This Directive is without prejudice to Council Directive (EU) 2016/1164 laying down rules against tax avoidance practices that directly affect the functioning of the internal market, Council Directive 2009/133/EC on the common system of taxation applicable to mergers, divisions, partial divisions, transfers of assets and exchanges of shares concerning companies of different Member States and to the transfer of the registered office of an SE or SCE between Member States, Council Directive (EU) 2015/2376 as regards mandatory automatic exchange of information on advance tax rulings and advance pricing arrangements between Member States, Council Directive (EU) 2016/881 on mandatory automatic exchange of information in the field of taxation and Council Directive (EU) 2018/822 as regards mandatory automatic exchange of information in the field of taxation in relation to reportable cross-border arrangements.
- (48) This Directive does not affect the provisions of Directive (EU) 2015/849 of the European Parliament and the Council addressing risks of money laundering and terrorist financing, in particular the obligations related to carrying out the appropriate customer due diligence measures on a risk-sensitive basis and to identifying and registering the beneficial owner of any newly created entity in the Member State of its incorporation.
- (49) The Directive does not affect Union legislation and national rules made or introduced pursuant to such Union legislation regulating transparency and rights of shareholders in listed companies.
- (50) This Directive does not affect Union legislation regulating credit intermediaries and other financial undertakings and national rules made or introduced pursuant to such Union legislation.
- (51) Since the objectives of this Directive, to facilitate and regulate cross-border conversions, mergers and divisions cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States, but can be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the TFEU. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Directive does not go beyond what is necessary to achieve those objectives.

- (52) This Directive respects the fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised in particular by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.
- (53) In accordance with the Joint Political Declaration of 28 September 2011 of Member States and the Commission on explanatory documents, Member States have undertaken to accompany, in justified cases, the notification of their transposition measures with one or more documents explaining the relationship between the components of a directive and the corresponding parts of national transposition instruments. With regard to this Directive, the legislator considers the transmission of such documents to be justified.
- (54) The Commission should carry out an evaluation of this Directive. Pursuant to paragraph 22 of the Interinstitutional Agreement between the European Parliament, the Council of the European Union and the European Commission on Better Law-Making of 13 April 2016 that evaluation should be based on the five criteria of efficiency, effectiveness, relevance, coherence and value added and should provide the basis for impact assessments of possible further measures.
- (55) Information should be collected in order to assess the performance of the legislation against the objectives it pursues and in order to inform an evaluation of the legislation in accordance with paragraph 22 of the Interinstitutional Agreement between the European Parliament, the Council of the European Union and the European Commission on Better Law-Making of 13 April 2016.
- (56) Directive (EU) 2017/1132 should therefore be amended accordingly.

HAVE ADOPTED THIS DIRECTIVE:

The declaration shall declare that, on the basis of the information available to the management or administrative organ of the merging companies at the date of that declaration, and having made reasonable enquiries, they are unaware of any reason why the company resulting from the merger would be unable to meet the liabilities when those liabilities fall due.
