REGULATION OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL

on structural measures improving the resilience of EU credit institutions

(Text with EEA relevance)

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 114 thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national Parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee¹,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Central Bank²,

After consulting the European Data Protection Supervisor³,

Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,

- (1) The Union's financial system includes over 8,000 banks of different sizes, corporate structures and business models, a few of which exist in the form of large banking groups carrying out an all-encompassing set of activities including a large amount of trading activities. Those groups comprise a complex web of legal entities and intra-group relationships. They are highly connected to each other through interbank borrowing and lending and through derivatives markets. The impact of possible failures of these large banks can be extremely widespread and significant.
- (2) The financial crisis has demonstrated the interconnected nature of Union banks and the resulting risk to the financial system. As a result, resolution has to date been challenging, involved entire banking groups, as opposed to only the non-viable parts, and has relied significantly on public support.
- (3) Since the start of the financial crisis, the Union and its Member States have engaged in a fundamental overhaul of bank regulation and supervision including the setup of the first steps towards a banking union. Given the depth of the financial crisis and the need to ensure that all banks can be resolved, there was a call for assessing whether more measures are necessary to further reduce the probability and impact of failure of the largest and most complex banks. A High-Level Expert Group ("HLEG") chaired by Erkki Liikanen was mandated for this purpose. The HLEG recommended the mandatory separation of proprietary trading and other high-risk trading activities into a separate legal entity within the banking group for the largest and most complex banks.

- (4) The on-going banking regulatory reform agenda will significantly increase the resilience of both individual banks and the banking sector as a whole. However, a limited subset of the largest and most complex Union banking groups still remain too-big-to-fail, too-big-to-save and too-complex to manage, supervise and resolve. Structural reform is therefore an important complement to other regulatory initiatives and measures, as it would offer one way of more directly addressing intra-group complexity, intra-group subsidies, and excessive risk-taking incentives in relation to proprietary trading and other trading activities. A number of Member States have adopted or are considering adopting measures to introduce structural reform in their respective banking systems.
- (5) On 3 July 2013, the European Parliament called on the Commission to provide for a principles-based approach to structural reform of the European banking sector.
- (6) The legal basis for this Regulation is Article 114(1) of the Treaty of the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU), which provides for the adoption of measures for the approximation of provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action in Member States which have as their object the establishment and functioning of the internal market.

- (7) Inconsistent national legislation that does not pursue the same policy goals in a manner that is compatible and equivalent with the mechanisms envisaged in this Regulation increases chances that capital movements decisions of market participants are negatively affected because different and inconsistent rules and practices may significantly raise operational costs for credit institutions that are operating across borders and hence lead to a less efficient allocation of resources and capital compared to a situation where capital movement is subject to similar and consistent rules. For the same reasons, different and inconsistent rules will also negatively affect decisions of market participants relating to where and how to provide cross-border financial services. Different and inconsistent rules may also unintentionally encourage geographic arbitrage. The movement of capital and the provision of cross-border services are essential elements for the proper functioning of the Union internal market. Without a Union-wide approach credit institutions will be forced to adapt their structure and operations along national boundaries, thereby making them even more complex and leading to increased fragmentation of the internal market. Inconsistent national legislation also undermines efforts to achieve a single rulebook applicable throughout the internal market
- (8) Harmonisation at Union level ensures that Union banking groups, many of which operate in several Member States, are regulated by a common framework of structural requirements and other prudential measures thereby avoiding competitive distortions, reducing regulatory complexity, avoiding unwarranted compliance costs for cross-border activities, promoting further integration in the Union market place and contributing to the elimination of opportunities for regulatory arbitrage.

- (9) Consistent with the goals of contributing to the functioning of the internal market in the light of the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality, and in order to take fully into account the different regulatory and business models across the Union, this Regulation should allow for two different methods to ensure that in appropriate circumstances trading activities are located in an entity legally, economically and operationally separate from the credit institution that carries out core retail banking activities, as long as both methods effectively achieve the aims of this Regulation. To that end, a competent authority should identify and separate proprietary trading from the remaining banking operation, to identify excessively risky trading activities and impose measures, including separation of those activities to address those excessive risks. Alternatively, Member States should be able to choose to ring-fence core retail banking activities in accordance with national law. Conversely, any discrepancy that might arise from the erroneous or inconsistent application of those methods, in particular by departing from the requirements that are laid down in that respect, could seriously hamper the efficiency of this Regulation. For this reason, the Commission should be empowered to monitor and assess the application of this provision by means of regular information from Member States. Such discrepancies might also preclude the proper application of the Regulation in cases involving credit institutions that are subject to different regimes. Therefore, this Regulation equally should lay down clear and comprehensive rules for such cases.

- (10) Taking into account its far-reaching consequences, when setting up a harmonised European regime on bank structural reform, special attention has to be paid to already existing regulatory approaches in the different Member States. This Regulation strikes the balance between taking into account existing national legislation and creating a common European approach without unnecessarily doubling regulatory burden for the banks affected. The way chosen is due to the special circumstances of this Regulation. It is in no way a precedent for future financial services regulation. Moreover, while allowing for two different methods in achieving some of its objectives, this Regulation remains applicable in its entirety and directly applicable in all Member States, and, therefore, it cannot be construed neither as providing for exemptions from some of its provisions nor as allowing for a differentiated geographical scope of its application.
- (11) In accordance with Article 4 (1)(i) of Regulation (EU) No 1024/2013 the ECB is empowered to carry out supervisory tasks in relation to structural changes required from credit institutions to prevent financial stress or failure when those tasks are explicitly stipulated by Union law for competent authorities.

- (12) This Regulation intends to reduce excessive risk taking as a result of trading activities and to shield institutions carrying out activities that deserve a public safety net from losses incurred as a result of other activities. It also intends to reduce interconnectedness among institutions. Necessary rules should therefore contribute to refocusing banks on their core relationship-oriented role of serving the real economy, and avoid that bank capital be excessively allocated to trading at the expense of lending to the non-financial economy. This Regulation should accordingly contribute to facilitating supervision, monitoring of credit institutions by market participants, reducing conflicts of interests within credit institutions and reducing distortions of competition in the market place.
- (13) This Regulation should apply only to credit institutions and groups with trading activities that meet thresholds set out therein. This is in line with the explicit intention to focus on a limited subset of the largest and most complex credit institutions and groups that, in spite of other Union legislative acts, remain too-big-to-fail, too-big-to-save and too complex to manage, supervise and resolve. This Regulation should accordingly only apply to those EU credit institutions and groups that either are deemed of global systemic importance or exceed certain relative and absolute accounting-based thresholds in terms of trading activity or absolute size. Assets and liabilities of insurance and reinsurance undertakings and non-financial undertakings should not be included in the calculation of the thresholds of the scope and these undertakings should therefore not be within the scope of this Regulation. Member States may decide to impose similar measures also on smaller credit institutions that are outside of the scope of this Regulation.

- (14) The territorial scope of this Regulation should be sufficiently wide in order to ensure that competition is not distorted and circumvention is prevented. However, if the subsidiaries of EU parents in third countries or EU branches of credit institutions established in third countries falling within the scope of this Regulation are subject to measures that in the opinion of the Commission are deemed to have equivalent effect to those set out in this Regulation, they should be exempted. Competent authorities should in addition be able to exempt foreign subsidiaries of groups with an EU parent if those are autonomous and if the impact of their failure would have limited effects on the group as a whole. Because this Regulation should protect eligible deposits from losses resulting from trading activities, it is reasonable that this Regulation exclude from its scope groups that contain at least one credit institution established in the Union and where on a consolidated group level total eligible deposits amount to a minimum or where the total eligible retail deposits are not significant.
- (15) Proprietary trading carried out in a group that contains credit institutions that take retail deposits should be carried out in a trading entity that is legally, economically and operationally separate from the core credit institutions, as such trading activities have limited or no added value for the public good and are inherently risky.

- (16) While some trading activities could be risky, trading activities are generally beneficial to the real economy and the public good, both in enabling banks to hedge the inherent risks in their businesses as well as enabling client activity. It is difficult to distinguish proprietary trading from other trading activities, especially market making. To overcome this difficulty and to dissuade core credit institutions from engaging in proprietary trading, core credit institutions should provide detailed reporting on: the provision of funding, hedging and investment services to clients, market making activities, hedging of its own and its subsidiaries' own risks, on treasury management activities, buying and selling of financial instruments acquired for long term investment purposes and trading in financial instruments issued by national entities established for the purpose of restructuring the national banking recovery, to demonstrate that they do not constitute proprietary trading. Competent authorities should assess and verify that information and where the competent authority concludes the existence of proprietary trading within the core credit institution it should require that the core credit institution ceases carrying out those activities.
- (17) All natural or legal persons who are clients within the meaning of point (9) of Article 4(1) of Directive 2014/65/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁴ should be considered clients for the purpose of this Regulation. An EU credit institution that is a market maker within the meaning of point (7) of Article 4(1) of Directive 2014/65 EU, or a systematic internaliser within the meaning of point (20) of Article 4 of that Directive, or pursues a market making strategy in accordance with Article 17(4) of that Directive should be considered a market maker for the purpose of this Regulation.

(18) An intra-group transaction is a transaction between two undertakings which are included in the same consolidation on a full basis and are subject to appropriate centralised risk evaluation, measurement and control procedures. In a case where the two undertakings are part of the same institutional protection scheme as referred to in Article 113 (7) of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013 or of a structure formed of a central body and credit institutions permanently affiliated to the central body as referred to in Article 10 of Regulation (EU) 575/2013 it is recognised that intra-group transactions can be necessary for aggregating risks within a group structure and that intra-group risks can therefore be specific. If a contract is considered an intra-group transaction in respect of one counterparty, it should also be considered an intra-group transaction in respect of the other counterparty to that contract as well. Would those transactions be subject to the mandatory separation requirement set out in this Regulation it could limit the efficiency of intra-group risk-management processes. For that reason, intra-group transactions should not be presumed to constitute proprietary trading. A long term investment should be considered an investment which the core credit institution has made with a long-term perspective and which it intends to hold in principle up to maturity. In that regard, it should be recognized that equity securities have no maturity and cannot be classified as held to maturity. This should not mean that such an investment cannot constitute a long term investment when it is made with a longer term perspective. Clearing transactions, which involve the own account of the core credit institution, in particular regarding post-trade transactions, should not be considered as trading activities and should not be considered to constitute proprietary trading.

- (19) Core credit institutions should not be able to circumvent the prohibition by owning, operating or benefiting from investments in non-bank entities engaging in proprietary trading.
- (20) To ensure that core credit institutions subject to the prohibition of proprietary trading can continue to contribute toward the financing of the economy, they should be allowed to invest in funds which are on an exhaustive list set out in this Regulation. That exhaustive list should comprise undertakings for the collective investment of transferable securities, alternative investment funds (AIFs) that are not substantially leveraged, closed-ended and unleveraged AIFs, European Venture Capital Funds, European Social Entrepreneurship Funds and European Long Term Investment Funds. To ensure that such funds do not endanger the viability and financial soundness of the credit institutions that invest in them, it is essential that closed-ended and unleveraged AIFs and AIFs that are not substantially leveraged in which credit institutions can still invest are managed by AIF managers that are authorised and supervised in accordance with the relevant provisions of Directive 2011/61/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁵, and that those AIFs are established in the Union or, if they are not established in the Union, they are marketed in the Union according to the rules of that Directive. It should not be the purpose of this Regulation to impose requirements on the ownership of insurance companies by credit institutions or to impose limitations on investments by insurance companies within banking groups.

⁵ Directive 2011/61/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 8 June 2011 on Alternative Investment Fund Managers and amending Directives 2003/41/EC and 2009/65/EC and Regulations (EC) No 1060/2009 and (EU) No 1095/2010 (OJ L 174, 1.7.2011, p. 1).

- (21) Remuneration policies which encourage excessive risk-taking can undermine sound and effective risk management of banks. By complementing relevant existing Union law in this area, remuneration provisions should contribute to preventing circumvention of the prohibition for the core credit institution to engage in proprietary trading.
- (22) The core credit institution or the EU parent should ensure that the management body of the core credit institution that is subject to the prohibition of proprietary trading ensures compliance with that prohibition.
- (23) Trading activities other than proprietary trading are often related to client activity but may nevertheless give rise to concerns. Considering, however, the potentially useful nature of such activities, especially market making, they should not be subject to mandatory separation. Instead, such activities should remain subject to a risk assessment both at granular level and for the group as a whole by the competent authority. In case excessive risk can be established there should be a requirement to be either separated from the rest of the core credit institution's activities or other prudential measures, particularly a requirement for the core credit institution to increase its own funds, are imposed to mitigate the excessive risk.

- (24) The thorough granular risk assessment of trading activities other than proprietary trading should apply to those entities whose trading activities are believed to pose the greatest risk to the retail deposits in core credit institutions and the financial system or the real economy of the Member States concerned. Entities not belonging to this group should not undergo a thorough granular risk assessment, but should be subject to an assessment to identify hidden proprietary trading and subject to reporting obligations. However, the competent authority should be able to decide to do a more thorough granular risk assessment in exceptional circumstances, if the assessment of trading activities to identify proprietary trading or an assessment of the information submitted under the reporting obligation reveals potential excessive risks. Prior to taking such a decision, the competent authority should take into consideration proportionality.
- (25) Market making activities or activities that are aimed at generating liquidity buffers in order to ensure the fulfillment of other prudential requirements are crucial to the financing of the economy. Competent authorities should accordingly pay particular attention to preserving market making activities that serve to maintain or increase asset and market liquidity, moderate price volatility and increase security markets' resilience to shocks and should ensure that there are no negative consequences for market making activities that are not justified by excessive risks. When performing the assessment of market making activities at especially granular but also aggregate level competent authorities should pay careful attention to the potential effects of these activities on the financial system or the real economy of the Member States concerned. Notwithstanding, market making activities that will remain in the core credit institution should be consistent with the purposes of this Regulation. In particular, such activities should not lead to the creation of a credit institution that is too-big-to-fail or too-interconnected-to-fail, and should not include proprietary trading, under the guise of market making.

(26) The assessment of trading activities should be carried out primarily at the level of a trading unit as well as aggregated for the core credit institution and the group as a whole using both quantitative and qualitative indicators such as value at risk, daily profit and loss and governance structures, and complemented by the exercise of discretion by the competent authority. Following the assessment, where the competent authority concludes that excessive risk exists on concerned trading activities, it should impose an effective and proportionate measure to address that risk. The proportionality principle should apply, as it does in the case of the scope, also for the purpose of adapting the measures to the assessment of the risks of particular trading activities in accordance with Article 10. If excessive risk is identified and if most of the quantitative indicators show high risk and the qualitative indicators do not demonstrate an appropriate level of control, a separation of those trading activities or a significant capital add-on on those trading activities appropriate in relation to the identified risks should be regarded as measures of choice. In that case, other prudential measures in accordance with Article 104 of the Directive 2013/36/EU should only be used in addition to any of these two measures. This assessment is without prejudice to the supervisory review and evaluation process pursuant to Directive 2013/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council. The reference in this Regulation to the value-at-risk methodology to assess the riskiness of a trading portfolio or the financial institutions as a whole do not prevent the competent authorities from using expected shortfall as an additional tool of analysis.

- (27) The assessment of trading activities should be carried out at the level of a trading unit as well as aggregated for the core credit institution and the group as a whole using both quantitative and qualitative indicators such as value at risk, daily profit and loss and governance structures, and complemented by the exercise of discretion by the competent authority. Following the assessment, where the competent authority concludes that excessive risk exists, it should impose an effective and proportionate measure to address that risk. If excessive risk is identified, a separation of trading activities should be regarded as measure of choice and, as an alternative, a significant capital add-on appropriate in relation to the identified risks. Other prudential measures in accordance with Article 104 of the Directive 2013/36/EU should only be used in addition to any of these two measures. This assessment it without prejudice to the supervisory review and evaluation process pursuant to Directive 2013/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁶. The reference in this Regulation to the value-at-risk methodology to assess the riskiness of a trading portfolio or the financial institutions as a whole do not prevent the competent authorities from using expected shortfall as an additional tool of analysis.
- (28) The assessment of trading activities under this Regulation should be without prejudice to assessments of trading risk under Directive 2013/36/EU as a result of which a competent authority may adopt prudential measures in accordance with Article 104 of the Directive 2013/36/EU.

⁶ Directive 2013/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 26 June 2013 on access to the activity of credit institutions and the prudential supervision of credit institutions and investment firms, amending Directive 2002/87/EC and repealing Directives 2006/48/EC and 2006/49/EC (OJ L 176, 27.6.2013, p.338).

- (29) To ensure an effective separation in legal, economic, governance and operational terms, core credit institutions and trading entities should meet capital, liquidity, and large exposure requirements on a sub-group basis as well as on individual and consolidated basis. They should have strong independent governance and separate management bodies.
- (30) A group should be free to choose the appropriate legal corporate structure of its operations. When proprietary trading or trading activities or both have been separated from the core credit institution to a trading entity, the group should remain free to choose its structure, unless the consolidating supervisor, following the joint decision process requires changes to the legal corporate structure of the group, following a conclusion that this would be necessary to achieve the objectives of this Regulation and provided that such requirement would be proportionate and reasoned. A group containing core credit institutions and trading entities should be structured so that on a sub-consolidated basis distinct sub-groups are created so that no sub-group contains both a core credit institution and a trading entity. Notwithstanding this, the requirement to create distinct sub-groups should not necessarily result in a requirement to adopt a holding structure or other specific corporate legal structures. After a separation of the trading entity from the core credit institution, a core credit institution or a trading entity should still be able to be a parent undertaking of either the trading entity or the core credit institution.

- (31) Large exposure limits aim at protecting core credit institutions against the risk of incurring losses because of an excessive concentration of risks with regard to one client or a group of connected clients. The application of such limits between the separated parts within the credit institution or group is an integral part of this Regulation. In order to limit the application of the public safety net to the activities subject to separation and to clearly distinguish the activities of a trading entity from the core credit institution, trading entities should be prohibited from taking retail deposits eligible for deposit insurance. That prohibition should not prevent trading entities from taking non-retail deposits eligible for deposit insurance or from exchanging collateral strictly related to their trading activities. However, in order not to close down an additional source of credit, trading entities should be allowed to extend credit to all clients. Furthermore, whereas trading entities may need to provide wholesale payment, clearing and settlement services, they should not be involved in retail payment services. A core credit institution should be the only credit institution within a group that can take retail deposits eligible for deposit insurance, without prejudice to the exception specified in Article 20(a).

- (32) A decision to require the separation of proprietary trading and other trading activities, an increase of own funds or imposing other prudential measures on a core credit institution should be made as a joint decision among competent authorities. Notwithstanding, different decision making procedures applicable in the absence of a joint decision should be laid down in this Regulation. The consolidating supervisor should be empowered to take a decision in the absence of a joint decision in circumstances where the decision is applied to the entire group. In the absence of a joint decision, a competent authority responsible for the supervision of a subsidiary on an individual basis should be able to take a decision applicable to that subsidiary in order to impose measures to address excessively risky trading activities, especially when the decision would impinge on the financing of the real economy in the Member State of that subsidiary or otherwise negatively affect the real economy or the fiscal responsibility within that Member State
- (33) In the absence of a joint decision under Article 26a, the consolidating supervisor should address the decision applicable to the entire group to the EU parent and not directly on entities other than the EU parent. The EU parent should be responsible for ensuring the compliance of the decision throughout the group. Any decision by the consolidating supervisor should take into account the possible effect on the fiscal responsibility of the Member States concerned. Competent authorities may agree on a Memorandum of Understanding to facilitate an effective cooperation to ensure that decisions are applied in a consistent and effective manner.

- (34) Where an institution subject to measures under paragraph 2(a) of Article 5a forms part of a group of entities, those measures imposed should not affect the structure or activities of group entities subject to measures in paragraph 2(b) of Article 5a. Where an institution subject to measures under paragraph 2(b) of Article 5a forms part of a group of entities, the measures imposed should not affect the structure of entities subject to measures in paragraph 2(a) of Article 5a.
- (35) The requirement for structural separation set out under Article 5a(2)(a) is such that a credit institution should be sufficiently separated from other entities in its group and should as far as reasonably practicable be independent in terms of governance and resources. This is to ensure effective separation and the continuity of core services while in appropriate circumstances allowing for some residual connection to the wider banking group especially so that the rest of the group can support the ring-fenced bank in times of stress.
- (36) Decisions by competent authorities pursuant to this Regulation should be taken having regard to the safeguards set out in this Regulation and the potential impact on the financial systems and the real economy of the in Member States concerned as well as on the potential effect that such decision may have on all entities in a group. Where the European Banking Authority (EBA) is involved in decision making, competent authorities and EBA should cooperate with trust and full mutual respect, in particular in ensuring the flow among them of appropriate and reliable information on those matters.

- (37) To enhance the effectiveness of the decision making procedure set out in this Regulation as well as to ensure to the greatest extent possible that there is consistency between measures imposed under this Regulation, under Regulation (EU) No 1024/2013 and under Directive 2014/59/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁷, competent authorities and relevant resolution authorities should closely cooperate in all circumstances using all powers conferred upon them in relevant Union law. The duty to cooperate should cover all stages of the procedure leading up to a competent authority's final decision to impose structural measures or other prudential measures. Where different separation decisions are taken by the competent authority in accordance with this Regulation and by the resolution authority in accordance with Directive 2014/59/EU those authorities should, where appropriate, strive to ensure that there is a minimum common ground between those decisions, in particular concerning content and timing.
- (38) In order to promote transparency and legal certainty for the benefit of all market stakeholders, EBA should publish and keep up-to-date on its website a list of core credit institutions and groups subject to this Regulation and to the requirements concerning mandatory separation of proprietary trading.

- (39) To the extent that the disclosure of information relating to prudential supervision and for the application of this Regulation involves processing of personal data, such data is to be fully processed in accordance with the Union legal framework for data protection. In particular, personal data shall be retained by the competent authority only for the period necessary, in accordance with Regulation (EC) No 45/2001 of the European Parliament and of the Council⁸.
- (40) The provision of all or part of the investment services or activities as a regular occupation or business on a professional basis by different entities identified under this Regulation as a result of structural changes or other prudential measures imposed on large, complex and interconnected credit institutions, should be performed in accordance with the provisions of Directive 2004/39/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council⁹. Where this Regulation provides further restrictions on the ability of those entities to perform investment services than those defined in Directive 2014/65/EC, the provisions of this Regulation should prevail. The performance of those investment services or activities is subject to prior authorisation in accordance with Directive 2014/65/EC except with regard to credit institutions that are authorised under Directive 2013/36/EU.

⁸ Regulation (EC) No 45/2001 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 18 December 2000 on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data by the Community institutions and bodies and on the free movement of such data (OJ L 8, 12.1.2001, p.1).

⁹ Directive 2004/39/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 21 April 2004 on markets in financial instruments amending Council Directives 85/611/EEC and 93/6/EEC and Directive 2000/12/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council and repealing Council Directive 93/22/EEC, (OJ L 145, 30.4.2004, p.1).

- (41) The Commission should cooperate with third-country authorities in order to explore mutually supportive solutions to ensure consistency between the provisions in this Regulation and the requirements established by third countries. To that end, the Commission should be able to determine that a third country legal framework is equivalent to this Regulation, also with respect to its legal, supervisory and enforcement arrangements.
- (42) In order to ensure that entities subject to this Regulation comply with the obligations deriving from it and to ensure that they are subject to similar treatment across the Union, Member States should lay down rules on administrative sanctions and other measures which are effective, proportionate and dissuasive. Therefore, administrative sanctions and other measures adopted pursuant to this Regulation should satisfy certain essential requirements in relation to addressees, the criteria to be taken into account when applying a sanction or measure, publication of sanctions or measures, key powers to impose sanctions and the levels of administrative pecuniary sanctions. Where Member States decide not to lay down rules for administrative sanctions for breaches which are subject to national criminal law they shall communicate to the Commission the relevant criminal law provisions.

- (43) In order to specify the requirements set out in this Regulation, the power to adopt acts in accordance with Article 290 of the TFEU should be delegated to the Commission in respect of the following non-essential elements: amending the components of trading activities for the calculation of thresholds to take into account changes in the applicable accounting regimes, expanding the type of government bonds that are not subject to the requirements in Chapter II of this Regulation, and specifying the criteria for assessing the equivalence of third country legal and supervisory frameworks. It is of particular importance that the Commission carry out appropriate consultations during its preparatory work, including at expert level. The Commission, when preparing and drawing up delegated acts, should ensure a simultaneous, timely and appropriate transmission of relevant documents to the European Parliament and to the Council.
- (44) In order to ensure uniform conditions for the implementation of this Regulation, in particular with regard to the provisions set out in Article 14(5) and Article 27, implementing powers should be conferred on the Commission.
- (45) Regulatory technical standards in financial services should ensure consistent harmonisation and adequate protection of depositors, investors and consumers across the Union. As bodies with highly specialised expertise, it is efficient and appropriate to entrust EBA with the elaboration of draft regulatory technical and implementing standards, which do not involve policy choices. EBA should ensure efficient administrative and reporting processes when drafting technical standards. EBA should also ensure that draft regulatory technical standards are based on clear principles in terms of predictability and transparency, and that existing data should be used to the extent possible to avoid duplication of reporting requirements. EBA should also take into consideration international developments related to the policy areas it is reporting and drafting on. EBA should not pre-empt the work of competent authorities by any definition of thresholds regarding excessive risks.

- (46) The empowerment of EBA to develop implementing technical standards for the methodology of the calculation of the thresholds in the scope should not force institutions to apply accounting frameworks differing from those applicable to them pursuant to other acts of Union and national law.
- (47) The Commission should adopt regulatory technical standards developed by EBA with regard to the requirements on reporting for the purpose of identifying proprietary trading and other high risk trading activities, by means of delegated acts pursuant to Article 290 of the TFEU and in accordance with Articles 10 to 14 of Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council¹⁰. The Commission and EBA should ensure that those standards can be applied by all credit institutions concerned in a manner that is proportionate to the nature, scale and complexity of those credit institutions and their activities.
- (48) The Commission should be empowered to adopt implementing technical standards developed by EBA with regard to the methodology for calculating the amount of trading activities engaged in by credit institutions and groups for purposes of the thresholds in Article 3, the uniform template for disclosure of total amount and the components of credit institutions' and parent companies' trading activities for purposes of calculating the thresholds in Article 3 and for the standardisation of reporting formats, templates and definitions for the transmission of information by core credit institutions and trading entities to competent authorities by means of implementing acts pursuant to Article 291 of the TFEU and in accordance with Article 15 of Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010.

¹⁰ Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 24 November 2010 establishing a European Supervisory Authority (European Banking Authority), amending Decision No 716/2009/EC and repealing Commission Decision 2009/78/EC (OJ L 331, 15.12.2010, p. 12).

- (49) Where provided for in this Regulation, it is appropriate that EBA promote convergence of the practices of national authorities through guidelines in accordance with Article 16 of Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010. This convergence of practices is particularly important to ensure appropriate application of the two options under article 5a. EBA should therefore issue guidelines to both frame the risk assessment under chapter 2 in view of taking appropriate measures including separation and the risk assessment under article 5a paragraph 5 for the purpose of applying large exposure limits, so as to achieve the same quality of identification of trading risks. In areas not covered by regulatory or implementing technical standards, EBA is able to issue guidelines and recommendations on the application of Union law under its own initiative.
- (50) Since the objectives of this Regulation, namely to prevent systemic risk, financial stress or failure of large, complex and interconnected credit institutions by preventing excessive risk from trading activities within credit institutions and by reducing interconnectedness within the financial sector, cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States but can rather by reason of the scale or effects of this Regulation be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the TEU. In accordance with the principle of proportionality as set out in that Article, this Regulation does not go beyond what is necessary in order to achieve those objectives.
- (51) The freedom to conduct a business in accordance with Union law and national laws and practices is recognised under Article 16 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (the Charter). Each person within the Union has the right to start-up or to continue a business without being subject to either discrimination or unnecessary restriction. Moreover, share ownership is protected as property under Article 17 of the Charter. Shareholders have the right to own, use, and dispose of their property, and the right not to be deprived involuntarily of this property. The mandatory separation of proprietary trading and the separation of certain excessively risky trading activities provided for in this Regulation may affect the freedom to conduct a business as well as the property rights of shareholders who, in such situation, cannot freely dispose of their property.

- (52) The limitations on the freedom to conduct a business and the rights of shareholders should comply with Article 52 of the Charter. Interference with these rights should not be disproportionate. Accordingly, the separation of trading activities should only be required when it is in the public interest and promotes the good functioning of the Union banking market and financial stability. Affected shareholders should not be prevented from exercising their other rights, such as the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial.
- (53) This Regulation respects the fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised in the Charter, in particular the right to respect for private and family life, the right to the protection of personal data, the freedom to conduct a business, the right to property, the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial as well as the right of defence and the respect of the ne bis in idem principle. This Regulation must be applied in accordance with those rights and principles.
- (54) Core credit institutions concerned by the mandatory separation of proprietary trading will require sufficient time to implement the separation. Similarly, the procedures foreseen in this Regulation with regard to the provisions that lead to a decision by the competent authority that proprietary trading or other trading activities need to be separated from the core credit institution, and the procedures that apply to groups following the adoption of such a decision, are complex and require time not only to carry out but also to implement those measures in a responsible and sustainable manner. It is therefore appropriate that the provisions on mandatory separation of proprietary trading, as well as the provisions that lead to a decision by the competent authority that proprietary trading or other trading activities need to be separated should apply from [OP please introduce exact date 36 months after publication of this Regulation].

Article 5a

General principles for separation

1. With a view to preventing systemic risk, and financial stress or failure of large, complex and interconnected credit institutions established within their state by preventing excessive risk from trading activities within a credit institution that undertakes core retail banking activities and reducing interconnectedness within the financial sector, Member States shall ensure that in appropriate circumstances, as set out in the following provisions, those particular trading activities are located in a separate legal entity from the credit institution that undertakes core retail banking activities.

2. Member States must achieve this through one of the following:
- (a) the requirement, in accordance with national law, that core retail banking activities undertaken by credit institutions are mandatorily located in a legally, economically and operationally separate entity from the remaining activities of the institution. A credit institution shall be considered to provide core retail banking activities where that institution engages in activities that consist of accepting deposits, providing facilities for withdrawing money or making payments from a deposit account or providing overdrafts associated with such deposit-taking, and where an interruption in the provision of those activities or service by that institution in the Member State could have a significant adverse effect, in the assessment of the Member State, on the stability of the financial system of that Member State or a significant part of that system; or
 - (b) a competent authority not subject to the requirement referred to in point (a) of paragraph 2 identifies and separates proprietary trading and identifies and takes measures in respect of excessively risky trading activities, including legal, economic and operational separation of those trading activities from the core credit institution, measures to increase the core credit institution's own funds requirements or other prudential measures, in accordance with Chapter II of this Regulation.

A credit institution whose core retail banking activities are not separated in accordance with the national law referred to in point (a) shall, irrespective of its location, be subject to point (b) and the application of Chapter II if that credit institution, on a group or standalone basis, meets the thresholds set out in Article 3 and Article 4. No entity shall be subject to measures under both point (a) and point (b).

For the purpose of this Article, Section 2 of Chapter III of this Regulation shall apply.

Where a competent authority responsible for supervising a group entity in a Member State that applies paragraph 2(a) or 2(b) has a concern that the safeguard in the subparagraph above may be breached, the joint decision-making procedure referred to in Article 26ga shall apply specifically for resolving this matter.

3. National law and the accompanying supervisory regime adopted under paragraph 2(a) to achieve the objectives of this Regulation shall comply with the following requirements:
 - (a) they prevent a credit institution which undertakes core retail banking activities from engaging at least in proprietary trading as defined in point 4 of Article 5 and in the regulated activity of dealing in investments as principal, subject to exceptions for risk-mitigating activities for the purpose of prudently managing capital, liquidity and funding and for providing limited services to customers;
 - (b) if a credit institution undertaking core retail banking activities belongs to a group, it requires that credit institution to be sufficiently legally, economically and operationally separated from any entity in its group which engages in proprietary trading as defined in point 4 of Article 5 or in the regulated activity of dealing in investments as principal including by providing:
 - (i) structural governance arrangements, including for the purposes of monitoring and managing risk, which ensures as far as necessary that the credit institution undertaking core retail banking activities is able to take decisions independently of other entities in its group;

- (ii) that a credit institution undertaking core retail banking activities transacts with other entities in its group only on arm's length term;
- (iii) that the carrying on of the activities of a credit institution undertaking core retail banking activities is, as far as necessary, not dependent on the resources, acts or omissions of other members of its group, such that in the event of insolvency of another entity in its group the credit institution would be able to continue to carry on providing core retail banking activities;
- (iv) which entity may own or be owned by a credit institution undertaking core retail banking activities, and in order to achieve a sufficient separation between such an institution and any entity in the credit institution's group which engages in activities that would be prohibited for a credit institution under point (a);

In case the Member State chooses to apply the requirement referred to in paragraph 2(a), the obligations laid down in Parts Two, Three and Four and Parts Six, Seven and Eight of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013 and in Title VII of Directive 2013/36/EU shall apply also on a sub-consolidated basis. The competent authority of the EU parent shall verify that the EU parent's trading entity has implemented throughout the group the sub-consolidation requirements provided for in with Articles 13 and 14.

However, where a credit institution established in a Member State that has chosen to apply the option referred to in paragraph 2(b) does not have to separate any activities and where that credit institution's parent is a trading entity established, or authorised, in a Member State that has chosen to apply the option referred to in paragraph 2(a), the credit institution and the trading entity shall be considered to be in different sub-groups.

4. The choice by a Member State to apply the requirement referred to in paragraph 2(a) shall be made by notifying the relevant draft provisions of its national law and accompanying supervisory regime to the Commission.

A Member State that has adopted national law and accompanying supervisory regime before the entry into force of this Regulation, shall notify them to the Commission by two months after the entry into force of this Regulation.

Where the Member State intends to amend its national law and accompanying supervisory regime it shall notify the intended amendments to the Commission at least three months before their intended entry into force.

Powers are delegated to the Commission to adopt, within three months of the receipt of the notification referred to in the first, second and third subparagraphs, including all the relevant supplementary information, a reasoned decision in a form of an implementing act stating that the national legislation and accompanying supervisory regime, their drafts or intended amendments do not fulfil the requirements set out in paragraph 3.

The Member State may start a new notification procedure after taking into account the reasons set out in the Commission decision.

The Member State may apply the requirement referred to in paragraph 2(a) in the absence of a decision referred to in subparagraph 4.

5. The competent authority of the Member State applying the requirements referred to paragraph 2(a) shall apply intra-group exposure limits after taking into account the effect of credit risk mitigation and exemptions in accordance with Articles 399 to 403 of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013.

By way of derogation from Article 400(2)(c) and Article 493(3) of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013, the competent authority concerned, applying the requirements referred to in paragraph 2(a), shall, with the exception of cases referred to in paragraph 5a, notify the Commission at least two months prior to its intention of applying the exemption to the limit of intra-group large exposures from credit institutions undertaking core retail banking activities to trading entities that are separated in accordance with paragraph 2(a) and submit the relevant quantitative or qualitative evidence of all of the following:

- (a) an explanation as to why the proposed measure is deemed to be appropriate;
- (b) an assessment of the likely positive or negative impact of the proposed measure on the internal market based on the information available to the competent authority;
- (c) an assessment how the risks stemming from activities in any entity in the credit institution's group that are prohibited for a credit institution under paragraph 3a are appropriately managed and controlled and how it is ensured that the credit institution providing core banking activities is adequately protected from the risks posed by the trading entity with the proposed large exposure limit.

Powers are delegated to the Commission to adopt, within three months of the receipt of the notifications referred to in the first subparagraph, including all the relevant supplementary information, a reasoned decision in a form of an implementing act rejecting the intended exemption if it considers that the proposed measure does not ensure compliance with the objectives of this Regulation and is not compatible with the requirements set out in this Article.

For the purpose of point c), the European Banking Authority shall issue guidelines to specify how the competent authorities should perform the risk assessment.

- 5a. In case the exemption is used in serious and unforeseeable circumstances, which justify urgency of the intended measure, the Commission shall, in case of rejection, adopt the implementing act within five working days. The competent authority, when notifying the intended measure to the Commission, shall give reasons which warrant the urgency of those measures in addition to submitting the information required in points (a) to (c) in paragraph 5.
6. The Member States applying the requirement referred to in point (a) of paragraph 2 shall review the application of their national laws and accompanying supervisory regime every three years and shall notify the Commission of the outcome of this review. The Commission shall take account of these reviews when monitoring the effects of this Regulation as required by Article 34.

In addition, notwithstanding point (c) of the first subparagraph, a core credit institution shall not hedge the own risk of the trading entity.

Article 7

Rules on remuneration

Without prejudice to the remuneration rules laid down in Directive 2013/36/EU, the remuneration policy of the core credit institution shall be designed and implemented in such a way that employees are not, directly or indirectly, encouraged, rewarded or remunerated for engaging in the activities referred to in points (a) and (b) of Article 6(1).

Article 8

Assessment of activities to identify proprietary trading and powers of a competent authority to require that a core credit institution does not carry out proprietary trading

1. The competent authority shall assess the information provided by the core credit institution in accordance with Article 6b and determine whether the activities listed in points (a) to (f) of Article 6(2) carried out by the core credit institution constitute proprietary trading.

When assessing the information referred to in the first sub-paragraph concerning activities listed in points (a) and (b) of Article 6(2), the competent authority shall consult the relevant national authority designated in accordance with Directive 2014/65/EU, for the supervision of financial instruments.

- 1a. The competent authorities shall carry out the assessment referred to in paragraph 1 at the level of application of the review and evaluation process as laid down in Article 110 of Directive 2013/36/EU.

2. The assessment shall include, but not be limited to, an analysis of each trading unit's contribution of bid-ask spreads and profit from daily transactions to daily profit and loss, and the inventory turnover and aging per type of financial instrument in each trading unit.

The competent authority shall also assess whether the core credit institution's compliance programme fulfils the requirement laid down in Article 25 and assess its implementation and governance structure with a view to identifying conditions that can be expected to facilitate proprietary trading.

The competent authority shall carry out the assessment referred to in paragraph 1 in accordance with the regulatory technical standards referred to in Article 6b(4).

3. Where the competent authority, as a result of the assessment, concludes that trading units within the core credit institution carry out proprietary trading, the competent authority shall notify the core credit institution of its conclusions and provide the core credit institution with the opportunity to comment on those conclusions within two months of the notification.

Unless the core credit institution has been able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the competent authority that the activities concerned do not constitute proprietary trading, the competent authority shall, where the core credit institution does not belong to a group, adopt a decision in accordance with Article 26(6) requiring that the core credit institution ceases to carry out the trading activities that constitute proprietary trading.

Where the core credit institution belongs to a group, the competent authority shall notify its conclusions to the college of supervisors so that the competent authorities adopt a joint decision on the separation of proprietary trading in accordance with the procedure set out in Article 26a. To the extent that the proprietary trading activities remain within the group, they shall be carried out by a trading entity.

4. If, as a result of the assessment referred to in paragraph 1, the competent authority concludes that there are doubts about the appropriate level of control in a Tier 1 core credit institution, or has established that other conditions exist that can be expected to facilitate the taking on of excessive risks or considering the complexity and interconnectedness of the entity, the competent authority may carry out an assessment to verify those doubts and conditions. If upon verification, the competent authority concludes the presence of excessive risks it shall allocate all entities in the group to Tier 2.
5. The competent authority shall conclude its assessments in accordance with paragraph 1 by [OP – please introduce 48 months from the day of publication of the Regulation] and shall carry out such assessments at least every year thereafter. The assessments shall be conducted in the context of the supervisory review and evaluation process referred to in Article 97 of Directive 2013/36/EU.

Article 8a

Assessment of Tier 2 core credit institutions to identify excessive risk in trading activities

1. The competent authority shall assess the information provided by the Tier 2 core credit institution in accordance with Article 6b, to determine whether the Tier 2 core credit institution's trading activities carry excessive risk to the core credit institution.
 - 1a. The competent authorities shall carry out the assessment referred to in paragraph 1 at the level of application of the review and evaluation process as laid down in Article 110 of Directive 2013/36/EU.
2. Without prejudice to paragraph 5, the assessment referred to in paragraph 1 shall be primarily based on, but not limited to, an assessment at trading unit level. The competent authority shall pay particular attention to analysing the value-at-risk relative to underlying open positions, and other characteristics of daily profit and loss relative to open positions at the respective trading unit and stop loss limits imposed on trading units. For the purposes of that analysis the competent authorities shall use the quantitative information aggregated and disseminated by EBA, as referred to in Article 6b(6), to allow for a peer analysis.
3. The competent authority shall also assess the governance, risk management policies and procedures of the core credit institution and variations of daily open positions relative to the respective open position, including those for level 2 and level 3 instruments and back testing of the value-at-risk indicators relative to the respective open positions to identify conditions that can be expected to facilitate the taking on of excessive risks.

4. If the assessment reveals highly risky trading activities or conditions that can be expected to facilitate the taking on of excessive risks from trading, the competent authority shall carry out due diligence to verify whether those trading activities are excessively risky. If the assessment confirms the existence of excessively risky trading activities the competent authority shall, for core credit institutions in a Tier 2 group of entities, take a decision in accordance with Article 10.

With regard to the assessment of market making activities and the provision of services to clients, if the competent authority determines that these market making activities, or client activities, carry high risks it shall, prior to making any decision in accordance with Article 10, consider the importance of those activities for the well-functioning of the financial system or real economy of the Member States concerned and the Union and weigh the additional benefits of a separation against other measures that may be taken to reduce the risks of the core credit institution.

This assessment shall at least include the contribution of the core credit institution's trading unit activity to the liquidity of a particular financial instrument in a particular market, and the significance of that financial instrument in that market for the functioning of the financial system or real economy of the Member States concerned and of the Union. The competent authority shall also take into account the aggregate liquidity conditions in the Member States concerned. The competent authority shall inform the consolidating supervisor of this assessment.

When making the assessment, the competent authority shall take into account the principles laid down in Article 26(6).

5. To support the assessment referred to in paragraph 1, the competent authority may use data available to the competent authority as part of the supervisory reporting of institutions according to Regulation (EU) No 575/2013 and shall use the results of stress tests carried out in accordance with Article 98 and Article 100 of Directive 2013/36/EU, in particular the results of the stress tests that relate to the overall risk of trading activities to the core credit institution.
6. The competent authority shall conclude its assessments in accordance with paragraph 1 by [OP – please introduce 48 months from the day of publication of the Regulation] and shall carry out such assessments at least every year thereafter. The assessments shall be conducted drawing from the supervisory review and evaluation process referred to in Article 97 of Directive 2013/36/EU. The competent authority shall in particular review the compliance programme of the core credit institution annually in order to ensure that it enables an effective enforcement of this Regulation.
7. EBA shall by [OP – please introduce 18 months from the day of publication of the Regulation] issue guidelines to specify quantitative and qualitative indicators and methodology for assessing the level of risk of activities specified in points (a) to (f) of Article 6(2) using the qualitative indicators referred to in Article 6b(2) and the quantitative indicators referred to in Article 6b(3). Those guidelines may include provisions to facilitate the convergence of supervisory practices with regard to the comparison of the information provided by a core credit institution pursuant to Article 6b and the information aggregated by the EBA in accordance with Article 6b(5).

Those guidelines shall be adopted in accordance with Article 16 of Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010.

Article 10

Powers of a competent authority to impose measures on a Tier 2 core credit institution

1. For those Tier 2 core credit institutions where the competent authority determines, on the basis of the assessment referred to in Article 8a(1), that the qualitative indicators referred to in Article 6b(2) and the quantitative indicators referred to in points (a), (c), (d), (e) and (f) of Article 6b(3) reveal that certain trading activities constitute excessive risk, the competent authority shall take appropriate action to address that excessive risk consisting in one or more of the following:
 - (a) separation of those trading activities;
 - (b) an increase of the core credit institution's own funds requirements;
 - (c) other prudential measures in accordance with Article 104 of the Directive 2013/36/EU.

The measures indicated in points (a) to (c) shall be applied in a way that is proportionate to the risk identified.

When most of the quantitative indicators show high risk and the qualitative indicators do not demonstrate an appropriate level of control, the competent authority shall require that the core credit institution separates the concerned trading activities or increases its own funds requirements to ensure that it can withstand losses from those activities or a combination thereof. In addition, the competent authority may choose to apply the measures indicated in point (c).

When the conditions in the third sub-paragraph are not met, the competent authority shall require the core credit institution to apply the measures indicated in point (c) and may apply the other measures indicated in point (a) and (b).

2. When the competent authority intends to impose one or more of the measures indicated in points (a) to (c) of paragraph one, it shall, no later than two months after the conclusion of the assessment referred to in Article 8a(4), start the procedure leading to a decision.

The competent authority shall notify its conclusions referred to in paragraph one to the core credit institution and provide it with the opportunity to submit written comments within two months from the date of the notification. Where the core credit institution belongs to a group of undertakings, the competent authority shall also notify its conclusions to the college of supervisors.

Where the competent authority has requested a separation, to the extent that the excessively risky trading activities remain within the group, they shall be carried out by a trading entity.
