EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Since the adoption of the EU Concept on Cultural Heritage in conflicts and crises, on 19 April 2021, and the dedicated Council Conclusions, on 21 June 2021, the EU has worked on the implementation of the measures and main elements proposed in the two documents. As the present report shows, progress has been registered in all areas of EU engagement in this domain, which takes into account all phases of conflicts and crises: prevention, crisis response, stabilisation and longer-term peacebuilding. Illustrative examples in this regard come from the activity of EU Common Security and Defence Policy (CSDP) missions, the projects the EU has conducted together with partners in different geographical areas, and the initiatives developed in the HQ.

Starting with the preventive measures, the EU Advisory Mission (EUAM) Iraq has been advising Iraqi authorities on cultural heritage protection and supported building their capacity through international cooperation. The EU Monitoring Mission (EUMM) Georgia has increased data collection activities with the aim of monitoring tangible and intangible cultural heritage in the conflict affected zones. Several projects developed inter alia in Eritrea, Iraq, South Sudan, Sri Lanka, the Occupied Palestinian Territory, have contributed to raising awareness and local capacity building.

Safeguarding measures have been undertaken most recently in Ukraine. In the context of the destruction and further risks to Ukraine's cultural heritage caused by the Russian unprovoked aggression, the EUDEL has provided Kyiv authorities with needed materials and equipment for urgent protection and evacuation of cultural property. This has been done through repurposing of the projects started before the Russian aggression in order to better respond to emergency needs; through a dedicated project developed under the Rapid Response pillar of Neighbourhood, Development and International Cooperation Instrument - Global Europe (NDICI-Global Europe); as well as through in-kind support from Member States (MS) and Participating States (PS) under the EU Civil Protection Mechanism (UCPM). The up-coming EU action plan on tackling the illicit trade in cultural goods is also part in the general framework of EU safeguarding measures.

The EU has contributed to reconstruction, restauration or revitalisation of cultural heritage affected by recent conflicts and crises inter alia in Libya, Iraq, Yemen, promoting at the same time social cohesion, job creation and reconciliation. Other examples of the important role played by cultural heritage in the post-conflict recovery processes are provided by projects inter alia in Cameroon, Somalia, Israel, the Occupied Palestinian Territories, Kosovo*¹ and Republic of Moldova, which illustrate how actions in support to cultural heritage protection can lead to improved inter-community trust and stronger social cohesion.

The EU's engagement in the support for the protection of cultural heritage in conflicts and crises has also been reflected in the main external financing instrument, NDICI-Global Europe, where this topic is present in all the three pillars of NDICI-Global Europe: geographic, thematic and rapid response.

INTRODUCTION

Recognising the importance of ensuring synergies and coordination between the EU and its Member States for maximizing the impact of our actions in support for cultural heritage in conflicts and crises, and in line with the EU Integrated Approach to External Conflicts and Crises, the present report informs the Member States on the progress made in the implementation of the “Concept on cultural heritage in conflicts and crises. A component for peace and security in European Union’s external action” and the dedicated Council Conclusions.

On 29 April 2021, the Political and Security Committee (PSC) endorsed the EU “Concept on Cultural Heritage in conflicts and crises. A component for peace and security in European Union’s external action”², which builds on the idea that the protection and the enhancement of cultural heritage in conflicts and crises contributes to the development of peace, reconciliation and mutual understanding, intercultural dialogue, international solidarity and inclusive and sustainable development. On 21 June 2021, the Foreign Affairs Council (FAC) adopted the Conclusions on EU Approach to Cultural Heritage in conflicts and crises³, welcoming the Concept.

EEAS(2022) 1556

Since the adoption of these two documents, the EEAS and the EU Commission services have worked on their operationalisation. The coordination between different EU Services and the improvement of the flow of information has played an important role in this context. As such, a dedicated task force of EU experts on cultural heritage was established and regular coordination meetings have been organised. In the context of the unprovoked aggression of Ukraine by armed forces of the Russian Federation, the EEAS has also coordinated along with other relevant services the emergency response in support to the urgent protection of cultural heritage in Ukraine.

In order to improve the information flow with the European Council, the European Parliament and the Member States, the EEAS has contributed to the work of Cultural Affairs Committee, CULT Committee and to the informal group of friends of the protection of cultural heritage, established by Member States.

The 21 June 2021 Council Conclusions invited the EEAS and the European Commission to report to the PSC, within one year and on a regular basis, on the progress made in the implementation of the measures proposed and of the main elements set out in the Concept on cultural heritage in conflicts and crises. The present report aims to provide a comprehensive overview covering not only CSDP aspects, but also EU's broader approach to cultural heritage in contexts of conflicts and crises. The analysis is based on data collected from the EEAS and the European Commission Services, the Delegations of the EU and EU CSDP missions. It reflects the progress made by the EU on this thematic file in the period June 2021 – May 2022.

1. EU SUPPORT FOR THE PROTECTION OF CULTURAL HERITAGE IN UKRAINE

The Russian aggression of Ukraine has caused thousands of deaths and major economic damages. It has brought destructions of civilian infrastructure and housing with considerable effects on the tangible cultural heritage. A number of cultural heritage landmarks, such as monuments, museums, art collections, libraries and archives have been destroyed or severely damaged.

Within this context, along with the civil protection, humanitarian and security contribution, the EU has mobilised support for the protection of cultural heritage in Ukraine. In the spirit of integrated approach to external conflicts and crises, the EU has engaged an immediate response to ensure physical protection of tangible cultural heritage and prevent its destruction.

In direct response to the request made by the Ukrainian government, the EU has provided support for the protection and safeguarding of cultural heritage items and sites in Ukraine. EUDEL Kyiv repurposed the projects started before Russia' aggression in order to better respond to the emergency needs. Dedicated actions under the Rapid Response pillar of NDICI-Global Europe have also contributed to the documentation of assets and provided equipment for the protection, storage and, where needed, evacuation of cultural heritage goods. These measures have been part of an integrated approach, complementing other actions supported by the EU.

On 15 February 2022, the State Emergency Service of Ukraine activated the UCPM in view of the high risk for a large-scale emergency that has a significant impact on the civilian population. This request has been updated several times. Massive in-kind assistance was offered by all the Member and Participating States and delivered to the Ukrainian authorities under the coordination of the European Emergency Response Coordinate Centre (ERCC). In March 2022, a dedicated request for in-kind assistance for the protection of cultural heritage (fire security systems, fire extinguishers, alarm security systems, dehumidifiers, boxes, sandbags, wrapping material as well as vehicles to evacuate cultural heritage) was added⁴. This was the first time that a dedicated request for the protection of cultural heritage was made under the UCPM in the context of this war. As a response to this request, several countries (notably Italy, Germany and Norway) offered cultural heritage protection items such as kits for cultural asset protection, boxes, sandbags, special equipment.

⁴ https://ec.europa.eu/echo/where/europe/ukraine_en

Subsequently, the European Commission approved the initiative of the Competence Centre for the Conservation of Cultural Heritage (4CH), “Save the Ukraine Monuments (SUM)”, after Ukrainian cultural heritage institutions asked 4CH for help. The project is ongoing as of July 2022, and aims at saving Ukrainian cultural heritage data, to preserve its memory and support the future restoration of assets from the damages caused by the war. The project consists in creating copies of documentation, digital objects, metadata, catalogues, databases, images and digitised monuments as 3D models of Ukrainian heritage on safe servers placed in the EU with a secure procedure. The digital content will be returned intact to Ukrainian heritage institutions, professionals and companies after the war. Acknowledging the importance of awareness for the protection of cultural heritage in the context of violent conflict, the EEAS conducted a dedicated online communication campaign, #ARTvsWAR, drawing attention to the destructions made by Russian militaries and increasing alertness towards further possible risks for Ukrainian cultural heritage.

The EU has also provided support for Ukrainian artists, cultural professionals and culture organisations. The European Commission has extended a call for culture cooperation project proposals under the 2022 Creative Europe to allow more Ukrainian partners to participate. In addition, it has provided maximum flexibility for ongoing EU-funded projects with Ukrainian organisations. Also, part of the budget of the new mobility instrument (to be launched by the Creative Europe programme in 2022) will be reallocated to benefit Ukrainian artists.

At the same time, medium and long term actions are under preparation to reconstruct, restore or revitalise the state of tangible and intangible heritage and further support inventory and digitisation of Ukrainian cultural property. In permanent contact with local, regional and national cultural institutions and public administration through EUDEL Kyiv, the EU has directed its support in a multi-level manner in order to affectively address the specific needs. In 2023, the European Commission plans to launch a specific call to support the cultural and creative sectors in UA, help the integration of UA displaced people and refugees through culture and the arts and share expertise and boost dedicated action on sharing expertise and boosting capacity-building among Ukrainian professionals for the reconstruction of their cultural heritage.

The EU actions have been coordinated both among different institutions and with Member States and external partners. The coordinating EU experts' meetings have ensured the flow of information, generated ideas and helped to engage more effectively the EU support. The constant dialogue with Member States and external partners has contributed to avoiding overlaps and mutually reinforcing efforts to the benefit of the protection of cultural heritage in Ukraine.

2. CULTURAL HERITAGE IN THE CONTEXT OF CSDP

The politicisation of cultural heritage can polarise societies and increase the risk of violent conflicts. The destruction of cultural heritage can be a weapon of war, and a warning sign for future atrocities, but as well a victim/target in violent conflict. Cultural heritage may be attached to the experience of an identity group that may be in conflict with another. As such, efforts to protect or preserve cultural heritage may be perceived as taking sides in the conflict, hence there is a need to ensure that EU support and awareness raising efforts are conflict sensitive.

Within this context, cultural heritage plays a role in EU's conflict analyses that serve the purpose of identifying risks of violent conflict and options for preventive actions. It is rarely a central topic of the analysis but it is a relevant conflict risk indicator. The protection of cultural heritage also helps the EU to achieve its commitments to atrocity prevention. The perpetration of "serious crimes" (e.g. deliberate destruction of cultural heritage, dehumanisation, forced displacement) without effective legal and non-legal remedies and reparations is a central consideration in the Structural Country Assessments in the context of the Early Warning System, to identify conflict risks related to human rights.

Following the adoption of the Concept on Cultural Heritage and the related Council Conclusions, the topic of cultural heritage in conflicts and crises has been integrated in the political framework of CSDP. The EU documents take this thematic area into account when addressing specific issues pertaining to CSDP. The EU Strategic Compass for Security and Defence reiterates EU's commitment to contribute to the protection of cultural heritage, including through the CSDP missions. The Concept for an Integrated Approach to Climate Change and Security⁵ addresses the interlinkages between the effects of climate change and natural and cultural heritage in the EU's external engagement and proposes concrete engagement to safeguard and protect them.

The Council Conclusions on the civilian CSDP Compact (December 2021) highlighted the need to increase efforts including developing expertise where appropriate to preserve and protect cultural heritage. Further concrete steps have been taken in this regard to better integrate the protection of cultural heritage into civilian CSDP missions' mandates and tasks.

To that effect, a dedicated mini-concept for civilian CSDP missions was presented to the CivCom/COSI-SG in April 2022, offering guidance to civilian missions on how to address the security challenges linked to the preservation and protection of cultural heritage.

On the ground, several civilian CSDP missions (e.g. EUAM Iraq, EUMM Georgia, EULEX Kosovo) have continued to help host States to strengthen their capacities to preserve and protect cultural heritage.

EUAM Iraq's mandate has fighting organised crime and tackling illicit trafficking and destruction of cultural goods among its tasks. As such, since its establishment, the mission has been advising Iraqi authorities on cultural heritage protection and building their capacity through international cooperation. The mission has promoted the development of inter-ministerial and inter-departmental cooperation, including through the strengthening of relationships between cultural and law-enforcement stakeholders. It has also proposed its support to the Parliamentary Commission in charge of the revision of the Cultural Heritage Legislation.

The mission has a dedicated Adviser for the protection of cultural heritage. The mission has enhanced its relationship with the most relevant actors in protecting cultural heritage, reaching out to the Minister of Culture, the UNESCO Director in Baghdad and other relevant institutions, e.g. ICMPD, IOM, INTERPOL and EUROPOL.

Workshops on anti-organised crime, counter-terrorism and border management have brought together experts from INTERPOL, the Italian Carabinieri (Cultural Heritage Protection Unit) and the International Council of Museums with senior Iraqi officials and experts from the Ministry of Interior and the Ministry of Culture. These events have covered a variety of aspects such as network building and information-exchange, cooperation between national and international agencies, and strengthening of collective efforts on prevention and investigations.

In coordination with UNESCO, the mission has supported the Minister of Culture to launch a cultural heritage protection awareness campaign for Iraqi students. Moreover, it has advised the Ministry of Interior (MoI), the Office of National Security Advisor (ONSA), the Ministry of Culture and other relevant counterparts on their capability development to counter illegal trafficking of cultural heritage goods.

In May 2021, EUAM Iraq received German funding for identification of opportunities for the establishment of a National Database for Cultural Heritage Protection (CHP). The database is to be set up at the national level containing certified law enforcement information on stolen and missing objects of cultural heritage and artefacts. At the same time, the mission envisages to enhance cooperation and strengthen the relationship between different institutions (the Ministry of Interior Federal Intelligence and Investigation Agency (FIIA), its Directorate General of Countering Organised Crime – and its Counter Trafficking Artworks Crimes Unit; the Ministry of Culture; the State Board of Antiquities and Heritage (SBAH) and its Artworks Recovery Department), encouraging them to collaborate in the same specific project.

Under the current mandate, which started on 1 May 2022, the mission will conduct a set of activities on Countering Organised Crime, Protection of Cultural Heritage and Effective Border Management.

EUMM Georgia has improved its organisational capacity and streamlined its work on monitoring tangible and intangible cultural heritage in the conflict affected zones on both sides of the Administrative Boundary Lines (ABL) with the breakaway regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia. The mission has increased the use of satellite imagery and open sources of information; and strengthened its reporting capacity, inter alia, by appointing cultural heritage Focal Points in the three field offices of the mission operating in the vicinity of both breakaway regions. It has also extended the mission's Confidence Building Facility's funding to small scale projects aimed at promoting cooperation on aspects of cultural heritage between communities and civil society actors on both sides of the ABL.

EULEX Kosovo* has supported the establishment and provided technical assistance to the Kosovo Police Religious and Cultural Heritage Unit. The mission also follows through the justice system cases falling under the category of hate crimes, which includes attacks on religious or cultural heritage sites based on ethnic or other bias. EULEX judges adjudicate on sensitive property claims, including the claims of Orthodox monasteries.

3. SUSTAINABLE PROTECTION OF CULTURAL HERITAGE

The deliberate destruction of cultural heritage is widely recognised as a possible indicator or precursor of future mass violence, as it is used to eradicate the history and artefacts that are central to a population's culture and identity. When conducted systematically, and on a large scale, the deliberate destruction of cultural heritage is also defined in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (ICC) as a war crime. The destruction of cultural heritage has played a prominent role in the ongoing conflicts in Syria, Iraq and Mali. Illustrative examples were the 2012 attacks on the shrines and mausolea of Timbuktu by Islamists groups in the northern regions of Mali.

The protection and enhancement of cultural heritage therefore presents a tangible opportunity for the EU to realise its commitment to preventive action. Over the reported period, the EU together with implementing partners has continued, started and planned new projects aiming at protection of tangible and intangible cultural heritage all around the world.

In sub-Saharan Africa, a series of projects have been developed in the following countries:

4. THE FIGHT AGAINST ILLICIT TRAFFICKING OF CULTURAL PROPERTY

Looting of cultural heritage and illicit trafficking of cultural property represent a major security concern. Such actions can constitute a way to access funds for the financing of criminal or terrorist activities and are often linked with money laundering. Fighting against illicit trafficking of cultural property is thus a way to foster security and help the stabilisation process in conflicts and crises. Preventing looting and fighting against illicit trafficking of cultural heritage has been a priority for CSDP, some missions (e.g. EUAM Iraq), having these tasks included in their mandates.

In order to set out a comprehensive approach to fighting organised crime, the EU Security Union Strategy and the EU Strategy to tackle Organised Crime for 2021-2025 have identified the need for reinforced EU action on trafficking in cultural goods. In this context, the European Commission committed itself to adopt by the end of 2022 an action plan on tackling the illicit trade in cultural goods.

The main objective of the action plan is the creation of one framework bringing together different policy initiatives and reinforcing the implementation of existing EU and international rules, given that several Directorates-General and Services of the European Commission are engaged and responsible for the implementation of existing EU laws, initiatives or funding instruments related to the fight against trafficking of cultural goods.

The value added of the action plan will include identifying gaps and exploring new avenues as well as streamlining existing activities in order to avoid duplication of action on the one hand and on the other hand mutually reinforcing projects and initiatives from different actors. The scope of the action plan will be comprehensive, including actions from prevention to prosecution, and encompass both the EU internal and external dimensions.

The action plan will address all relevant aspects of the fight against trafficking of cultural goods. This includes the following aspects:

- better intelligence picture, by enhancing the understanding of the money laundering and terrorist financing risks stemming from the trade in cultural goods;

EEAS(2022) 1556

- better law enforcement capabilities, by allowing for the access of law enforcement professionals to the expertise of art historians and archaeologists, improving use of data bases;
- better cooperation between relevant actors, such as law enforcement, customs, art market professionals, etc. (law enforcement, customs but also private sector: drawing on their expertise; and also in terms of cooperation with online platforms regarding illegal sales on the internet);
- heightened awareness for risks and methods associated with trafficking in cultural goods, for example with art market professionals, the financial sector, or the general public;
- enhanced transparency of the art and antiquities trade within the EU, for example through strengthening due diligence for professional art dealers;
- better use of EU tools of cooperation, for example strengthening of the EU CULTNET informal network of specialized Member States law enforcement services, which also includes further stakeholders such as non-EU countries;
- enhanced cooperation between relevant internal and external policy areas such as justice and home affairs and common security and defence policy cooperation;
- the action plan will also explore ways for stronger international cooperation with non-EU countries (such as those where cultural goods originate) as well as international organisations such as UNESCO, UNODC, WCO including standard setting bodies such as FATF (the Financial Action Task Force).

The action plan on tackling the illicit trade in cultural goods supports EU operational approach for cultural heritage in conflicts and crises and will further contribute to EU efforts to foster peace and security – illicit trafficking of cultural property representing a way to access to funds, including for the financing of criminal and terrorist activities.

Fighting illegal trade in cultural property is also included among the EU's priorities for the fight against serious and organised crime for EMPACT (the European Multidisciplinary Platform Against Criminal Threats) 2022-2025, specifically in the Operational Action Plan on Organised Property Crime, in which several operational actions are aimed at disrupting criminal networks involved in organised crimes regarding cultural property.

5. INTEGRATION IN THE FINANCING INSTRUMENTS

In June 2021, the European Parliament adopted the Neighbourhood, Development and International Cooperation Instrument – Global Europe (NDICI-Global Europe). With an overall allocation of EUR 79.5 billion (2021-2027), the new financing instrument covers the EU cooperation with all third countries, except for the pre-accession beneficiaries and the overseas countries and territories.

As of May 2022, 84 country, 1 multi-country and 3 regional multi-indicative programmes (MIPs) were adopted (for Sub-Saharan Africa, Asia and the Pacific and the Americas and the Caribbean). For the Neighbourhood, 5 country and 2 regional MIPs have been adopted so far. A MIP for ERASMUS+, co-financed by NDICI-Global Europe and IPA III was also adopted in the summer 2021. All the country, multi-country and regional MIPs will be complemented by four thematic MIPs also adopted end 2021: on Human Rights and Democracy; Civil Society Organisations; Peace, Stability and Conflict prevention and Global Challenges.

In defining the priorities included in each MIP, active engagement took place in order to include adequate language to support the implementation of the EU Concept on cultural heritage in conflicts and crises, which enhances the EU's approach to peace, security and development. While the exact amounts to be engaged for the protection of cultural heritage cannot be determined in advance, NDICI-Global Europe provides a wide range of options to promote cultural heritage as a tool for supporting peace.

Cultural heritage can be addressed in all the three pillars of NDICI-Global Europe: geographic, thematic and rapid response (non-programmable), and actions can be implemented through partner governments, civil society organisations, local authorities, private sector, and/or international organisations (e.g. UNESCO).

Under the geographic pillar of NDICI-Global Europe through the country MIPs, “cultural heritage” is mentioned at various degrees:

- “Cultural heritage” is included as a priority / specific objective / result – and is part of the toolbox to support the creation of a culture for peace. Hence, when specifically mentioned, the promotion and preservation of cultural heritage is either linked to governance and intercultural dialogue as a vector for social cohesion and conflict prevention (e.g. Sri Lanka, Mozambique), or to economic factors such as job creation, tourism, involving also youth (e.g. Benin, Botswana, Ghana, Kyrgyzstan, Laos, Tanzania, Togo). In most cases, the partner countries have included the preservation of cultural heritage as part of their National Development Strategies.

- “Cultural heritage” is also a priority for some EU Member States in their activities in partner countries, and e.g. in Vietnam and Pakistan, the topic is addressed as part of the Team Europe Initiatives.
- Promotion of “cultural heritage” indirectly through support to cultural actors or NGOs promoting a culture of peace under the MIPs support measures (part of every country MIP).
- Indirectly preservation of “cultural heritage – tangible and intangible” is also addressed either through a) support to local cultural actors or to activities supporting intercultural dialogue (e.g. Guatemala, Mauritania, Tanzania); b) through a governance lens (conflict prevention as priority - e.g. for Philippines, Iraq, Angola).

However, it is important to note that in several geographic MIPs it was not found opportune to mention this thematic area even if the country concerned has a rich recognised cultural heritage.

The Multiannual Indicative Regional Programme for Sub-Saharan Africa includes a Specific Objective on culture: “Enhance cultural co-creation and intercultural dialogue between the EU and Africa and among African countries, and facilitate greater cooperation to protect and promote cultural heritage” and an expected result on cultural heritage: “African cultural heritage is protected and promoted, becoming a vector for social cohesion, stability, cultural tourism, jobs and sustainable growth”.

The promotion of the culture for peace and the preservation of cultural heritage is one of the novelties included in the adopted MIP for Peace, Stability and Conflict Prevention under Global Europe thematic pillar. Hence, specific objective 4 of priority 2 focuses on promotion of peace values and a culture of non-violence – and in particular to increased engagement to protect and enhance the value of culture and cultural heritage, be it tangible or intangible, as a component for peace and reconciliation (result 1). Not least, the EU could also seek to curb the illicit exploitation and trade in tangible cultural heritage and its role in enabling and financing conflicts.

The Rapid Response pillar of NDICI-Global Europe is non-programmable, and, as its name suggests, part of its budget can be used to quickly respond to urgent needs when a crisis erupts. If a country in conflict request support to safeguard, track or evacuate artefacts as a matter of urgency due to immediate danger of destruction, the rapid response pillar may provide the necessary support. Concretely, this funding was used during the Russian aggression of Ukraine, in support to national museums to safeguard their collections (see section 1 of the report).

6. COOPERATION WITH PARTNERS

The cooperation with partner organisations and civil society plays a very important role in promoting the protection of cultural heritage in conflicts and crises and is in line with EU Integrated Approach. All the projects described in the present report have been implemented in cooperation with partners, inter alia, UNESCO, Goethe Institute, ALIPH Foundation, the Arab Culture Association (ACA), as well as local institutes and museums.

Strengthening partnerships with international organisations is also at the core of the EU's external relations, notably with UNESCO.

In line with the objectives of the Joint Communication on strengthening the EU's contribution to rules-based multilateralism, the EU – UNESCO partnership is being developed in the framework of the “Working Better Together” initiative. Within this framework, the EU and UNESCO pursue common strategic priorities and the most adequate means to take these priorities forward together, in a coordinated manner. During the sectorial consultations of May 2021 the EU and UNESCO services agreed that protecting cultural heritage and building resilience is one of the three pillars of the EU - UNESCO cooperation in the field of culture. Under this pillar, EU and UNESCO cooperate in order to achieve their common objectives related to: the protection of cultural heritage in conflicts and crises; the promotion of environmental sustainability and resilience through culture; as well as the fight against the illicit trafficking of cultural goods. These areas of strategic cooperation are pursued, at an operational level, through a set of substantial, visible initiatives, Team Europe included. These initiatives are intended to capitalize on all UNESCO's functions and the comparative advantages it can put forth, as a partner: Laboratory of ideas (anticipating and responding to emerging trends); Standard setter; Clearinghouse (promoting the development, implementation and dissemination of successful EU policies and practices); Capacity-builder (as implementing partner, developing capacities of third country EU partners); Catalyst for international cooperation.

The EU and its MS are the largest voluntary contributors to the UNESCO budget, during the 2020-2021 biennium providing almost 40% of the funds mobilized by UNESCO. As UNESCO still faces a difficult financial situation owing to the suspension in late 2011 of contributions of Israel and the US (22% of assessed contributions in 2012-2013), contributions by the EU and its Member States are even more vital.

Advancing towards a more strategic cooperation, the EU and UNESCO currently benefit from a dynamic cooperation at the level of a number of both geographical flagship projects like:

- “Rehabilitation of Cultural Heritage and Safeguarding of Ancient Manuscripts of Mali”;
- “Revive the Spirit of Mosul”, in Iraq;
- “Supporting youth economic resilience in Yemen through job creation in heritage rehabilitation and creative industries”;
- “Support to livelihoods through cultural heritage” in Jordan and Iraq;

and thematic, like Fight against illicit trafficking of cultural property -1970 Convention projects:

- Inter-regional and crosscutting action aiming to strengthen the fight against illicit trafficking of cultural property: an EU-UNESCO joint initiative;
- Fighting illicit trafficking of cultural property in the Western Balkans (see more details in Section 3 of the report)
