Subject:	Proposal for a DIRECTIVE OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL harmonising certain aspects of insolvency law – four-column table

Delegations will find in Annex the 4-column table following the first and second interinstitutional technical meetings (ITMs) on the Insolvency Directive, which took place on 4 and 5 September 2025.

During the first two ITMs, the co-legislators discussed Titles II and III as well as some related provisions in Title I (lines 87a, 87b, 97 – 104). For the moment, only the operative part of the text was discussed.

The 4-column table also contains some questions for Member States (lines 102, 134a, 151, 153, 168, 173, 174, 178, 187, 207, 211, 217), as well as some counterproposals to the Council position received from the European Parliament following the ITMs. During the JHA Counsellors meeting on 30 September 2025 we foresee to focus our discussion on the lines where we pose questions to the Member States.

Avoidance actions rules should also allow for the compensation where certain rights do not form part of the insolvency estate for the detriment caused to under national law but pertain to the debtor's personal sphere, for example the right to enter into or end a marriage or adopt a child. The acceptance or rejection of an inheritance should not be subject to the avoidance rules under this Directive. As this Directive lays down minimum rules, Member States should be able to maintain or adopt provisions that are more favourable to the general body of creditors by such. In particular, Member States should be able to provide for longer look-back periods, extend the list of persons considered as parties closely related to the debtor, or expand the range of legal acts that can be the subject of avoidance actions.

			Member States should also be able to provide for presumptions or requirements that alleviate the burden of proof in favour of the party claiming that the legal act is, voidable or unenforceable.
Recital 5a
18a			(5a) Given that avoidance actions aim to reverse the detrimental effects of a legal act on the insolvency estate, it is appropriate to consider that the detriment is caused upon the perfection of the legal act and not upon the execution of the performance. A legal act should be considered perfected when it unfolds its legal effects in accordance with national law. Where, pursuant to national law, the legal effects of a legal act are conditional upon an entry of the legal act in a public register, since the time of the registration in a public register is beyond the control of the debtor or of the parties to the legal act concerned, it is advisable to consider the legal act to be perfected as soon as all the other requirements for its effectiveness have been met.

46b		(33a) In order to promote an efficient and inclusive insolvency framework that supports entrepreneurship and economic renewal, Member States should be able to maintain or introduce simplified winding-up proceedings for microenterprises, while upholding the high standards of transparency and fairness provided for in this Directive and under other relevant instruments. Given the limited resources typically available to such businesses, it is essential that the Member States ensure that those proceedings are accessible even in cases where the debtor has no assets or where the available assets are insufficient to cover the procedural costs or the cost for the involvement of an insolvency practitioner. Such an approach would help avoid situations where honest but insolvent entrepreneurs are trapped in inactivity due to inaccessible formal procedures, thereby enabling a fresh start and contributing to a fairer and more resilient internal market.

Where microenterprises operate as limited liability entities, limited liability protection is usually illusory for microenterprises owners because they are often expected to secure microenterprises business debts using their personal assets as collateral. Moreover, since microenterprises heavily depend on payments from their clients they often face cash-flow problems and higher default risks that follow from the loss of a significant business partner or from late payments by their clients. In addition, microenterprises also face scarcity of working capital, higher interest rates and larger collateral requirements, which make raising finance, especially in situations of financial distress, difficult, if not impossible. As a consequence, they may be prone to insolvency more often than larger enterprises.

The balance sheet test may however be unfeasible for microenterprise debtors, particularly where the debtor is an individual entrepreneur, because of a possible lack of proper record and of a clear distinction between personal assets and liabilities and business assets and liabilities. Therefore, the inability to pay debts as they mature should be the criterion for the opening of simplified winding-up proceedings. Member States should also define the specific conditions under which this criterion is met, as long as these conditions are clear, simple and easily ascertainable by the microenterprise concerned.
Recital 38

				contributions are a part of an employee's compensation and they are also mandatory by law. Allowing for clawing back social security contributions is equal to granting the debtor an exemption from social security contributions. Such exemptions without proper justifications can even run afoul of state aid rules. The wording is anyways leaving a lot to MS "where relevant, in accordance with national law," thus being minimum harmonization as preferred by Council. The aim is to prevent social security contributions already paid from being reclaimed by insolvency administrators and added to the insolvency estate and thus avoid the overburdening of the public system. Under DE law, for example, the employer owes social security contributions. Social security authorities are therefore creditors. If legal acts that serve as satisfaction or collateralisation of claims of social security authorities could be declared void, the social insurances would lose contributions, which would weaken the redistribution system in public social insurances."

This brings particularly severe consequences for SMEs who are creditors and have to accept the debt being paid by a company they have no formal relationship with. Example: An SME (X) has a claim to money from company A. Company A is ready for insolvency. X knows nothing about this. The claim is paid to X by company B (possibly a subsidiary of company A, usually a complex network of companies). There is no contractual relationship between X

According to existing law (as well as it is established in practice), X must also accept payment by B on the debt of A. Company B then also becomes insolvent.
