31b				(21b) A main criterion for determining whether a case has a cross-border dimension relates to delivery of wholesale energy products in a certain number of Member States. However, for technical reasons, there are cases where the geographic location of delivery is not possible to identify. For instance, when delivery takes place or is assumed to take place in a bidding zone which encompasses the territory or part thereof of at least two Member States in the intra-day and day-ahead wholesale electricity markets, the precise place of delivery within that zone is not possible to identify. The same applies to delivery that is taking place or is being assumed to take place in gas balancing zones which encompass at least two Member States.
