Subject:	The draft Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child sexual abuse material and replacing Council Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA (recast) - General approach

At its meeting on 13 December 2024, the Council (Justice and Home Affairs) approved a general approach in respect of the above proposal for a Directive.

The text as approved by the Council is set out in the Annex, with changes with respect to the text of the Commission's proposal marked.

The general approach will constitute the mandate for the negotiations with the European Parliament in the context of the ordinary legislative procedure.

Proposal for a

DIRECTIVE OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL

on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child sexual abuse material and replacing Council Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA (recast)

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 82(2) and Article 83(1) thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee,

- (3) In accordance with Article 6(1) of the Treaty on European Union, the Union recognises the rights, freedoms and principles set out in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, in which Article 24(2) provides that in all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration. Moreover, the ~~Stockholm Programme — An Open and Secure Europe Serving and Protecting Citizens (4)~~ ⇒ EU Strategy for a more effective fight against child sexual abuse³ ⇐ gives a clear priority to ☒ stepping up the fight against ☒ ~~combating~~ the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography ⇒ sexual abuse material, including through actions aimed at ensuring the continued effectiveness of existing Union legislation, if needed through its updating. - (5) ~~Council Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA of 22 December 2003 on combating the sexual exploitation of children and child pornography (5) approximates Member States' legislation to criminalise the most serious forms of child sexual abuse and sexual exploitation, to extend domestic jurisdiction, and to provide for a minimum level of assistance for victims. Council Framework Decision 2001/220/JHA of 15 March 2001 on the standing of victims in criminal proceedings establishes a set of victims' rights in criminal proceedings, including the right to protection and compensation.~~ ⇒ Directive 2012/29/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁴ establishes a set of victims' rights for all victims of all crime, including for child victims of sexual abuse. These rights include the right to information, the rights to support and protection in accordance with victims' individual needs, a set of procedural rights and a right to a decision on compensation from the offender. The proposal for the revision of the Victims' Rights Directive further strengthens the rights of victims of crime in the EU, including strengthening of the right to support and protection for child victims of crime⁵. This Directive builds on and is applicable in addition to the Victims' Rights Directive. ⇐ Moreover, the coordination of prosecution of cases of sexual abuse, sexual exploitation of children and child pornography ⇔ sexual abuse material ⇔ will be ⇔ is ⇔ facilitated by the implementation of Council Framework Decision 2009/948/JHA ~~of 30 November 2009 on prevention and settlement of conflicts of exercise of jurisdiction in criminal proceedings~~⁶. ⇒ Where prosecution of such cases falls within jurisdiction of more than one Member State, the Member States concerned should cooperate to determine which Member State is best placed to prosecute. - (6) In accordance with Article 34 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, States Parties undertake to protect the child from all forms of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse. The 2000 United Nations Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and, in particular, the 2007 Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse are crucial steps in the process of enhancing international cooperation in this field.

- (7) Serious criminal offences such as the sexual exploitation of children and ~~pornography~~ ⊗ sexual abuse material ⊗ require a comprehensive approach covering the prosecution of offenders, the protection of child victims, and prevention of the phenomenon ⇒ , including its recent and foreseeable evolutions and trends, increasingly involving the use of ⊗ [...] ⊗ ⊗ information and communication ⊗ technologies. For that purpose, the current legal framework needs to be updated, in order to ensure it remains effective ⇐. ↻ Council

- (11) Research has shown that limiting the dissemination of child sexual abuse material is not only crucial to avoid the re-victimisation linked to the circulation of images and videos of the abuse but is also essential as a form of offender-side prevention, as accessing child sexual abuse material is often the first step towards hands-on abuse, regardless of whether it depicts real or simply realistic abuse and exploitation. The ongoing development of artificial intelligence applications capable of creating realistic images that are indistinguishable from real images, the number of so-called ‘deep-fake’ images and videos depicting child sexual abuse is expected to grow exponentially in the coming years. ☒ [...] ☒ ☒ The ☒ inclusion of an explicit reference to ‘reproductions and representations’ ☒ [...] ☒ ☒ could ☒ ensure that the definition of child sexual abuse material covers these and future technological developments in a sufficiently technology-neutral and hence future-proof way.

(11a) Member States may also pay particular attention to the production and marketing of child-like sex dolls or sex robots, that give reason for concerns. These objects that represent a child are intended to be used for sexual purposes. Member States are encouraged to criminalise child-like sex dolls or sex robots, giving due regard to the dangers that these objects may pose.

(12) Handbooks and [...] manuals, in any form, like hardcopy, digital or coded, provide advice on how to find, groom and abuse children and avoid being identified and prosecuted. By lowering barriers and providing the necessary know-how, they contribute to inciting offenders and support the commission of sexual abuse. Their online dissemination has already led certain Member States to amend their criminal law and explicitly criminalise possession and distribution of such manuals. The lack of harmonisation creates an uneven level of protection across the EU. To prevent offences involving the sexual abuse of children, [...] intentionally producing, offering, disseminating, possessing instructions on how to commit child sexual abuse and sexual exploitation, in writing or in other form, such as (online) sessions in which information on how to commit sexual abuse is shared, should be punishable when committed without right.

↓ 2011/93/EU recital 10

- (13) Disability, by itself, does not automatically constitute an impossibility to consent to sexual relations. However, the abuse of the existence of such a disability in order to engage in sexual activities with a child should be criminalised.

- (14) In adopting legislation on substantive criminal law, the Union should ensure consistency of such legislation in particular with regard to the level of penalties. ~~The Council conclusions of 24 and 25 April 2002 on the approach to apply regarding approximation of penalties, which indicate four levels of penalties, should be kept in mind in the light of the Lisbon Treaty.~~ ↻ The Council conclusions of 24 and 25 April 2002 on the approach to apply regarding approximation of penalties, which indicate four levels of penalties, and the Council conclusions on model provisions, guiding the Council’s criminal law deliberations, of 30 November 2009, should be kept in mind in the light of the Lisbon Treaty. ↻ This Directive, because it contains an exceptionally high number of different offences, requires, in order to reflect the various degrees of seriousness, a differentiation in the level of penalties which goes further than what should usually be provided in Union legal instruments.

- (15) Serious forms of sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children should be subject to effective, proportionate and dissuasive penalties. This includes, in particular, various forms of sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children which are facilitated by the use of information and communication technology, such as the online solicitation of children for sexual purposes via social networking websites and chat rooms. The definition of child ~~pornography~~ ⊗ sexual abuse material ⊗ should also be clarified and brought closer to that contained in international instruments. ⇒ ↻ [...] ↻ ↻ The terminology used in this Directive should be brought into line with recognised international standards such as the Terminology Guidelines for the Protection of Children from Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse adopted by the Interagency Working Group in Luxembourg on 28 January 2016, ↻ ↻ as well as the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child’s Report “Guidelines regarding the implementation of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography”. The said Terminology Guidelines point out that the term child sexual abuse material is increasingly being used to replace the term child pornography. This switch of terminology is based on the argument that sexualised material that depicts or otherwise represents children is indeed a representation and a form, of child sexual abuse, and should not be described as pornography. ↻

(15a) The change in terminology from 'child pornography' to 'child sexual abuse material' does not affect or prejudice any existing legal obligations of Member States arising from international legal instruments that use the term 'child pornography.' Following this change in terminology, Member States are encouraged, but not obliged, to adapt their national legislation accordingly.

(15b) All forms of sexual abuse of children are of serious nature and should be criminalised. Moreover, offences involving vaginal and anal penetration, as well as forms of oral penetration of a sexual nature, are particularly serious and must be linked to very high penalties.

(15c) Engaging in sexual activities with children who have reached the age of sexual consent should be punishable if the child does not consent. When the child has reached the age of sexual consent and gives consent to a sexual act, it is necessary that this consent is given voluntarily, as a result of the child's freely formed will, considered in the context of the relevant surrounding circumstances.

In cases in which the child is unable to form a free will, consent cannot be deemed to exist. Such situations could be considered when abuse is made of a recognised position of trust, authority or influence over the child, abuse is made of a particularly vulnerable situation of the child, use is made of coercion, force or threats or the child is unconscious or intoxicated in a manner impacting their ability to form a free will. It is not required that the child indicates by words that it does not consent to the act. That the child does not consent to the act can also be derived from acts by the child or (other) circumstances revealing this, which may include freezing. Consent cannot be inferred solely from the child's physical non-resistance or past sexual conduct.

When determining what constitutes a child's free and voluntary consent, the Member States' judicial authorities should consider all the relevant circumstances of the case.

- (20) In the context of child ~~pornography~~ sexual abuse material , the term not be considered to be committed ‘without right’ allows Member States to provide a defence in respect of conduct relating to ~~pornographic~~ material that could constitute child sexual abuse material having, for example, a medical, scientific or similar purpose. It also allows activities carried out under domestic legal powers, such as the legitimate possession of child ~~pornography~~ sexual abuse material by the authorities in order to conduct criminal proceedings or to prevent, detect or investigate crime , or activities carried out by organisations acting in the public interest against child sexual abuse. [...] In the context of handbooks or manuals on how to commit offences covered by this Directive, the term “when committed without right” allows Member States to provide a defence for conduct relating to such handbooks when it serves a legitimate purpose, such as gathering evidence for reporting a crime, or medical, scientific, or similar defensible objectives. This may also cover for example other clearly justifiable actions, such as a concerned parent sharing a handbook with another parent. Member States decide in accordance with their national laws whether non-governmental organisations, semi-public or public institutions will be authorised to carry out such activities. It is also up to the Member States to determine whether the whole organisation as such or selected individuals working on behalf and under the responsibility of such organisations will be authorised to carry out the activities.

When provided for in national law, the work of organisations acting in the public interest against child sexual abuse, that receive reports from the public on child sexual abuse materials or facilitate removal of such materials and the investigation of the offences, should be encouraged by the Member States and European bodies, agencies and institutions. Where these organisations, acting in the public interest, review and analyse or otherwise process material constituting child sexual abuse for the purposes of removal and investigation, such processing should not be criminalised. These activities may further include, in particular, the reception, analysis and creation of reports of suspected child sexual abuse material, including the determination of the location where the material referred to in the reports is hosted, submitted to them by online users or other organisations acting in the public interest against child sexual abuse, as well as carrying out searches on publicly accessible material on hosting services to detect the dissemination of child sexual abuse material, using the reports of suspected child sexual abuse material, submitted to them by victims, online users or other organisations acting in the public interest against child sexual abuse.

Furthermore, the term ‘without right’ does not exclude legal defences or similar relevant principles that relieve a person of responsibility under specific circumstances, ~~for example where telephone or Internet hotlines carry out activities to report those cases~~, for example where telephone or Internet hotlines carry out activities to report those cases.

- (21) Knowingly obtaining access, by means of information and communication technology, to child ~~pornography~~ ☒ sexual abuse material ☒ should be criminalised. To be liable, the person should both intend to → [...] → access → ☒ an online location ☒ ~~a site~~ where child ~~pornography~~ ☒ sexual abuse material ☒ is available and know that such ☒ material ☒ ~~images~~ can be found there. Penalties should not be applied to persons inadvertently accessing ~~sites~~ ☒ online locations ☒ containing child ~~pornography~~ ☒ sexual abuse material ☒. The intentional nature of the offence may notably be deduced from the fact that it is recurrent or that the offence was committed via a service in return for payment.

- (22) Solicitation of children for sexual purposes is a threat with specific characteristics in the context of the Internet, as the latter provides unprecedented anonymity to users because they are able to conceal their real identity and personal characteristics, such as their age. ⇒ In the last decade, the use of information and communication technologies has provided offenders with increasingly easy access to children, where the contact often starts with the offender ↻ [...] ↻ ↻ soliciting ↻ the child, for example by pretending to be a peer or with other deceitful or flattering conduct, into compromising situations. This increased access to children has led to the rapid growth of phenomena such as ‘sextortion’ (i.e. the conduct of threatening to share intimate material depicting the victim to obtain money, child sexual abuse material or any other benefit), affecting children both below and above the age of sexual consent. There has been a surge in recent years of financially motivated sextortion by organised crime groups that target in particular teenage boys, which have led to multiple cases of those children taking their lives. It is therefore essential that all these phenomena are appropriately covered in Member States’ law. ⇐ ↻ This includes sextortion with the use of self-generated sexually explicit content and sexually explicit content produced with the consent of the child but without the child’s intention of disclosure to third persons or to the public. Online solicitation by an adult to meet a child who has not reached the age of sexual consent for the purpose of committing a sexual offence should be criminalized. In cases in which a peer proposes to meet for the purpose of consensual sexual activities, and this does not involve any abuse, exploitation, coercion or force, it shall be within the discretion of the Member States to decide if this should be punishable. ↻ At the same time, Member States acknowledge the importance of also combating the solicitation of a child outside the context of the Internet, in particular where such solicitation is not carried out by using information and communication technology. Member States are encouraged to criminalise the conduct where the solicitation of a child to meet the offender for sexual purposes takes place in the presence or proximity of the child, for instance in the form of a particular preparatory offence, attempt to commit the offences referred to in this Directive or as a particular form of sexual abuse. Whichever legal solution is chosen to criminalise ‘off-line grooming’, Member States should ensure that they prosecute the perpetrators of such offences.

(23) In light of recent technological developments and, in particular, of the development of augmented, extended and virtual reality settings, the criminalisation of the solicitation of children ↻ who have not reached the age of sexual consent ↻ should not be limited to voice, text or mail conversations, but also include contacts or exchanges in augmented, extended or virtual reality settings, as well as large-scale solicitation of children through the use of chat-bots trained for that purpose, as this phenomenon is itself expected to increase in light of the foreseeable evolution of artificial intelligence applications. Therefore “by means of information and communication technology” should be understood in a sufficiently broad way to cover all those technological developments.

(23a) Live online child sexual abuse is also often transmitted to viewers through streaming over the Internet, with the help of social media platforms, or messaging applications. As a consequence of the development of world-wide connectivity and streaming devices, livestreaming of sexual abuse of children is also on the rise. Livestreaming can involve the “in-person” abuse of one or more children, transmitted online, or a child being forced to perform sexual acts in front of a webcam. This means the data are transmitted instantaneously to the viewer, who can watch and engage while the abuse is occurring. Such streaming leaves no trace on the device, because no file is downloaded. This increases the perception of impunity of the offender who proposes or gives money or other form of consideration and creates specific challenges for post-event investigation, particularly relating to the recovery of evidence and the identification of victims and offenders. Member States should criminalise this behaviour.

(23b) The intentional operation or administration of an information society service for the purpose of child sexual abuse or child sexual exploitation is an important driver for the serious criminality falling under this Directive. It should therefore be criminalised when it is intentionally designed or adapted to facilitate the commission of offences falling under this Directive. Operating or administering an information society service includes the activities related to the management and organisation of such service.

- (25) Member States should provide for aggravating circumstances in their national law in accordance with the applicable rules established by their legal systems on aggravating circumstances. ↻ [...] ↻ ↻ The notion of aggravating circumstances should be understood either as facts allowing the judge to pronounce a higher sentence for the same offence than the one normally incurred without these facts, or as the possibility of retaining several offences cumulatively in order to increase the level of sanction. Therefore, Member States should not be obliged to provide for specific aggravating circumstances where national law provides for separate criminal offences and this may lead to more severe sanctions. ↻

(29a) Where Member States, in the determination of fines to be imposed on legal persons, opt to implement the criterion of the total worldwide turnover of a legal person, they should decide whether to calculate that turnover based on the business year preceding that in which the criminal offence was committed, or on the business year preceding that of the decision to impose the fine. They should also consider providing for rules for cases where it is not possible to determine the amount of a fine on the basis of the total worldwide turnover of the legal person in the business year preceding that in which the criminal offence was committed, or in the business year preceding that of the decision to impose the fine. In such cases, Member States should be able to take into account other criteria, such as total worldwide turnover in a different business year. Where those rules include the setting of fixed amounts of fines, it should not be necessary for the maximum levels of those amounts to reach the levels established in this Directive as the minimum requirement for the maximum level of fines set in fixed amounts.

(29b) Where Member States opt for a maximum level of fines set in fixed amounts, such levels should be laid down in national law. The highest levels of such fines should apply to the most serious forms of criminal offences defined in this Directive committed by legal persons of financial strength. Member States should be able to determine the method of calculation of those highest levels of fines, including specific conditions therefore. Member States are invited to regularly review the levels of fines set in fixed amounts having regard to rates of inflation and other fluctuations in monetary value, in accordance with procedures laid down in their national law. Member States that do not have the euro as their currency should provide for maximum levels of fines in their currency that correspond to the levels determined in this Directive in euro on the date of its entry into force. Those Member States are invited to regularly review the levels of fines also with regard to the development of the exchange rate.

(29c) To the extent that conduct constituting a criminal offence as defined in this Directive is attributable to legal persons, such legal persons should be held liable for such an offence. In order to achieve the objectives of this Directive, Member States whose law provides for the criminal liability of legal persons should ensure that their law provides for effective, dissuasive and proportionate types and levels of criminal penalties as laid down in this Directive. In order to achieve the objectives of this Directive, Member States whose law does not provide for the criminal liability of legal persons should ensure that their law provides for effective, dissuasive and proportionate types and levels of non-criminal penalties as laid down in this Directive. The maximum levels of fines provided for in this Directive for the criminal offences defined in it should apply at least to the most serious forms of such offences. The gravity of the conduct, as well as the individual, financial and other circumstances of the legal persons concerned, should be taken into account to ensure that the penalty imposed is effective, dissuasive and proportionate. Member States should be able to set the maximum levels of fines either as a percentage of the total worldwide turnover of the legal person concerned, or in fixed amounts. Member States should decide which of those two options they will use, when transposing this Directive.

(29d) The establishment of the maximum level of fines is without prejudice to the discretion of judges or courts in criminal proceedings to impose appropriate penalties in individual cases. As this Directive does not establish any minimum levels of fines, the judges or courts should, in any case, impose appropriate penalties taking into account the individual, financial and other circumstances of the legal person concerned and the gravity of the conduct.

(31) Victims of sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children are often unable to report the crime for [...] years and even decades after its commission due to the shame, guilt and self-blame, which can be related, among others, to the social and cultural stigma that still surround sexual abuse, the secrecy in which the abuse takes place, threatening or blaming conduct by the perpetrator, and/or trauma. Perpetrators of sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children, unlike perpetrators of other violent crimes, tend to remain active until old age, continuing to pose a threat to children. In light of this, effective investigation and prosecution of offences involving sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children, as well as appropriate victims' assistance and support, can only be provided if statutes of limitations allow victims to report the crime for a significantly extended period of time. Member States should take the necessary measures to ensure that statutes of limitation for initiating proceedings do not expire until the victim reaches the age of majority plus an adequate number of years in accordance with this Directive, without prejudice to national rules that do not set limitation periods for investigation, prosecution and enforcement. As long as this is guaranteed, Member States are free to determine the start and length of their statutes of limitation in accordance with their national legal system. For example, the time for which the limitation period is suspended or does not start following the commission of the crime until the victim reaches a certain age according to national law can be considered. Member States are permitted under this Directive to establish limitation periods shorter than those laid down in this Directive, provided that in their legal systems it is possible to interrupt or suspend such shorter limitation periods in the event of acts which can be specified in accordance with national law.

- (34) Member States should encourage any person who has knowledge or suspicion of the sexual abuse or sexual exploitation of a child to report to the competent services. ⇒ In particular, Member States should make available information to children about the possibility to report the abuse, including to helplines. ⇐ It is the responsibility of each Member State to determine the competent authorities to which such suspicions may be reported. Those competent authorities should not be limited to child protection services or relevant social services ↻, but can also include for example youth welfare offices. ↻ The requirement of suspicion ‘in good faith’ should be aimed at preventing the provision being invoked to authorise the denunciation of purely imaginary or untrue facts carried out with malicious intent.

(34a) In the case of child sexual abuse or sexual exploitation, especially where committed by close family members or intimate partners, victims might be under such duress from the offender that they fear to reach out to the competent authorities, even if their lives are in danger. Therefore, Member States should ensure that their confidentiality rules do not constitute an obstacle for professionals working in close contact with children to report to the competent authorities, where they have reasonable grounds to believe that the child is the victim or could become a victim under this Directive. Such reporting is justified because such acts might not be reported by those who experience or directly witness them. Similarly, offences against children are often only intercepted by third parties noticing irregular behavior or physical harm to the child. Children need to be effectively protected from such forms of violence and adequate measures promptly taken. Therefore, professionals who come into contact with child victims, including healthcare, social services or education professionals, should not be constrained by confidentiality rules where they have reasonable grounds to believe that serious harm has been or could be inflicted on a child. Where professionals report such instances of abuse or exploitation, Member States should ensure that they are not held liable for breach of confidentiality. However, legal professional privilege should be protected, in accordance with Article 7 of the Charter, as justified by the fundamental role assigned to lawyers in a democratic society.

- (35) Rules on jurisdiction should be amended to ensure that sexual abusers or sexual exploiters of children from the Union face prosecution even if they commit their crimes outside the Union, in particular via so-called sex tourism. ☒ The sexual exploitation of children in travel and tourism ~~☒ Child sex tourism~~ should be understood as the sexual exploitation of children by a person or persons who travel from their usual environment to a destination abroad where they have sexual contact with children. - (36) Measures to protect child victims in a comprehensive manner should be adopted in their best interest, taking into account an assessment of their needs. This Directive attempts to ensure that all Member States uphold these principles, although it does not require the Member States to follow the Barnahus model as such. Where medical examinations of the child are necessary for the purposes of the criminal investigations, for example to gather evidence of abuse, these should be ⇒ carried out by professionals trained for this purpose in accordance with national standards for the medical profession. ◐ ⇒ [...] ◐ This obligation should not prevent other medical examinations necessary for the well-being of the child. ⇐ Child victims should have easy access to ⇒ child friendly justice, ⇐ legal remedies and measures to address conflicts of interest where sexual abuse or sexual exploitation of a child occurs within the family. When a special representative should be appointed for a child during a criminal investigation or proceeding, this role may be also carried out by a legal person, an institution or an authority. Moreover, child victims should be protected from penalties, for example under national legislation on prostitution, if they bring their case to the attention of competent authorities. Furthermore, participation in criminal proceedings by child victims should not cause additional trauma to the extent possible, as a result of interviews or visual contact with offenders. ⇒ All authorities involved in the proceedings should, ⇒ where appropriate and without prejudice to the judicial independence, be trained in child friendly justice. A good understanding of children and how they behave when faced with traumatic experiences will help to ensure a high quality of evidence-taking and also reduce the stress placed on children when carrying out the necessary measures. Article 2

Definitions

For the purposes of this Directive, the following definitions apply:

- (1) ‘child’ means any person below the age of 18 years;
- (2) ‘age of sexual consent’ means the age below which, in accordance with national law, it is prohibited to engage in sexual activities with a child;

(3) ‘child pornography ~~is~~ sexual abuse material ~~is~~’ means:

- (a) any material that visually depicts a child engaged in real or simulated sexually explicit conduct;
- (b) ~~any~~ depiction of the sexual organs of a child for primarily sexual purposes;
- (c) any material that visually depicts any person appearing to be a child engaged in real or simulated sexually explicit conduct or any depiction of the sexual organs of any person appearing to be a child, for primarily sexual purposes; ~~or~~
- (d) realistic images ~~or~~, reproductions or representations²⁰ ~~of~~ of a child engaged in sexually explicit conduct or ~~realistic images~~ of the sexual organs of a child, for primarily sexual purposes;

↓ 2011/93/EU (adapted)

4) ‘child ~~is~~ exploitation in ~~is~~ prostitution’ means the use of a child for sexual activities where money or any other form of remuneration or consideration is given or promised as payment in exchange for the child engaging in sexual activities, regardless of whether that payment, promise or consideration is made to the child or to a third party;

²⁰ A recital with a more detailed explanation of what this notion contains and excludes will be added, with reference to child-like sex robots and dolls. Some delegations still call for the addition of an individual provision criminalising child-like sex robots and dolls.

- (5) ‘~~pornographic~~ child sexual abuse performance’ means a live exhibition aimed at an audience, including by means of information and communication technology, of:
- (a) a child engaged in real or simulated sexually explicit conduct; or
 - (b) the sexual organs of a child for primarily sexual purposes;
- (6) ‘legal person’ means an entity having legal personality under the applicable law, except for States or public bodies in the exercise of State authority and for public international organisations;21

- (7) ‘information society service’ means a service as defined in Article 1, point (b), of Directive (EU) 2015/1535²¹.
- (8) ‘peers’ means persons who are close in age and degree of psychological and physical development or maturity.

6. The following intentional conduct shall be punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment of at least 10 years:

- (a) engaging with a child who has not reached the age of sexual consent in sexual activities entailing vaginal, or anal penetration, with any bodily part or object; or oral penetration with a genital bodily part²²,
- (b) causing a child who has not reached the age of sexual consent to engage with a third person in sexual activities entailing vaginal, or anal penetration with any bodily part or object; or oral penetration with a genital bodily part.

6a. The following intentional conduct shall be punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment of at least 5 years:

- (a) engaging with a child who has reached the age of sexual consent and does not consent to sexual activities in sexual activities entailing vaginal, or anal penetration, with any bodily part or object; or oral penetration with a genital bodily part;

²² Added to address the request to differentiate the penalty on conducts of oral penetration with an object or non-genital part. Wording ‘of sexual nature’ removed, since we are now referring to ‘sexual activities’ (instead of ‘any act’ in the previous formulation), which make the specification superfluous.

(b) causing a child who has reached the age of sexual consent and does not consent to sexual activities, to engage with a third person in sexual activities entailing vaginal or anal penetration with any bodily part or object, or oral penetration with a genital body part.
