Subject: Proposal for a REGULATION OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND
OF THE COUNCIL on prohibiting products made with forced labour on the Union market
- Mandate for negotiations with the European Parliament

I. INTRODUCTION

1. On 14 September 2022, the Commission submitted to the Council and the European Parliament a proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on prohibiting products made with forced labour on the Union market¹.

2. The proposal aims at prohibiting products made using forced labour, including forced child labour, on the market of the European Union (EU) as well as their export from the EU. The prohibition covers all products made, whether in whole or in part, using forced labour and it applies to all sectors and companies.
3. The proposal is based on Article 114 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU) (ordinary legislative procedure).
4. The European Economic and Social Committee delivered its opinion on 27 January 2023².
5. In the European Parliament, the Committee on Internal Market and Consumer Protection (IMCO) and the Committee on International Trade (INTA) have the lead responsibility. Ms Maria Manuel LEITÃO-MARQUES (S&D, PT) and Ms Samira RAFAELA (Renew, NL) were appointed rapporteurs. The IMCO and INTA Committees adopted their joint report on 16 October 2023. The European Parliament adopted its negotiating mandate at the plenary session of 8 November 2023.

II. WORK CONDUCTED IN COUNCIL PREPARATORY BODIES

6. The examination of the proposal by the Working Party on Competitiveness and Growth started on 18 November 2022 under the Czech Presidency.
7. There was no impact assessment accompanying this proposal. Instead, the European Commission published a staff working document³ summarising, among other things, the Commission consultation strategy on the proposal and its results. The lack of an impact assessment for the proposed Regulation was the subject of severe criticism by many delegations, since the Regulation is expected to have significant economic, financial, and social implications once adopted.
8. The Working Party on Competitiveness and Growth examined the proposal at thirteen meetings, which were held during the Czech (2 meetings), Swedish (2 meetings), Spanish (7 meetings) and Belgian (2 meetings) Presidencies.

³ Doc. 16174/22.

9. Taking into account the outcome of these meetings and delegations' written comments, the Spanish Presidency drafted its first compromise text⁴, which was presented to the Working Party on 21 November 2023. Since guidance for further work was needed, a Policy debate took place at the Competitiveness Council on 7 December 2023. Given the outcome of the Council meeting and the interventions from Ministers, the Spanish and Belgian Presidencies worked together on a second compromise text⁵, which was presented to the Working Party on 20 December 2022 under the Spanish Presidency, as well as on 9 and 10 January 2024 under the Belgian Presidency.
10. The Presidency is presenting a compromise proposal in the Annex to this Note in order to ask for a mandate to start negotiations with the European Parliament. To ease readability, the text presented is a clean version of the text presented to the Working Party⁶.

III. MAIN ELEMENTS OF THE COMPROMISE

a) Objective of the proposed Regulation and its consistency with other EU legislation

11. The overall objective of the proposed Regulation to combat forced labour is broadly supported by all Member States. On a global scale, the use of forced labour remains widespread, affecting some 27.6 million people worldwide. In this context, Member States highlighted the need to streamline the EU's efforts in the area of forced labour and modern slavery by aligning the proposed Regulation with both international standards and the EU legislation already in place and to be soon adopted, in particular with the Corporate Sustainability Due Diligence Directive (CSDD) and the Deforestation Regulation.

b) Scope and definitions

12. The proposed Regulation prohibits the placing and making available on the Union market or exporting from the Union market products made with forced labour. It relies on the 'forced labour' definition set out in Article 2 of the Convention on Forced Labour, 1930 (No. 29) of the International Labour Organization, without further elaborating on its modern application.

⁴ Doc. 15455/23.

⁵ Doc. 15455/1/23.

⁶ Doc. 15455/2/23.

13. The scope of the Regulation was also clarified as including products offered for distance sales. The prohibition of placing and making available on the Union market as proposed by the Commission applies regardless of whether products made using forced labour are manufactured in the EU. Their export, import and respective advertising are also deemed illegal.

c) Restructuring of the proposal

14. The proposal has been restructured as to clarify the sequence of the different phases, the division of tasks and responsibilities and streamline overlapping articles. These provisions are now condensed and divided into four separate chapters: the overall governance, investigations, decisions, and enforcement phases. The proposal's new structure allows for a readable and understandable text, as its chapters are now organised in light of the expected flow of procedures following the start of the preliminary phase.

d) Burden of proof and state-imposed forced labour

15. According to the Commission proposal, the Member States' competent authorities will be tasked with running investigations to assess whether an economic operator has violated the law by placing on the market products made using forced labour. Thus, the burden of proof would lie with the competent authorities. While acknowledging the administrative burden for competent authorities, the Presidency notes the risk of disengagement from high-risk areas and the negative impact on SMEs from reversing the burden of proof onto the economic operators. The Presidency proposal therefore foresees a strengthened role of the European Commission in the process of investigating and proving the use of forced labour, in particular regarding cases presenting a Union interest. This would avoid the sensitivities and difficulties in addressing this issue with state imposed forced labour.

e) Role of the European Commission

16. The role of the Commission has been reinforced throughout the different phases leading to the withdrawal of products made using forced labour from the Union market to ensure a consistent implementation, particularly in the gathering of information submissions, preliminary and investigation phases where products concerned are of Union interest, and decision-making. The Union interest takes into account the scale and severity of suspected forced labour, the significant importance to the Union of the products concerned, and their relation to critical infrastructures. The proposed approach aims at ensuring a product-based approach consistent with the objectives of the Regulation and fully compliant with obligations under international law.

f) Governance

17. The Union Network against Forced Labour will ensure the coordination of competent authorities and the Commission throughout the application of this Regulation. To that end, the Network shall gather representatives from each Member States' competent authority, representatives from the Commission and, where appropriate, experts from the customs authorities. Its role is further reinforced, and the tasks are spelled out in order to formalise the administrative cooperation within the Network and ensure its active participation in all the phases of the process.
18. To assist economic operators, particularly SMEs, and thereby facilitate the implementation of the Regulation, the creation of a Forced Labour Single Portal is envisaged. This Forced Labour Single Portal should provide easily accessible and relevant information and tools, including a single information submission point, guidelines, a database, and easy access to decisions taken.
19. This proposal further anticipates the possibility of the Competent Authority collaborating with other relevant national authorities of ensuring that its enforcement and implementation are in line with the requirements of the CSDD and the Whistleblowers Directive.

g) Investigations

20. The compromise proposal envisages the establishment of a Single Information submission point to centralise the submission of information regarding the violations of Article 3, in order to enhance accessibility for the submitters, to guarantee an effective and uniform risk-based approach by collecting and assessing all information available, as well as ensure a fair and efficient allocation of the burden among competent authorities, with the automatic allocation of submissions based on objective criteria.
21. While competent authorities remain responsible for assessing the violations of Article 3 in accordance with the subsidiarity principle, the proposal introduces the possibility for competent authorities to request the Commission to take over the preliminary and investigation phases, where the products concerned are of Union interest.
22. The proposal further simplifies the coordination in case of cross-border investigations, by designating a lead competent authority, with a greater involvement of the Network to ensure transparency and a Union approach. Accordingly, the competent authority responsible for the preliminary phase should lead the investigation to ensure continuity, in close cooperation with other relevant competent authorities. The procedure for field inspections, envisaged as a last resort measure, is clarified based on the location of the suspected forced labour risks, in respect for sovereignty.

h) Decisions

23. The restructuring of the proposal gives the Commission the pivotal role of preparing the final decision following the investigation phase, to be adopted via implementing act. Additionally, the Commission will ensure the transparency of the above-mentioned phases and decisions by disclosing it through the Forced Labour Single Portal.

i) Remediation of victims

24. By its nature, the proposal is a product ban and does not contain a remediation mechanism for victims of forced labour.

IV. CONCLUSION

25. The Presidency considers that the text, as set out in the Annex, reflects a fair and balanced compromise between the different views expressed by delegations. This text will also be presented to the Working party on 17 January 2024, for preliminary consideration by delegations.
 26. Consequently, the Permanent Representatives Committee is invited to endorse the compromise text and instruct the Presidency to start negotiations with the European Parliament as soon as possible, in order to reach an agreement at first reading on this basis.
 27. As indicated in the Presidency note of 6 September 2019 on openness and transparency, the Presidency suggests that, if no objections are raised, the mandate approved by the Committee is made public, in accordance with the Council's Rules of Procedure.

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 114 and Article 207 thereof, ⁷ OJ C , , p. .

- (1) As recognised in the Preamble to the 2014 Protocol to Convention No. 29 on forced labour ('ILO Convention No. 29') of the International Labour Organization ('ILO'), forced labour constitutes a serious violation of human dignity and fundamental human rights. The ILO declared the elimination of all forms of forced or compulsory labour as a principle concerning the fundamental rights. The ILO classifies ILO Convention No. 29 with its 2014 Protocol and the ILO Convention No.105 on the abolition of forced labour ('ILO Convention No.105') as fundamental ILO Conventions⁸. Forced labour covers a wide variety of coercive labour practices where work or service is exacted from persons that have not offered it themselves voluntarily.⁹
- (2) The use of forced labour is widespread in the world. It is estimated that about 27.6 million people were in forced labour in 2021.¹⁰ Vulnerable and marginalised groups in a society are particularly susceptible to be pressured into performing forced labour. Even when it is not state imposed, forced labour is often a consequence of a lack of good governance of certain economic operators.

- (3) The eradication of forced labour is a priority for the Union. Respect for human dignity and the universality and indivisibility of human rights are firmly enshrined in Article 21 of the Treaty on European Union. Article 5(2) of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union and Article 4(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights provide that no one is to be required to perform forced or compulsory labour. The European Court of Human Rights has repeatedly interpreted Article 4 of the European Convention on Human Rights as requiring Member States to penalise and effectively prosecute any act maintaining a person in the situations described set out in Article 4 of the European Convention on Human Rights.¹¹
- (4) All Member States have ratified the ILO Convention No. 29 and ILO Convention No. 182 on worst forms of child labour. They therefore have the obligations to prevent and eliminate the use of forced labour and to report regularly to the ILO.
- (5) Through its policies and legislative initiatives the Union seeks to eradicate the use of forced labour. The Union promotes due diligence in line with international guidelines and principles established by international organisations, including the ILO, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (hereinafter “OECD”) and the United Nations (hereinafter “UN”), to ensure that forced labour does not find a place in the value chains of undertakings established in the Union.

¹¹ For instance, Judgment of the European Court of Human Rights of XX, Siliadin v. France, paras. 89 and 102 or Judgement of the European Court of Human Rights of XX, Chowdury and Others v. Greece, para. 105.

- (6) Union trade policy supports the fight against forced labour in both unilateral and bilateral trade relationships. The trade and sustainable development chapters of Union trade agreements contain a commitment to ratify and effectively implement the fundamental ILO Conventions, which include ILO Convention No. 29 and ILO Convention No. 105. Moreover, unilateral tariff preferences under the Union's General Scheme of Preferences¹² could be withdrawn for serious and systematic violations of ILO Convention No. 29 and ILO Convention No. 105.
- (7) The Anti-trafficking Directive (Directive 2011/36/EU) of the European Parliament and of the Council¹³ harmonises the definition of trafficking in human beings, including forced labour or services, and establishes rules on minimum penalties. Any rules laid down concerning the prohibition of placing and making available on the Union market domestic or imported products made with forced labour, or exporting such products, and the obligation to ensure that such products are withdrawn from the Union market ('the prohibition'), should be without prejudice to that Directive, and in particular to the competence of law enforcement and judicial authorities to investigate and prosecute offences on trafficking in human beings, including labour exploitation.

¹³ Directive 2011/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 April 2011 on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings and protecting its victims, and replacing Council Framework Decision 2002/629/JHA, OJ L 101, 15.4.2011, p.1.

- (8) [In particular, Directive 20XX/XX/EU on Corporate Sustainability Due Diligence sets out horizontal due diligence obligations to identify, prevent and mitigate as well as bring to an end and minimise the extend of potential and actual adverse impacts in the company’s own operations, its subsidiaries and in its chain of activities on human rights, including forced labour, and on the environment, interpreted in line with with international human and labour rights standards and environmental conventions. Those obligations apply to large companies over a certain threshold in terms of number of employees and net turnover, and to smaller companies in high-impact sectors over a certain threshold in terms of number of employees and net turnover.^{14]}
- (9) In addition, Regulation (EU) 2017/821 of the European Parliament and of the Council¹⁵ requires Union importers of minerals or metals falling under the scope of that Regulation to carry out due diligence obligations consistent with Annex II to the OECD Due Diligence Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains of Minerals from Conflict-Affected and High-Risk Areas, and the due diligence recommendations set out therein. [Regulation (EU) No 2023/1542 of the European Parliament and of the Council¹⁶ contains obligations for economic operators to carry out due diligence in their supply chains, including with respect to labour rights.] [Regulation (EU) 2023/1115 of the European Parliament and of the Council¹⁷ requires due diligence regarding the legal and deforestation free character of products and commodities within its scope, including with respect to human rights.]

¹⁷ Regulation (EU) 2023/1115 of the European Parliament and of the Council on making available on the Union market as well as export from the Union of certain commodities and products associated with deforestation and forest degradation and repealing Regulation (EU) No 995/2010, OJ L 150, 9.6.2023, p. 206-247.

- (10) Article 19a of Directive 2013/34/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council in its version of 21 November 2013 require Member States to ensure that certain economic operators annually publish non-financial statements in which they report on the impact of their activity on environmental, social and employee matters, respect for human rights, including regarding forced labour, anti-corruption and bribery matters.¹⁸ Furthermore, Directive (EU) 2022/2464 of the European Parliament and of the Council on Corporate Sustainability Reporting amended that requirement by introducing detailed reporting requirements for covered companies regarding the respect of human rights, including in global supply chains. The information that undertakings disclose about human rights should include, where relevant, information about forced labour in their value chains.^{19]}
- (11) In July 2021, the Commission and the European External Action Service published guidance to assist Union businesses in taking appropriate measures to address the risk of forced labour in their operations and supply chains.²⁰
- (12) As recognised in the Commission’s Communication on decent work worldwide²¹, notwithstanding the current policies and legislative framework, further action is needed to achieve the objectives of eliminating forced-labour products from the Union market and, hence, further contributing to the fight against forced labour worldwide.

²¹ Communication 23 March 2022 from the Commission to the European Parliament, the Council and the European Economic and Social Committee on decent work worldwide for a global just transition and a sustainable recovery (COM(2022) 66 final).

- (13) The European Parliament in its resolutions strongly condemned forced labour and called for a ban on products made with forced labour.²² It is therefore a matter of public moral concern that products made with forced labour could be available on the Union market or exported to third countries without an effective mechanism to ban or withdraw such products.
- (14) To complete the Union legislative and policy framework on forced labour, the placing and making available on the Union market products made with forced labour or exporting domestically produced or imported products made with forced labour should be prohibited and it should be ensured that those products are withdrawn from the Union market.
- (15) Currently there is no Union legislation that empowers Member States' authorities to directly detain, seize, or order the withdrawal of a product on the basis of a finding that it was made, whether in whole or in part, with forced labour.
- (16) In order to ensure the effectiveness of the prohibition, such prohibition should apply to products for which forced labour has been used at any stage of their production, manufacture, harvest and extraction, including working or processing related to the products. The prohibition should apply to all products, of any type, including their components, and should apply to products regardless of the sector, the origin, whether they are domestic or imported, or placed or made available on the Union market or exported. This Regulation should not apply to the activities of a natural or legal person or association of persons domiciled in the European Union that provides transport services unless that person or association can be qualified as an economic operator as defined pursuant to this Regulation.

- (17) The prohibition should contribute to the international efforts to abolish forced labour. The definition of ‘forced labour’ should therefore be aligned with the definition laid down in ILO Convention No. 29 stating that forced or compulsory labour means all work or service which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the said person has not offered himself voluntarily, with the exclusion of (a) any work or service exacted in virtue of compulsory military service laws for work of a purely military character; (b) any work or service which forms part of the normal civic obligations of the citizens of a fully self-governing country; (c) any work or service exacted from any person as a consequence of a conviction in a court of law, provided that the said work or service is carried out under the supervision and control of a public authority and that the said person is not hired to or placed at the disposal of private individuals, companies or associations; (d) any work or service exacted in cases of emergency, that is to say, in the event of war or of a calamity or threatened calamity, such as fire, flood, famine, earthquake, violent epidemic or epizootic diseases, invasion by animal, insect or vegetable pests, and in general any circumstance that would endanger the existence or the well-being of the whole or part of the population; (e) minor communal services of a kind which, being performed by the members of the community in the direct interest of the said community, can therefore be considered as normal civic obligations incumbent upon the members of the community, provided that the members of the community or their direct representatives shall have the right to be consulted in regard to the need for such services.

- (17a) In the same line, the definition of ‘forced labour applied by state authorities’ should be aligned with the notion as found in ILO Convention No. 105, which prohibits specifically the use of forced labour or compulsory labour as a means of political coercion or education or as punishment for the expression of political views or views ideologically opposed to the established political, social or economic system, as a method of mobilising and using it for the purposes of economic development, as a means of labour discipline, as a punishment for having participated in strikes, or as a means of racial, social, national or religious discrimination.²³
- (17b) Distance selling, including online selling, should also fall within the scope of this Regulation. In the case of a product offered for sale online or through other means of distance sales, the product should be considered to have been made available on the market if the offer for sale is targeted at [end-users] in the Union. In line with the applicable Union rules on private international law, a case-by-case analysis should be carried out in order to establish whether an offer is targeted at [end-users] in the Union. An offer for sale should be considered to be targeted at [end-users] in the Union if the relevant economic operator directs, by any means, its activities to a Member State. For the case-by-case analyses, relevant factors, such as the geographical areas to which dispatch is possible, the languages available, used for the offer or for ordering, means of payment, the use of currency of the Member State or a domain name registered in one of the Member States should be taken into consideration. In the case of online sales, the mere fact that the economic operators’ or the providers of online marketplaces’ interface is accessible in the Member State in which the [end-user] is established or domiciled is insufficient. The fact that the product offered for sale online or through other means of distance sales is considered to have been made available on the market if the offer for sale is targeted at end-users in the Union should be without prejudice to rules regarding products entering or leaving the Union market.

- (17c) Intermediary services, in particular online platforms have become increasingly used for the sale of products. In this regards, information related to the advertising, promotion and sale of products contravening the prohibition established in this Regulation should be considered illegal content within the meaning of article 3(h) of Regulation (EU) 2022/2065 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 19 October 2022 on a Single Market For Digital Services and amending Directive 2000/31/EC (Digital Services Act) and should be subject to the obligations and measures under that Regulation.
- (17d) The application of the rules in this Regulation regarding distances sales is without prejudice to the rules on products entering or leaving the Union.
- (18) The competent authorities of the Member States should monitor the market to identify violations of the prohibition. In appointing those competent authorities, Member States should ensure that those authorities have sufficient resources and that their staff has the necessary competences and knowledge, especially with regard to human rights, supply chain management and due diligence processes. Competent authorities should closely coordinate with national labour inspections and judicial and law enforcement authorities, including those responsible for the fight against trafficking in human beings in such a way as to avoid jeopardising investigations by such authorities.
- (19) To ensure effective enforcement of the prohibition, it is necessary to establish a network aimed at structured coordination and cooperation between the competent authorities of the Member States and, where appropriate, experts from customs authorities, and the Commission. That network should also aim at streamlining the practices of the competent authorities within the Union on cross-border investigations and enforcement activities. That administrative support structure should allow the pooling of resources and maintain a communication and information system between Member States and the Commission, thereby helping to strengthen the enforcement of the prohibition. Where the tasks of the network relates to customs, they shall be carried out in accordance with the Union Customs Code.

- (20) In order to ensure cooperation among competent authorities designated under this and other relevant legislation and in order to ensure consistency in their actions and decisions, competent authorities designated under this Regulation should request information from other relevant authorities, where necessary, on whether economic operators under assessment are subject to and carry out due diligence in relation to forced labour in accordance with applicable Union legislation or Member States legislation setting out due diligence and transparency requirements with respect to forced labour. [+ Market Surveillance authorities]
- (21) A uniform enforcement of the prohibition as regards products entering or leaving the Union market can only be achieved through systematic exchange of information and cooperation amongst competent authorities, customs authorities and the Commission.
- (22) For the collection, processing and storage of information, in a structured form, on issues relating to the investigations, decision-making process, and enforcement of the prohibition, the competent authorities should use ICSMS. The Commission, competent authorities and customs authorities should have access to that system to carry out their respective duties under this Regulation.

(23) In order to optimise and unburden the control process of products entering or leaving the Union market, it is necessary to allow for an automated data transfer between the ICSMS and customs systems. Three different data transfers should be distinguished in view of their respective purposes. Firstly, decisions establishing a violation of the prohibition should be communicated from the ICSMS to the Electronic Customs Risk Management System (CRMS) referred to in Article 36 of Commission Implementing Regulation (EU) 2015/2447²⁴, without prejudice to any future evolution of the customs risk management environment, for use by customs authorities to identify products that may correspond to such a decision. The available interfaces of the customs environment should be used for those first data transfers. Secondly, where customs authorities identify such a product, case management will be necessary to, among others, transfer the notification of the suspension, the conclusion of competent authorities and the outcome of the actions taken by customs. The EU Single Window Environment for customs should support those second data transfers between ICSMS and national customs systems. Thirdly, customs systems contain information on products entering and leaving the Union market that would be relevant for competent authorities to carry out their duties but that is not accessible to them. The relevant information should therefore be extracted and transmitted to the ICSMS. The three interconnections should be highly automated and easy-to-use, so as to limit any additional burden for customs authorities. The Commission should be empowered to adopt, in cooperation with customs authorities and competent authorities, the implementing acts necessary to determine the procedural rules, practical arrangements and data elements to be transferred between the ICSMS and customs systems and any other ancillary requirement.

- (23a) The Commission should set up a database, calling on external expertise if needed to provide a publicly available database with indicative, non-exhaustive, verifiable and regularly updated information about forced labour risks in specific geographic areas or with respect to specific products. The database shall prioritise the identification of widespread and severe forced labour risks. The database will support the work of competent authorities in assessing possible violations of the prohibition and will facilitate that economic operators identify possible forced labour risks in their supply chains.
- (24) Micro, small and medium-sized enterprises ('SMEs') can have limited resources and ability to ensure that the products they place or make available on the Union market are free from forced labour. The Commission should therefore issue guidelines on due diligence in relation to forced labour, which should take into account also the size and economic resources of economic operators. In addition, the Commission should issue guidelines on forced-labour risk indicators and on publicly available information in order to help SMEs, as well as other economic operators, to comply with the requirements of the prohibition.
- (25) The Commission should issue guidelines in order to facilitate the implementation of the prohibition by economic operators and competent authorities. Such guidelines should include guidance on due diligence in relation to forced labour and complementary information for the competent authorities to implement the prohibition. The Commission should publish different sets of guidelines specifically targeted to economic operators and to competent authorities, as well as any other general guidelines that might be relevant for all parties. The guidance on due diligence in relation to forced labour should build on the Guidance on due diligence for Union businesses to address the risk of forced labour in their operations and supply chains published by the Commission and the European External Action Service in July 2021. The guidelines should be consistent with other Commission guidelines in this regard and relevant international organisations' guidelines. The guidelines should also rely on experience and best practices from relevant Member State authorities, such as helpdesks on business and human rights. The reports from international organisations, in particular the ILO, as well as other independent and verifiable sources of information should be considered for the identification of risk indicators.

- (26) Since forced labour is a global problem and given the interlinkages of the global value chains, it is necessary to promote international cooperation against forced labour, which would also improve the efficiency of applying and enforcing the prohibition. The Commission should as appropriately cooperate with and exchange information with authorities of third countries and international organisations to enhance the effective implementation of the prohibition. International cooperation with authorities of non-EU countries should take place in a structured way as part of the existing dialogue structures, for example Human Rights Dialogues with third countries, or, if necessary, specific ones that will be created on an ad hoc basis.
- (26a) [Recital on risks of disengagement]
- (27) Any person, whether it is a natural or legal person, or any association not having legal personality, should be allowed to submit information to the competent authorities when it considers that products made with forced labour are placed and made available on the Union market and to be informed of the outcome of the assessment of their submission. This submission of information should be facilitated by the creation of a single online portal by the Commission.
- (27a) [Whistleblowers can bring new information to the attention of competent authorities to help them to detect infringements of this Regulation and enable them to take action. It should be ensured that adequate arrangements are in place to enable whistleblowers to alert the competent authorities to actual or potential infringements of this Regulation and to protect the whistleblowers from retaliation. For that purpose, it should be provided in this Regulation that Directive (EU) 2019/1937 of the European Parliament and of the Council²⁵ is applicable to the reporting of breaches of this Regulation and to the protection of persons reporting such breaches.]

²⁵ Directive (EU) 2019/1937 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 23 October 2019 on the protection of persons who report breaches of Union law, OJ L 305, 26.11.2019, p. 17-56.

- (27b) [To enhance legal certainty, the applicability, pursuant to this Regulation, of Directive (EU) 2019/1937 to reports of breaches of this Regulation and to the protection of persons reporting such breaches should be reflected in that Directive. The Annex to Directive (EU) 2019/1937 should therefore be amended accordingly.] It is for the Member States to ensure that this amendment is reflected in their transposition measures adopted in accordance with Directive (EU) 2019/1937, although the adoption of national transposition measures is not a condition for the applicability of that Directive to the reporting of breaches of this Regulation and to the protection of reporting persons from the date of application of this Regulation.
- (27c) [Link between single portal and CSDDD]
- (28) When identifying potential violations of the prohibition, the competent authorities should follow a risk-based approach and assess all information available to them. Competent authorities should initiate an investigation where, based on their assessment of all available information, they establish that there is a substantiated concern of a violation of the prohibition.
- (28a) [Union interest: scale and severity of forced labour, products of critical importance: include Critical Raw Materials Act, critical technologies and dual-use items, Critical Medicines List, Chips Act, SMEI; critical infrastructures: Critical Entities Resilience Directive].
- (29) During the preliminary phase of investigation, competent authorities should focus on the economic operators involved in the steps of the supply chain where there is a higher risk of forced labour with respect to the products under investigation, also taking into account their size and economic resources, the quantity of products concerned and the scale of the suspected forced labour.

- (30) In order to increase the effectiveness of the prohibition, competent authorities should grant reasonable time to economic operators to identify, mitigate, prevent and bring to an end the risk of forced labour, taking into account, among others, the complexity of the proceeding and the number of stakeholders involved.
- (31) Before initiating an investigation, competent authorities should request from the economic operators under assessment information on actions taken to mitigate, prevent or bring to an end risks of forced labour in their operations and supply chains with respect to the products under assessment. Carrying out such due diligence in relation to forced labour should help the economic operator to be at a lower risk of having forced labour in its operations and supply chains. Appropriate due diligence means that forced labour issues in the supply chain have been identified and addressed in accordance with relevant Union legislation or in line with international standards. That implies that where the competent authority considers that there is no substantiated concern of a violation of the prohibition, for instance due to, but not limited to the applicable legislation, guidelines, recommendations or any other due diligence in relation to forced labour being applied in a way that mitigates, prevents and brings to an end the risk of forced labour, no investigation should be initiated.
- (32) Competent authorities, when requesting information during the investigation, should prioritise to the extent possible and consistent with the effective conduct of the investigation the economic operators under investigation that are involved in the steps of the supply chain as close as possible to where the likely risk of forced labour occurs and take into account the size and economic resources of the economic operators, the quantity of products concerned, as well as the scale of suspected forced labour.
- (32a) [Mutual assistance shall include, in particular exchange of information and the duty of the competent authorities to inform other competent authorities, the network and the Commission about their intention to initiate an [preliminary] investigation.]

- (33) Competent authorities should bear the burden of establishing that forced labour has been used at any stage of production, manufacture, harvest or extraction of a product, including working or processing related to the product on the basis of all information and evidence gathered during the investigation, including its preliminary phase. To ensure their right to due process, economic operators should have the opportunity to provide information in their defence to the competent authorities throughout the investigation.
- (34) Competent authorities or the Commission that establish that economic operators violated the prohibition, should without delay prohibit the placing and making available of such products on the Union market and their export from the Union, and require the economic operators that have been investigated to withdraw the products concerned already made available from the Union market and have them destroyed, rendered inoperable, or otherwise disposed of in accordance with national law consistent with Union law, including Union legislation on waste management.
- (35) [In that decision, the Commission should state the findings of the investigation, and the information underpinning the findings, and set a reasonable time within which the economic operators should comply with the decision, as well as information allowing for the identification of the product to which the decision applies. The Commission should be empowered to adopt the implementing acts necessary to specify the details about the information to be contained in such decisions.]
- (35a) [If the Commission adopts the decision, it should state the findings of the investigation, and the information underpinning the findings, and set a reasonable time within which the economic operators should comply with the decision, as well as information allowing for the identification of the product to which the decision applies.]
- (36) In setting a reasonable time to comply with the order, the Commission should take into account the size and economic resources of the economic operators concerned.

- (37)
- (38) Economic operators should have the possibility to request a review of the decisions by the competent authorities, after having provided new information showing that it cannot be concluded that the products concerned have been made with forced labour. Competent authorities should withdraw their decision where they establish on the basis of that new information, that it cannot be established that the products have been made with forced labour.
- (39) If the economic operators fail to comply with the decision of the Commission by the end of the established timeframe, the competent authorities should ensure that the products concerned are prohibited from being placed or made available on the Union market, exported or withdrawn from the Union market and that any such products remaining with the relevant economic operators are destroyed, rendered inoperable, or otherwise disposed of in accordance with national law consistent with Union law, including Union legislation on waste management and on ecodesign for sustainable products at the expense of the economic operators. Products deemed valuable for charitable or public interest, such as medical products, should in priority be donated. Where possible, competent authorities should ensure that the disposal or destruction method chosen has the smallest environmental impact possible of all the available options.
- (39a) The effect on animal welfare should be considered when enforcing the prohibition of the placing and making available of products made using forced labour in order to spare the animals concerned any avoidable pain, distress or suffering. In addition, this Regulation should be without prejudice to the legislation regarding animal welfare, such as Council Regulations (EC) No 1/2005 (7) and (EC) No 1099/2009 (8).

- (39b) Enforcement of the decisions, adopted by the Commission, lies within the Member States. After the decisions are communicated to the Member States, all competent authorities concerned with the specific decision shall proceed with an enforcement actions, foreseen in the Regulation.
- (40) Decisions of the Commission establishing a violation of the prohibition should be communicated to customs authorities, who should aim at identifying the product concerned amongst products declared for release for free circulation or export. The competent authorities should be responsible for the overall enforcement of the prohibition with regard to the internal market as well as products entering or leaving the Union market. Since forced labour is part of the manufacturing process and does not leave any trace on the product, and Regulation (EU) 2019/1020 covers only the manufactured products covered by the Union legislations listed in that Regulation and its scope is limited to release for free circulation, the customs authorities would be unable to act autonomously under Regulation (EU) 2019/1020 for the application and enforcement of the prohibition. The specific organisation of controls of each Member State should be without prejudice to Regulation (EU) No 952/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council²⁶ and its general provisions on the control and supervisory powers of customs authorities.

²⁶ Regulation (EU) No 952/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 9 October 2013 laying down the Union Customs Code (recast) (OJ L 269, 10.10.2013, p. 1).

(41) The information currently provided or made available to customs authorities by economic operators includes only general information on the products but lacks information on the manufacturer or producer and product suppliers as well as specific information on products. In order for customs authorities to be able to identify products entering or leaving the Union market that may violate the Regulation and should accordingly be stopped at the EU external borders, economic operators should submit to customs authorities information allowing matching a decision of the competent authorities with the product concerned. This should include information on the manufacturer or producer and the product suppliers as well as any other information on the product itself. To this end, the Commission should be empowered to adopt delegated acts identifying the products for which such information should be provided using, amongst others, the database established under this Regulation as well as the information and decisions of the Commission encoded in the information and communication system set out in Article 34 of Regulation (EU) 2019/1020 ('ICSMS'). Moreover, the Commission should be empowered to adopt implementing acts necessary to specify the details of the information to be provided or made available to customs by the economic operators. This information should include the description, name or brand of the product, specific requirements under Union legislation for the identification of the product (such as a type, reference, model, batch or serial number affixed on the product, or provided on the packaging or in a document accompanying the product, or unique identifier of the digital product passport) as well as details on the manufacturer or producer and the product suppliers, including for each of them their name, trade name or registered trademark, their contact details, their unique identification number in the country they are established and, where available, their Economic Operators Registration and Identification (EORI) number. The review of the Union Customs Code will consider introducing in the customs legislation the information required to be provided or made available to customs by the economic operators for the enforcement of this Regulation and more broadly to strengthen the transparency of the supply chain.

- (42) [Customs authorities that identify a product that may be covered by a Commission decision communicated to competent authorities establishing a violation of the prohibition should suspend the release of that product and notify the competent authorities immediately]. Competent authorities should reach a conclusion within a reasonable timeframe on the case notified to them by the customs authorities, either by confirming or by denying that the product concerned is covered by a Commission decision. Where necessary the competent authorities should be authorised to require maintaining the suspension of its release. In the absence of a conclusion by competent authorities within the specified time limit, customs authorities should release the products if all other applicable requirements and formalities are fulfilled. Generally, the release for free circulation or export should also not be deemed to be proof of compliance with Union law, since such a release does not necessarily include a complete control of such compliance.
- (43) Where the competent authorities conclude that a product corresponds to a Commission decision establishing a violation of the prohibition, they should immediately inform customs authorities which should refuse its release for free circulation or export. The product should be destroyed, rendered inoperable, or otherwise disposed of in accordance with national law consistent with Union law, including legislation on waste management and on ecodesign, which excludes re-export in case of non-Union goods.
- (44) The conditions applicable to products during the suspension of their release for free circulation or export, including their storage or destruction and disposal of in case of a refusal of release for circulation, should be determined by customs authorities, where applicable pursuant to Regulation (EU) No 952/2013. Should products entering the Union market require further processing, they are to be placed under the appropriate customs procedure allowing such processing in accordance with Articles 220, 254, 256, 257 and 258 of Regulation (EU) No 952/2013.

- (45) Where, for the prohibition, it is necessary to process personal data, such processing should be carried out in accordance with Union law on the protection of personal data. Any processing of personal data under the prohibition should be subject to Regulation (EU) 2016/679 of the European Parliament and of the Council²⁷ and Regulation (EU) 2018/1725 of the European Parliament and of the Council²⁸.
- (46) In order to ensure uniform conditions for the implementation of this Regulation, implementing powers should be conferred on the Commission. Those powers should be exercised in accordance with Regulation (EU) No 182/2011 of the European Parliament and of the Council²⁹.
- (47)
- (48) In order to ensure that the customs authorities are able to act effectively the power to adopt acts in accordance with Article 290 TFEU should be delegated to the Commission in respect of further specifying the additional information identifying the product concerned (information about the manufacturer or the producer and information about the product suppliers as regards products entering or leaving the Union market) that economic operators should make available or provide to the customs authorities. Customs authorities need to be enabled to obtain information rapidly on specific products, identified in the decisions of the competent authorities in order to take actions and measures effectively and swiftly. In such cases, delegated acts should be adopted in an urgent procedure.

²⁷ Regulation (EU) 2016/679 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data, and repealing Directive 95/46/EC (General Data Protection Regulation), OJ L 119, 4.5.2016, p. 1.

²⁹ Regulation (EU) No 182/2011 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 February 2011 laying down the rules and general principles concerning mechanisms for control by the Member States of the Commission's exercise of implementing powers, OJ L 55, 28.2.2011, p. 13.

(49) Since the objective of this Regulation, namely, the prohibition, cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States but can rather, by reason of its scale and effects, be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on European Union. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Regulation does not go beyond what is necessary in order to achieve that objective.
