Subject:	Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 as regards determining the Member State responsible for examining the application for international protection of unaccompanied minors with no family member, sibling or relative legally present in a Member State - Preparation for the first informal dialogue

Introduction

1. On 26 June 2014, the Commission submitted a proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 as regards determining the Member State responsible for examining the application for international protection of unaccompanied minors with no family member, sibling or relative legally present in a Member State.

2. The Commission did not undertake specific consultations and an impact assessment for this narrowly targeted proposal because it constitutes a follow-up to the comprehensive consultation and impact assessment accomplished in preparation of its proposal COM (2008)820 final to recast Council Regulation (EC) No 343/2003. Consequently, in the context of this proposal, Council's preparatory bodies did not conduct an impact assessment discussion.
3. The proposal aims to clarify the determination of the Member State responsible for examining the applications for international protection of unaccompanied minors. This issue was left unresolved between the Council and the European Parliament when, in June 2013, the Dublin III Regulation was adopted. At that time, both co-legislators invited the Commission, without prejudice to its right of initiative, to submit a proposal once the Court of Justice had ruled in case C-648/11 MA and Others vs Secretary of State for the Home Department.
4. The Asylum Working Party and the Justice and Home Affairs Counsellors have examined the proposal at several meetings. In light of the outcome of the meeting of the Justice and Home Affairs Counsellors on 26 January 2015, the Presidency submits a new suggestion for a compromise text in Annex I. Changes to the previous text as reflected in document 5018/14 are indicated in bold.
5. On 22 January 2015, the rapporteur of the European Parliament presented her draft report to the LIBE Committee. Except for some clarifications, the rapporteur proposes a position of the European Parliament which follows the proposal of the Commission. This approach received broad support within the LIBE Committee.

Main outstanding issue

6. Within Council's preparatory bodies, there is broad support for the principle to make the Member State where the unaccompanied minor has lodged his or her application for international protection and where he or she is present responsible for examining the application.
7. There is also broad support for making a derogation to that principle and allowing an unaccompanied minor applicant to be transferred to a Member State that has already taken a first instance decision on the substance of the application provided that this is in the best interests of the minor and certain conditions are respected. A transfer within the Dublin system could be considered to be in the best interests of an unaccompanied minor in case it would result in earlier certainty about his or her right to international protection.
8. However, delegations' views differ with regard to time-limits to such transfers. Time-limits are important because in case a Member State, which has requested another Member State to take back an unaccompanied minor, does not succeed in accomplishing the transfer within the set time-limits, it will become responsible for examining the application.
9. On the one hand, some delegations oppose time limits that could enable unaccompanied minors to lodge applications for international protection in several Member States with the aim to obtain a protection status in the Member State that offers the best conditions, so-called asylum shopping. These delegations expressed doubts whether they would be able to accomplish in all cases the transfer of the unaccompanied minor within the maximum time limits, in particular if this time limit would include the time needed for an appeal on the transfer decision. In this context, specific concerns were expressed in relation to absconding of unaccompanied minor applicants during the procedure to decide on a transfer to another Member State. Unaccompanied minors that disappear until after the time-limits, would oblige the Member State where they are present to examine their application.

10. On the other hand, several delegations would prefer not to allow transfers of unaccompanied minors at all. These delegations consider this not to be in the best interests of the child. They could however consider transfers of unaccompanied minors provided that the period for deciding on the transfer remains as short as possible.
11. The Commission takes a similar view considering it essential to ensure that unaccompanied minors do not remain in the Dublin procedure for a longer time than what is strictly necessary in view of determining the Member State best placed to examine or continue to examine the minor's application. Against that background, the Commission does not want the Dublin procedure to be longer than 6 months, which is maximum period for examining an application for international protection laid down in Article 31 of the Asylum Procedures Directive.
12. With a view to finding a compromise between these diverging views, the Presidency suggests an amendment to Article 6(4a) and the corresponding recital (2c) allowing Member States to transfer an unaccompanied minor provided that the period for transferring him or her is not longer than 6 months from the lodging of the application. This initial period of 6 months may be extended in exceptional cases, such as absconding of the minor or pending appeal procedures, for the shortest time necessary which shall not exceed the maximum of three months. This period includes the time needed for the applicant to exercise his or her right to an effective remedy against the transfer decision.

Conclusion

13. The Permanent Representatives Committee is invited to agree that the text as it appears in Annex I can serve as a mandate for the Presidency for opening negotiations with representatives of the European Parliament. The aim of these negotiations would be to reach a first reading agreement on this proposal as soon as possible.

Proposal for a

REGULATION OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL

amending Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 as regards determining the Member State responsible for examining the application for international protection of unaccompanied minors with no family member, sibling or relative legally present in a Member State

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 78(2)(e) thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national Parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee¹,

Having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions²,

Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,

Whereas:

- (1) Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council³ determines the Member State where the unaccompanied minor has lodged the application for international protection as the Member State responsible for examining that application.
- (2) The Court of Justice ruled in case C-648/11 that, where an unaccompanied minor with no family member legally present in the territory of a Member State has lodged asylum applications in more than one Member State, the Member State in which that minor is present after having lodged an asylum application there is to be designated as the Member State responsible provided that this is in the best interests of the minor.
 - (2a) It is in the interest of unaccompanied minors not to prolong unnecessarily the procedure for determining the Member State responsible, and to ensure that unaccompanied minors have prompt access to the procedure for determining the international protection status.
 - (2b) Therefore, in assessing the minor's best interests, Member States should, in particular, take due account of the stage of advancement of the examination on the substance of the application for international protection in other Member States, in addition to the minor's well-being and social development, safety and security considerations, his or her views in accordance with his or her age and maturity, including his or her background.

³ Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 26 June 2013 establishing the criteria and mechanisms for determining the Member State responsible for examining an application for international protection lodged in one of the Member States by a third-country national or a stateless person (OJ L 180, 29.6.2013, p. 31).

(2c) In particular, in order to ensure that applications for international protection made by unaccompanied minors are examined promptly, the Member State responsible should be one which has already taken a decision on the application for international protection on its substance in line with the requirements of Directive 2011/95/EU. However, in view of protecting the best interests of the minor, the respective Member States should ensure a swift completion of the Dublin procedure, including, where applicable, of any appeal against a transfer decision, and of the actual implementation of the transfer. To achieve this objective, while the standard rules of procedures for take back requests contained in Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 remain applicable, an appropriate maximum time limit should be established for completing the process of determining the Member State responsible and transferring of the minor to the Member State responsible, which should be shorter than the maximum time limit applicable to the other applicants. Member States should have the possibility to extend the maximum time limit in ease exceptional cases such as an unaccompanied minor absconding or pending appeal procedures absconds with the aim to avoid transfer to the Member State responsible. Furthermore, ~~while the standard rules on procedures for take back requests contained in Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 remain applicable~~, a different time limit than the ones foreseen in Article 25(1) of Regulation (EU) 604/2013 should be established to reply to a take back request of unaccompanied minors covered by this Regulation.

- (2cbis) The time limits established by this Regulation should be applied to all cases where Member States transfer unaccompanied minors to a Member State on the basis of the fact that it has already taken a decision on the application for international protection on its substance in line with the requirements of Directive 2011/95/EU. Throughout the transfer procedure, Member States should continue to take into account the best interests of the minor and the receiving Member State should provide for proper arrangements for arrival.
- (2d) Member States should also ensure that the unaccompanied minor is given an effective opportunity to explain why he or she has left the Member State which has already taken a decision at first instance on his or her application for international protection, and due account of his or her views in line with his or her age and maturity should be taken, including by consulting with his or her representative.
- (2e) As acknowledged by Directive 2011/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 April 2011 on preventing and combatting trafficking in human beings and protecting its victims, minors are more vulnerable than adults and therefore their secondary movements in several Member States can put them at risk, including of becoming victims of trafficking in human beings. In view of ensuring that their best interests are protected and that the asylum procedure is not misused, it is important to discourage and prevent such movements and exploitation.

- (3) The situation of an unaccompanied minor with no family member legally present in the territory of a Member State, who has lodged asylum applications in one or more Member States, and who is present in the territory of a Member State without having lodged an application there, has not been addressed by the judgment. In order to ensure a coherent provision on unaccompanied minors in this Regulation and avoid legal uncertainty, the criterion for establishing the Member State responsible in such a situation should equally be provided for.
- (4) According to the judgment, the Member State responsible should inform accordingly the Member State with which the first application has been lodged. Since the asylum application is required to be examined only by a single Member State, the Member State responsible should inform of its decision the Member State previously responsible, the Member State conducting a procedure for determining the Member State responsible or the Member State which has been requested to take charge or take back the minor, as the case may be.
- (5) In accordance with Article 3 and Article 4a(1) of Protocol No 21 on the position of the United Kingdom in respect of the Area of Freedom, Security and Justice, annexed to the Treaty on European Union and to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, the United Kingdom has notified its wish to take part in the adoption and application of this Regulation.
- (5a) In accordance with Articles 1,2 and Article 4a(1) of Protocol No 21 on the position of the United Kingdom and Ireland in respect of the Area of Freedom, Security and Justice, annexed to the Treaty on European Union and to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, Ireland is not taking part in the adoption of this Regulation and is not bound by it or subject to its application.

- (6) In accordance with Articles 1 and 2 of Protocol No 22 on the position of Denmark, annexed to the Treaty on European Union and to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, Denmark is not taking part in the adoption of this Regulation and is not bound by it or subject to its application.
- (7) Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 should therefore be amended accordingly,
