Subject:	Council conclusions on the Sahel Regional Action Plan 2015-2020

At its meeting on 20 April 2015, the Council adopted the Council conclusions set out in the annex to this note.

Council conclusions on the Sahel Regional Action Plan 2015-2020

1. The Council adopts today the annexed Sahel Regional Action Plan 2015-2020 which provides the overall framework for the implementation of the European Union (EU) Strategy for Security and Development in the Sahel, as adopted and revised in its Conclusions on 21 March 2011 and 17 March 2014, respectively. The adoption of the Action Plan comes at a crucial time for the countries in the Sahel. The Council welcomes the Action Plan, which reaffirms the EU's continued engagement in the Sahel region and its support to sustainable and inclusive political and socio-economic development, the strengthening of human rights, democratic governance and the rule of law as well as resilience, as a response to the multidimensional crisis in the Sahel. The enhancement of security in the region through the fight against terrorism¹, illicit trafficking, radicalisation and violent extremism, remains the key objective of the EU. In the context of its comprehensive approach, including the contribution of the EU Institutions, the EU Special Representative (EUSR) for the Sahel as well as of EU Member States, the EU reiterates its commitment to support regional and country-led and owned initiatives in the framework of the Action Plan, using all its relevant instruments, in particular the regional and national indicative programmes under the European Development Fund as well as Member States' programmes, and also including the CSDP Missions EUTM Mali, EUCAP Sahel Niger and EUCAP Sahel Mali, and the Instrument contributing to Stability and Peace.

¹ Council Conclusions of 9 February 2015 on Counter-Terrorism

2. The original strategic objective of the EU Sahel Strategy, emphasising the development-security nexus as well as the four pillars for its implementation, remains fully relevant and provide a comprehensive framework for EU action in the Sahel. The Action Plan provides a solid basis for pursuing the objectives of the Strategy and for reinforcing the EU's focus around four domains highly relevant to the stabilisation of the region, namely prevention and countering radicalisation, creation of appropriate conditions for youth, migration, mobility and border management, the fight against illicit trafficking and transnational organised crime. The EU underlines in particular the importance of fostering closer synergies between countries of the region as well as between the Sahel and neighbouring countries. Given the proximity of the Sahel to the EU and its immediate neighbourhood, it notes the need, in order to better tackle cross-border issues, to explore further a common space for dialogue and cooperation between the Sahel, the Maghreb and the EU in relevant sectors such as security and migration. This should be done in the framework of the existing mechanisms and dialogues such as the Rabat and Khartoum processes on migration and development.

3. The EU reiterates its readiness to continue working closely with the countries of the Sahel region to support their efforts to achieve peace, security and development. The implementation of the Action Plan will be carried out with the full ownership and under the primary responsibility of the countries concerned, and in coordination with key international and regional organisations and other partners, in particular the United Nations (UN), the African Union (AU), the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), the West African Economic and Monetary Union (WAEMU), the G5 Sahel, the Lake Chad Basin Commission and the World Bank, as well as with civil society. In this respect, the EU underlines the importance of continuing this close international and regional coordination, including between the EUSR for the Sahel, the UN Secretary-General's Special Envoy for the Sahel, the Special Representative of the UN Secretary-General for Mali and the AU High Representative for Mali and the Sahel, aiming at creating synergies in the implementation of respective strategies.

4. The Council invites the High Representative and the Commission and Member States to start implementing the Sahel Regional Action Plan. The Council will revert to the matter as appropriate, and at least once a year.

ANNEX

EU SAHEL STRATEGY
REGIONAL ACTION PLAN 2015-2020

SUMMARY

Security and development in the Sahel region are crucial to the European Union. Extreme poverty, internal tensions, institutional weaknesses, a growing demography, frequent food crises, fragile governance and rule of law, poor human rights records, irregular migration and related crimes such as trafficking in human beings and smuggling of migrants, radicalisation and violent extremism are serious challenges to the region and have potential spill-over effects outside the region, including the EU.

The Regional Action Plan (RAP) aims at the implementation of the EU Sahel Strategy², by identifying actions and initiatives for years to come, in coordination with Member States' activities, building on its objectives and taking into account acquired experience. It establishes bridges between the various EU initiatives and activities, and reinforces synergies in line with coordination efforts. The RAP therefore constitutes a framework for EU's action in the Sahel region applying a comprehensive approach in order to ensure that the policies, instruments and tools work together for the same objectives to generate better results, in full coordination with Member States.

The Sahel Strategy itself remains valid and its original strategic objective should be confirmed and commitment towards implementation renewed, with a division of labour between EU institutions and Member States. However, the need to focus on selected domains is equally essential for future activities in the framework of this strategy and the RAP identifies four domains to be further reinforced: 1) Preventing and countering radicalisation, 2) Creating appropriate conditions for Youth, 3) Migration and mobility, 4) Border management, fight against illicit trafficking and transnational organised crime.

The RAP implementation should remain flexible in order to factor-in changes in the Region and should reflect the strategies of local partners. It will build on existing and on-going programmes and activities. The identification of concrete initiatives in the region will be guided by their potential to contribute to achieving the objectives. The evolution of the situation in Northern Mali and the implementation of the expected peace agreement will have an impact to be factored in as far as possible. Finally, complementarity will be sought with other relevant EU strategies and action plans (Joint Africa-EU Strategy³, EU Strategy on the Gulf of Guinea⁴, Joint Communication on closer cooperation and regional integration in the Maghreb⁵, the Rabat Process Rome Declaration and Programme⁶ and others).

INTRODUCTION

In response to violent extremism, radicalisation, illicit trafficking and terrorism in parallel with challenges of extreme poverty and fragile governance in the Sahel, the Council adopted in 2011 its Strategy for Security and Development in the Sahel covering Mali, Mauritania and Niger. The Strategy was revised and discussed during the Foreign Affairs Council in March 2014. The Council concluded to extend the implementation of the Strategy to Burkina Faso and Chad⁷, and suggested developing a new Regional Action Plan (RAP) for the implementation of the Strategy.

The Council further concluded that the objectives and the underlying strategic lines of action of the Sahel Strategy in the fields of development, security, peace-building, conflict prevention, and counter-radicalisation remain pertinent, as does their interdependence.

Member States have actively supported the implementation of the Strategy, which has provided the framework for their engagement in the Sahel, in some cases along with the development of their own specific strategies.

However, the current situation in the Sahel remains as delicate as four years ago and maybe even more challenging, emphasising the need for renewed commitment to the ambitious objectives of the Strategy as well for further enhancing the coherence and effectiveness of EU actions. Consequently, the main objective of the RAP is to build on acquired experience, pursue the objectives, and to ensure that the relevant Commission services and the EEAS continue to deliver on them with concrete actions. For this purpose, the RAP identifies priority actions to be further strengthened and implemented together with on-going as well as already planned activities.

⁷ The Council also concluded that "political dialogue on conflict prevention and security issues in the Sahel region will be stepped up also in relevant West African and neighbouring countries, including Senegal, Nigeria and Cameroon as well as countries of the Maghreb".

The relevant Commission services and the EEAS will strive to take better into account the fact that the Sahel is adjacent to the neighbourhood countries of the European Union, and will therefore explore ways to enhance cooperation on a European/Maghreb/Sahel level, as well as with other relevant West African and neighbouring countries, on issues of common interest, such as the priorities of the RAP.

The present RAP is the result of a process of consultations with inputs from stakeholders including Delegations in the Sahel, as well as Member States⁸ and others. As the situation in the Sahel region is unstable, this document will remain a flexible and dynamic tool for the implementation of the EU Sahel strategy in years to come.

CONTEXT ANALYSIS

The security situation of the Sahel region remains extremely volatile, with a particularly precarious situation in northern Mali and around Lake Chad, by means of spill-over effects from the South of Libya and the North of Nigeria. Niger is an important hub and transit country for migratory movements through the Sahel. Challenges linked to the extreme poverty, lack of stability including economic fragility remain as acute as in 2011. Irregular migration and related crimes such as trafficking in human beings and smuggling of migrants, corruption, illicit trafficking and transnational organised crime are thriving particularly where there is weak and/or little presence of any governmental authority. Migration pressure is mounting, with serious implications both for the countries in the region and the EU.

The Sahel region is still regularly hit by humanitarian crises, with more than 20 million people food insecure in 2015 of which more than 4 million in need of emergency food assistance, and as such remains one of the main regions in Africa targeted by humanitarian assistance. Drought, climate change and health issues will continue to affect (growing) local populations, and there is a critical need to address underlying vulnerabilities and build resilience to future shocks (climatic and conflict-related) at national and community levels, with interventions covering social protection, food security, nutrition and livelihoods in particular.

⁸ Addendum 3 provides an overview of Member States engagement in the Sahel region.

At the same time, there is a lack of government capacity and sometimes not enough political commitment in the region to ensure the protection of human rights which constitute both a root cause and symptom of recurring crises in the region. This is exacerbated by weak rule of law institutions, corruption, a general lack of accountability, social and gender inequities and repeated discriminatory practices against certain vulnerable groups. Strengthening human rights and the rule of law will remain a critical component of this regional action plan as a response to the multidimensional crisis in the Sahel.

The EU Conflict Early Warning System shows that currently the overall situation in Sahel is worsening or at best stagnating, as corroborated by the Human Development Index⁹, which does not display any improvement either. As a result, the Sahel region is still characterised by huge development challenges, instability and broad political divisions. Factors originally identified in the EU Strategy for Security and Development are thus still broadly at play¹⁰.

In particular, the situation in Mali is still very preoccupying despite the French intervention and the deployment of United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilisation Mission in Mali (MINUSMA), with numerous terrorist attacks and high number of casualties among peace-keeping forces, the Malian army and the civilian population, especially in northern regions. The Brussels Donors' Conference (May 2013) succeeded in mobilising substantial resources to jump-start the country and the follow-up mechanism put in place allowed for a careful monitoring of the implementation. The restoration of constitutional order has been a success, but many challenges remain, and the implementation of a credible, inclusive and sustainable peace agreement will be crucial and require a renewed commitment from the countries in the region and the international community, including the EU.

On the regional level, new initiatives have been launched in order to respond to the need for closer coordination and collective action. Among others:

- Global Alliance for Resilience Initiative (AGIR) launched in Ouagadougou in December 2012.
- The creation of the G5 in 2014 by the Heads of State of Burkina Faso, Chad, Mali, Mauritania, and Niger to address the main challenges in Sahel, particularly in the field of security and development;
- The Bamako ministerial platform launched after the joint high level visit to the region in 2013 (UN, African Union, World Bank, EU,) to coordinate the Sahel strategies;
- The Nouakchott Process in 2013 to promote collective security in the Region under the AU auspices;
- The revitalisation of the Lake Chad Basin Commission to tackle common border issues, in view of the increased threat to the Sahel region from Boko Haram activities.

These initiatives should be supported according to the Union's interests and priorities. However, this requires a thorough assessment of their added value, a prioritisation and the right choice of instruments.

The EU reiterates the need for involvement and participation of both women and men in mediation, peace negotiations and peace building efforts.

Regarding EU activities, the nomination of the EU Special Representative (EUSR) in 2013 allowed for a more pro-active approach towards the region and enhanced visibility of the EU. The implementation of the Sahel Strategy itself led to a common reflection on how to better "think and work regionally". In this regard, the extension of the Strategy to Burkina Faso and Chad in 2014 provided a new opportunity to broaden the scope of EU activities¹¹. The comprehensive early warning assessments that were carried out in 2013 and 2014 for eight countries in the wider Sahel region¹² and the resulting additional conflict analysis workshops for Nigeria and Chad, provided valuable input in terms of arriving at a shared analysis of risks of conflict and defining EU interests, added value and options for action to mitigate these risks for each country and at regional level.

Furthermore, Commission services and the EEAS will strive to take better into account the fact that the Sahel is adjacent to the neighbourhood countries of the European Union. There is a need to develop a common space for dialogue and cooperation between EU, Maghreb and Sahel, as well as with other West African countries.

Finally, despite the fact that the Strategy itself remains valid, the need to focus on selected domains, such as integrated border management, smuggling and trafficking and transnational organised crime, mobility and migration including forced migratory movements, response to the demographic challenges and youth employment in relation with anti-radicalisation, is imposing itself for future activities in the framework of this strategy, which should also aim at promoting human rights and democracy in the region.

This is what the present Regional Action Plan is addressing.

¹¹ Inter-service missions deployed in these countries helped identify scope of cooperation in the strategy context

IMPLEMENTATION OF THE STRATEGY AND LESSONS LEARNT

The Sahel Strategy was the result of an extensive process of negotiations and planning and responds to a shared concern of the EU and its Member States about the increased security threats in the Sahel. This common focus has been the vehicle for a continuous dialogue and close coordination at headquarters as well as joint actions in the field. The engagement of the EU, along with the activities of the Member States¹³, has been impressive over the past four years in the Sahel. The focus on the security-development nexus promoted new ways of defining policy.

From the beginning, a wide range of EU instruments and tools were deployed. When the Sahel Strategy was adopted, the 10th European Development Fund was about halfway through its implementation (2008-2013). However, under this instrument, more than EUR 1.5 billion were allocated to Mali, Mauritania, and Niger to support actions identified in the strategy and among others: the social sectors, food and nutrition security and rural development, employment, good governance, rule of law, justice reforms, and decentralisation. In addition, the Regional Indicative Programme for West Africa has been supporting projects contributing to sectors such as peace and security, governance, economic integration, and resilience. As a result, the vast majority of the actions have been in line with the strategic orientation of action and objectives of the Sahel Strategy.

Nonetheless, with the aim of focusing action even more the country financial envelopes were revised in the context of the mid-term and ad hoc reviews in order to correspond even better to the objectives of the strategy and to find the necessary resources for new activities. However, in compliance with commitments made between the partner countries and the EU under the 10th EDF, as well as the existing procedures, this exercise required time. This partly explains why some activities only started in 2013.

¹³ See Addendum III, which gives an overview of Members States' engagement in Sahel.

The Instrument for Stability (IfS) as well as its successor, the Instrument contributing to Stability and Peace (IcSP), have been extensively used across the Sahel region, under both their short-term/crisis response and the long-term components. In the field of security, the activities include support to civilian law enforcement and justice services to restore security and ensure protection of civilians (Mali), support to security at community level, including to the creation of municipal police bodies (Niger), and the reinforcement of border management capacities (Mauritania, Niger-Nigeria). Support has also been provided to counter-terrorism and counter-radicalisation initiatives, the creation of the "Sahel Security College" (currently composed of representatives from Mali, Mauritania, Niger) endorsed by the G5 Sahel, the promotion of tolerance, dialogue, and freedom of speech, inter- and intra-faith dialogue, as well as providing educational support to Koranic schools (Mali, Nigeria, Niger), countering violent extremism through the creation of socio-economic opportunities, especially for young people (Chad, Niger, Nigeria). Disarmament, Demobilisation and Reintegration programmes promoting social and economic reintegration of former combatants/soldiers have also been supported (Nigeria, Chad). Following the 2013 early warning assessment, a literature review on Counter Violent Extremism (CVE) was commissioned and an expert coached several Delegations in the region on how to address CVE in their specific context.

The French led military Serval Mission in 2012-13 and the on-going Barkhane Mission launched in August 2014 have been essential in the fight against terrorism in the Sahel. In the same fight against terrorism and organised crime, the three CSDP missions¹⁴ in the Sahel have been important components of EU's response to the instability in the Sahel and the cross-border nature of the security threats. As crisis response measures, CSDP missions pursue short to medium-term objectives, but they offer natural synergies and complementarities with the longer term mandate of the development instruments' security components.

In March 2013, the High Representative appointed the EUSR for the Sahel. The work of the EUSR has been vital for enhancing the quality and impact of the EU's engagement in the Sahel, both regarding political, security and development areas. His role in the Malian peace talks, with support by a mediation team, has been essential for the EU, which could have important positive effects for the future stability, not only in Mali, but in the wider region as well.

There is no doubt that the EU has come a long way in addressing the challenges in the Sahel, overcoming the existing barriers and been able to ensure complementarity between the different EU instruments and missions/EDF as well as close coordination with Member States. But more must be done:

- In terms of strategic focus it seems particularly important to further develop:
 - 1) Preventing and countering radicalisation;
 - 2) Create appropriate conditions for Youth;
 - 3) Migration and mobility;
 - 4) Border management and fight against illicit trafficking and transnational organised crime.
- In terms of methodology, it is important to further reinforce the comprehensive approach of EU action in the Sahel, in particular ongoing efforts towards shared assessments and joint programming processes, through a consistent monitoring system. Such a robust monitoring system will generate more efficient and effective actions.

RENEWED COMMITMENT TO THE ORIGINAL STRATEGIC OBJECTIVE

The original strategic objective of the EU Sahel Strategy¹⁵, emphasising the development-security nexus as well as the four pillars for its implementation remain fully relevant and provide a comprehensive framework for EU action in the Sahel¹⁶:

Development, good governance and internal conflict resolution

Support to sustainable and inclusive socio-economic development and regional integration will be continued, drawing on lessons from the past, including: social services, especially health and education, resilience¹⁷, sustainable agriculture and rural development, food and nutrition security, infrastructure, private sector development, and addressing demographic challenges.

The EU will continue to provide support to better governance including through public sector modernisation (e.g. ICTs), including public financial management with a particular emphasis on improvement of, and access to, justice, and the fight against corruption and impunity as a matter of priority. Democracy and human rights will be promoted, including support to elections, local governance and decentralisation, and civil society organisations, taking into account the need for more gender-equal representation in decision-making bodies and in all spheres of public life. In this context, the principle of gender equality will also be supported in all the actions contained in the Action Plan. In addition, tackling impunity for human rights abuses and promoting accountability in this respect will be strongly advocated by the EU in the context of this Regional Action Plan.

¹⁵ The long term objective (5-10 years) of the Strategy was: "Enhancing political stability, security, good governance, social cohesion in the Sahel states and economic and education opportunities, thus setting the conditions for local and national sustainable development so that the Sahel region can prosper and no longer be a potential safe haven for AQIM and criminal networks; assisting at national level in mitigating internal tensions, including the challenges posed by violent extremism on which AQIM and other criminal groups feed".

¹⁷ Through i.e. the AGIR initiative.

Particular attention will be paid to the fight against smuggling and trafficking and to mixed migratory flows in full respect of the rights of the migrants, and synergies between migration and development will be further developed.

Political and diplomatic action

With the adoption of the EU Strategy, other international actors followed suit in the implementation of their own Sahel Strategy (including UN, AU, WB, and Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS)) reinforcing the need to “think regional”.

The Strategy has further consolidated the EU as a key international actor to address the recurrent regional crisis and is recognised as such. This gives the EU a special responsibility, which is currently reflected through the active participation in key political processes, including the Algiers peace talks on Mali.

The EUSR has represented the EU in all the international fora and coordination meetings dealing with the Sahel, giving coherence and a face to EU diplomacy in this domain and will continue to do so.

EU-Delegations have promoted the regional approach vis-à-vis the local authorities in their respective countries. Initiating a regular high level political dialogue with the G5 Sahel and encouraging further integration in matters of security and stability among the Sahelian states will be essential for the EU in the immediate future. Support to the G5 Sahel will be envisaged by the EU and its Member States.

In order to address the challenges beyond the five Sahel countries, appropriate partnerships with the African Union, ECOWAS, the Nouakchott Process, the G5 Sahel, the Community of Sahel-Saharan States (CEN-SAD) and the Lake Chad Basin Commission could be promoted in a more systematic and concrete way in accordance with their roles and objectives. Closer cooperation with Maghreb countries, as well as other relevant West African countries, will also be encouraged.

Security and the rule of law

In the field of security, Commission services and the EEAS will continue to promote and provide support to national and regional endeavours related to security sector reform, security governance, the link between security and justice, and integrated border management. Commission services and the EEAS will step up support to national and regional efforts in the fight against terrorism, smuggling of migrants and trafficking in human beings, other forms of trafficking and transnational organised crime. These challenges need to be further addressed, including in a context of corruption in parts of the political and security apparatus of many of these countries. Commission services and the EEAS will continue to engage with the Sahel countries -and whenever needed the wider region- on counter-terrorism and identify opportunities for cooperation, including through CSDP missions. In addition, knowledge sharing and build upon lessons learnt in this field shall be facilitated.

Commission services and the EEAS will continue to promote independent, more efficient, fair, and more accessible justice systems at national and regional levels and will strengthen the criminal justice response to terrorism. This includes promotion of access to a credible justice that safeguards human rights, reduces impunity and reinforces the fight against corruption. Commission services and the EEAS step up support to develop effective criminal justice responses to terrorism and organised crime.

Fight against and prevention of violent extremism and radicalisation

Many of the priorities listed under development, good governance and internal conflict resolution will have a direct or indirect impact on the fight against and prevention of violent extremism and radicalisation. They will address, among others, marginalisation, unmet basic needs, unemployment, lack of education, and human security.

Strengthening young people's short and long term economic prospects and offering educational opportunities will be key for the prevention.

Commission services and the EEAS will mainstream prevention into the programmes in order to focus interventions on specific geographical areas and/or target groups where radicalisation and recruitment are particularly concentrated, in cooperation with regional and national stakeholders, including civil society groups. Additional preventive action taken as a result of options identified through the early warning assessments will also be monitored.

REINFORCED ACTIONS FOR THE RAP

From the above four strategic lines of action as well as the challenges identified in the context analysis and lessons learnt, a set of priority actions to be strengthened can be identified. These actions will be dealt with through diplomatic and political efforts as well as taken into account in the identification of future initiatives.

Preventing and countering radicalisation

Current EU programming in the Sahel contains several elements to address radicalisation and recruitment, but much more must be done both on the political and diplomatic level as well as on the security and development levels. Radicalisation in the Sahel is fuelled by a combination of complex factors and circumstances, which go beyond poverty, discrimination, poor economic conditions, etc. Hence, the suggested response has to go beyond traditional development work and has to be both prevent-specific and prevent-relevant¹⁸.

Prevent-specific activities are aimed at stopping people from turning to terrorism; prevent-relevant activities address the conditions that could be conducive to radicalisation and the spread of terrorism. Better understanding and tackling the underlying drivers such as unemployment, lack of education, exclusion, human security, etc. is important. Many of these drivers could be addressed through an appropriate development response that provides for a long-term perspective.

¹⁸ In line with the EU strategy for Combatting Radicalisation and Recruitment to Terrorism (doc 14781/1/05).

ACTION AREA 1: In accordance with Article 210 TFEU, Commission services and the EEAS will coordinate EU and Member States development programmes to focus, when appropriate, on specific geographic areas/communities where radicalisation and recruitment are concentrated, and try to further integrate prevention and counter radicalisation into development work and programming. Develop and carry out prevent-specific projects, including related to ideology and with religious actors, as well as access to resources and other root causes of radicalisation. Carry out a study on the impact of Salafism/Wahhabism in the region. Support capacity development of media, NGOs, civil society and local authorities. Support institutions and organisations that promote moderate and peaceful Islam and Islamic Civil Society Organisations working for peace. Explore additional avenues through targeted analysis, training and support, both of EU Delegations and other target groups. Focus on the root causes of radicalisation, i.e. extreme poverty, unemployment, weakness of educational systems.

Youth:

Economic development in the Sahel is mainly driven by agriculture and extractive industries. Stronger non-mineral based economic growth is necessary to create employment and to significantly reduce widespread poverty and income inequalities that continue to prevail across the Sahel. More effort is needed to create job opportunities throughout all sectors, in particular for the youth.

Activities to prevent radicalisation are important in the context of the youth bulge, which is one of the main challenges for the Sahel region. To address this issue and to keep young people from being radicalised or recruited by networks engaged in transnational organised crime and smuggling, it is critical to offer valuable alternatives and opportunities, to reduce inequalities and enhance social cohesion as well as trust in national institutions and in the future of their respective countries.

Another aspect relevant to the Sahel is that post-conflict situations pose specific challenges for the youth (e.g., recently disarmed idle men and displaced young men), many of whom have been deprived of education, and often have been combatants or part of trafficking networks.

This also underlines the importance of employment and creation of jobs for young people.

ACTION AREA 2: Provide assistance relevant for youth, including education and training as well as job creation, and ensure equal opportunities for boys and girls. Mainstream youth empowerment through identification of indicators to monitor and to promote education and youth employment so as to offer alternatives to illegal activities/extremist actions. Provide further analysis on how to support youth as agents for positive change. Build youth resilience, e.g. by further promoting in EU and Member States programmes, wherever possible, economic and employment opportunities (through support to SMEs and key value chains, the recruitment of local labour, etc.) and the reduction of inequalities. A special reflexion could also be launched on demography challenge in order to know how to better address it. Demography should become progressively and more systematically part of the political dialogue with beneficiary countries. More broadly, mobilise EU and Member States' instruments to improve social cohesion and inclusive economic growth, including regional integration, in particular through the implementation of EPADP (Economic Partnership Agreement Development Programme).

Migration and Mobility

People move to escape poverty and conflict, seek protection from persecution or serious harm and build a better life. For individuals migration can be one of the most powerful and immediate strategies for poverty reduction and in the absence of opportunities in terms of employment many youth seek for better opportunities by migrating. The EU should focus on 1) preventing and fighting against irregular migration, smuggling and trafficking in human beings; and 2) on the development-migration nexus maximising the development impact of migration and mobility 3) promoting international protection 4) organising mobility and legal migration¹⁹. The situation in Niger, as a major transit country, will require strengthened efforts, notably to reinforce and accompany the actions already launched by the CSDP mission EUCAP Sahel Niger. These efforts should be focused in priority on the areas of Agadez and Arlit.

¹⁹ 3359th Council Meeting: Press Release, Foreign Affairs – Development Issues, 16854/14

ACTION AREA 3: Reinforce the development-migration nexus and mainstream migration into the EU and Member States collective action based on the Global Approach to Migration and Mobility and the Rabat process as well as other relevant processes. Address demographic challenges in the region which can aggravate pre-existing grievances (e.g. land use, food security).

Border management, illicit trafficking, and transnational organised crime

Management of cross-border issues is crucial for the stability and security in the Sahel region, with national, regional and global implications, including for the EU²⁰. The EU currently supports a number of activities to fight illicit trafficking (partnership with UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and ECOWAS) as well as in border zones, both in the area of security and development. However, a broader and more comprehensive engagement is required to encourage local authorities and administrations to work closely together and to respond to challenges of radicalisation, violent extremism, terrorism, smuggling of migrants, trafficking in human beings and other forms of trafficking and transnational organised crime, as well as control of territory and irregular migration. Particular attention will be paid to the international norms and standards with regard to international protection and migrants in transit. This commitment should take into account development, stability of state structures and the protection of civilians.

²⁰ Regulation (EU) No 230/2014 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 March 2014 establishing an instrument contributing to stability and peace.

ACTION AREA 4: Actions on border management, trafficking in human beings and other forms of trafficking, and transnational organised crime – involving all EU instruments, in coordination with Member States – in particular focusing on enhanced inter-agency and cross-border cooperation and information sharing will be pursued. As stated in the Council conclusions of November 2013, endorsed by the European Council of December 2013, as well as in the 4th EU-Africa summit declaration, integrated management of cross-border issues is one crucial element of the stability and security of the broader Sahel region. The EU will consider the implementation of integrated border management projects, in the Sahel region as well as around Lake Chad, including actions both in the fields of development and security, in full consistency with the comprehensive approach. To that end, the EU could draw on on-going programmes and activities contributing to integrated border management in the broader Sahel region already led by Member States. The EU also encourages CSDP civilian missions already deployed in the Sahel region, EUCAP Sahel Mali and EUCAP Sahel Niger within their operational design and strength, to pursue support to local efforts aiming at developing local border management capacities and contribute actively to the international coordination on the ground. In this context, EUCAP Sahel Niger should in particular continue its efforts in Agadez and Diffa regions, to be strengthened with additional capacities agreed upon through established procedures, when conditions allow. A regional meeting of Heads of Delegation around Lake Chad (similar to the Dakar meeting of June 2014) will be held.

INSTRUMENTS AND INITIATIVES

The implementation of the RAP will involve a range of instruments and mechanisms/modalities in a division of labour between the EU and its Member States, aimed at strengthening the EU Comprehensive Approach. Addendum II and III show in detail on-going as well as planned activities. However, it should be noted that in view of the dynamic and volatile context of the Sahel, not all activities can be foreseen nor identified at this stage, and the Matrix will need to be regularly updated.

Since the adoption of the Sahel Strategy in 2011, substantial support has been provided to the countries of the region. Many of these activities are ongoing and will be continued; others will be initiated in response to new or changing challenges.

The financial support to the implementation of the RAP contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Sahel Strategy for the coming years should come from both Member States bilateral action and EU instruments.

The indicative budget of the 11th EDF for the five Sahel countries for 2014-2020 amounts to EUR 2.47 billion, and an important part of planned programmes could contribute to the implementation of the present RAP. In addition, some funds from the Regional Indicative Programme for West Africa, the new Pan-African Programme (PANAF) the Development Cooperation Instrument (DCI) could be assigned to projects and activities in the Sahel region, in accordance with the objectives, governance and guidelines of the respective programmes. Activities under the 10th EDF will continue to be implemented during the coming years and contribute to the objectives of the Sahel Strategy.

While the mandate of the EDF is multi-annual with the main focus on long-term development, other instruments have different mandates with different time horizons and concentrating on security, stability and peace.

Under Article 3 and 4 of its Regulation²¹, the IcSP objective is to respond to situations of crisis or emerging crisis to prevent conflicts (Art. 3, actions are not programmable), and to support conflict prevention, crisis preparedness and peace-building (Art. 4, subject to programming). Under Article 5, the IcSP focuses on global and trans-regional threats and emerging threats and is programmable.

Other available instruments are the CSDP missions (e.g. the ongoing missions EUCAP SAHEL Niger and Mali and EUTM Mali).

²¹ Regulation \(EU\) No 230/2014, OJ L77, 1, 15/032014

Improvement and strengthening of human rights, the protection of civilians and particularly women and children will continue to be a priority and the EU should mobilise all relevant instruments in the region to make progress on this front (European Instrument for Democracy and Human Rights, etc.), including providing support to civil society organisations. The EU will also push for, the complete ratification and effective implementation of the various AU and ECOWAS instruments adopted by the countries in the Sahel on human rights, as well as at global level by the United Nations. Moreover, the national and regional mechanisms established to monitor the implementation of human rights will be reinforced and supported.

Corresponding to the needs of affected populations, EU humanitarian action²² may be deployed in the Sahel region, regularly struck by natural disasters and afflicted by conflicts. Such humanitarian aid would be mobilised in accordance with the humanitarian principles and international humanitarian law.

In accordance with the European Neighbourhood Instrument's (ENI) objectives and principles, the EU could consider mobilising the ENI to target specific objectives of common interest in the Sahel-Maghreb region. These actions are subject to programming but in exceptional cases special measures can be launched.

The planned programmes and activities of the Members States in the Sahel²³ should understandably be taken into consideration as an integral part of the overall EU intervention, joint programming being an important instrument for this coordination.

Mediation support and conflict analysis will continue to be provided if considered a priority.

²² The European Commission's Humanitarian Aid and Civil Protection department (ECHO), formerly known as the European Community Humanitarian Aid Office.

²³ Addendum III provides an overview of Member States engagement in the Sahel region.

MONITORING SYSTEM

In order to improve monitoring of the implementation of the RAP a mechanism will be developed through which all EU and Member States activities could be made visible in order to highlight how they contribute to achieving the objectives of the Sahel Strategy.

Such a monitoring system²⁴ will survey the delivery of actions and initiatives, providing proper reporting for documentation and management information, taking into account lessons learnt from the ground and local partners' suggestions. It will help focus EU's actions in the Sahel even more, ensure that synergies and complementarities between the different instruments and Member States' actions are pursued to their maximum and ensure a smooth transition from short term crisis response measures to long term action. This system should imply the mobilisation of Council relevant groups, including in particular PSC and COAFR, and considering the coordinating role of the EUSR for the Sahel.

Proper risk management entails a strategic approach through which substantial risks and their possible impact on the programmes and their progress are identified in due time. For this purpose the RAP will integrate the regional and country conflict risk assessments and options for preventive action of the EU Conflict Early Warning System as part of the monitoring and reporting on the progress of the RAP.

XXXX

²⁴ Existing tools for monitoring will be used to the largest extent possible in order to provide a yearly written report.
