Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,

Whereas:

- (1) Since the adoption of Directive (EU) 2015/2366 of the European Parliament and of the Council³, the retail payment services market underwent significant changes largely related to the increasing use of cards and other digital means of payment, the decreasing use of cash and the growing presence of new players and services, including digital wallets and contactless payments. The Covid-19 pandemic and the transformations it brought to consumption and payment practices has increased the importance of having secure and efficient digital payments.
- (2) The Communication from the Commission on a Retail Payments Strategy for the EU⁴ announced the launch of a comprehensive review of the application and impact of Directive (EU) 2015/2366 “which should include an overall assessment of whether it is still fit for purpose, taking into account market developments”.
- (3) Directive (EU) 2015/2366 aimed at addressing barriers to new types of payment services and improving the level of consumer protection and security. The evaluation of the impact and application of Directive (EU) 2015/2366 by the Commission found that Directive (EU) 2015/2366 has been largely successful with regard to many of its objectives, but also identified certain areas where the objectives of the Directive have not been fully achieved. In particular, the evaluation identified problems regarding divergent implementation and enforcement of Directive (EU) 2015/2366, which have directly impacted competition between payment service providers, by leading to effectively different regulatory conditions in Member States because of different interpretation of the rules, encouraging regulatory arbitrage.

- (4) There should be no room for ‘forum shopping’ where payment service providers choose, as home country, those Member States where the application of Union rules on payment services is more advantageous for them and provide cross-border services in other Member States which apply stricter interpretation of the rules or apply more active enforcement policies to payment service providers established there. That practice distorts competition. The Union rules on payment services should be harmonised by incorporating rules governing the conduct of payment services in a Regulation and separating them from the rules on authorisation and supervision of payment institutions, which should be governed by this Directive , and not continue to be governed by Directive (EU) 2015/2366.
- (5) Even though the issuance of electronic money is regulated under Directive 2009/110/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council,⁵ the use of electronic money to fund payment transactions is to a very large extent regulated by Directive (EU) 2015/2366. Consequently, the legal framework applicable to electronic money institutions and payment institutions, in particular with regard to the conduct of business rules, is already substantially aligned. Over the years competent authorities in charge of authorisation and supervision of payment institutions and electronic money institutions have experienced practical difficulties in clearly delineating the two regimes and in distinguishing electronic money products and services from payment and electronic money services offered by payment institutions.

⁵ Directive 2009/110/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 September 2009 on the taking up, pursuit and prudential supervision of the business of electronic money institutions amending Directives 2005/60/EC and 2006/48/EC and repealing Directive 2000/46/EC (OJ L 267, 10.10.2009, p. 7).

This has led to concerns about regulatory arbitrage and an uneven playing field, as well as issues related to the circumvention of the requirements of Directive 2009/110/EC where undertakings that intend to issue electronic money take advantage of the similarities between payment services and electronic money services and apply for authorisation as a payment institution. It is therefore appropriate to further align the authorisation and supervision regime applicable to electronic money institutions with the regime applicable to payment institutions. However, the authorisation requirements, in particular initial capital and own funds, and some key basic concepts governing the electronic money business, including the issuance of electronic money, electronic money distribution and redeemability, are distinct from the services provided by payment institutions. It is therefore appropriate to preserve these specificities when combining the provisions of Directive (EU) 2015/2366 and Directive 2009/110/EC.

- (6) As evidenced in the review conducted by the Commission and given the evolution of the respective markets, businesses and risks, it is necessary to update the prudential regime for payment institutions, including those issuing electronic money as a payment service, by requiring a single authorisation for providers of payment services which do not take deposits. The authorisation regime for payment institutions, which will replace the regime applicable to electronic money institutions, should also apply to issuers of electronic money tokens that are not credit institutions and references in Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 to electronic money institutions issuing electronic money tokens should be read as references to payment institutions issuing electronic money tokens. However, the specificities of the regime established by Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 as regards electronic money institutions issuing electronic money tokens should be maintained taking into account Article 48(3) of that Regulation. The prudential regime applicable to payment institutions should be based on an authorisation, subject to a set of strict and comprehensive conditions, for legal persons offering payment services when not taking deposits. The prudential regime applicable to payment institutions should ensure that the same conditions apply Union-wide to the activity of providing payment services.

(6a) In order to avoid unnecessary burden, it is important to ensure that streamlined procedures are in place for those undertakings that have been authorised as crypto-asset service providers in accordance with Article 63 of Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 and that apply for authorisation to provide payment services under this Directive. In that respect, it is necessary to make maximum use of the information that those undertakings provided during their crypto-asset service provider authorisation process. Therefore, those undertakings should submit information that overlaps with information previously provided during the authorisation procedures under Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 in its original form, provided that such information is still up-to-date. In cases where such information is no longer up-to-date, those undertakings should provide the updated information and documentation whilst indicating where such updates have been made.

- (7) It is appropriate to dissociate the service of enabling cash to be withdrawn from a payment account from the activity of servicing a payment account, as the providers of cash withdrawal services may not service payment accounts. The services of issuing payment instruments and of acquiring payment transactions, which were listed together in point 5 of the Annex to Directive (EU) 2015/2366 as if one could not be offered without the other, should be presented as two different payment services. Listing issuing and acquiring services separately should, together with distinct definitions of each service, clarify that the issuing and acquiring services may be offered separately by payment service providers.
- (8) Taking into account the rapid evolution of the retail payments market, and the constant new offering of payment services and payment solutions, it is appropriate to adapt some of the definitions under Directive (EU) 2015/2366, such as the definition of payment account, funds and payment instrument, to the realities of the market to ensure that Union legislation remains fit for purpose and technology neutral. To ensure consistency with the PSR, certain definitions are part of [PSR] and referenced in this Directive.

I

(13a) The clarification of the process and the various steps to be followed for the execution of a payment transaction is of significant importance for the rights and obligations of the parties involved in a payment transaction and for the application of strong customer authentication. The process leading to the execution of a payment transaction is either initiated by the payer or on his/her behalf, or by the payee. The payer initiates the payment transaction by placing a payment order. Once the payment order is placed, the payment service provider checks if the transaction has been authorised and authenticated including, where applicable, by applying strong customer authentication, and the payment service provider then validates the payment order. The payment service provider then takes the relevant steps to execute the payment transaction, including the transfer of funds.

- (14) Money remittance is a payment service that is usually based on cash provided by a payer to a payment service provider without any payment accounts being created in the name of the payer or the payee which remits the corresponding amount, to a payee or to another payment service provider acting on behalf of the payee. In some Member States, supermarkets, merchants and other retailers provide to the public a service enabling them to pay utilities and other regular household bills. Those bill-paying services should therefore be treated as money remittance.

- (16) Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 of 31 May 2023 lays down that electronic money tokens, as defined in that Regulation, are deemed to be electronic money. References to electronic money in this Directive should therefore be understood to include electronic money tokens, and electronic money tokens should be included in the definition of funds. However, the specificities of the regime established by Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 should be maintained. Therefore, the mere issuance of electronic money tokens should not trigger the authorisation requirements established in this Directive if the issuer is already authorised as a crypto-asset service provider or credit institution under Regulation (EU) 2023/1114, except where payment services are provided. Providing transfer services for crypto-assets on behalf of clients, as defined in Regulation 2023/1114, with electronic money tokens, could qualify as the payment service of execution of payment transactions, including when such transfers are provided as part of other crypto-asset services, unless such transfers are covered by a specific exclusion from the scope of this Directive and Regulation xx [PSR]. For example, the service of custody and administration of crypto-assets on behalf of clients, as defined in Regulation (EU) 2023/1114, does not constitute by itself a payment service. However, where a crypto-asset service provider offers this service and also provides transfer services for crypto-assets on behalf of clients with electronic money tokens, or payment services included in the scope of Regulation xx [PSR], then the respective services would qualify as payment services. Likewise, transactions where the electronic money tokens are used as collateral for the purpose of conducting transactions with financial instruments do not constitute a payment service. Also, the placing of crypto-assets, as defined in Regulation 2023/1114, does not, in itself, constitute a payment service.

Similarly, the exchange of electronic money tokens for funds or crypto-assets by a crypto-asset service provider acting in its own name, as seller or buyer of those electronic money tokens, without intermediating between a buyer and a seller, is not a payment service. Given the market evolution since the adoption of Directive (EU) 2015/2366, and in order to avoid disproportionate requirements for crypto-asset service providers that provide services with electronic money tokens in accordance with Regulation (EU) 2023/1114, and also to ensure legal clarity as regards the scope of application of this Directive and Regulation xx [PSR] to services with electronic money tokens, it is appropriate to exclude from the scope of application of this Directive and Regulation xx [PSR] certain types of payment transactions with electronic money tokens, as specified in Regulation xx [PSR].

- (17) The evaluation of the implementation of Directive (EU) 2015/2366 did not identify a clear need to substantially change the conditions for granting and maintaining authorisation as payment institutions or electronic money institutions prescribed under, respectively, Directives 2007/64/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council⁶ and Directive 2015/2366/EU, on the one hand, and Directive 2009/110/EC on the other hand. Such conditions continue to include prudential requirements proportionate to the operational and financial risks faced by payment institutions, including institutions providing electronic money services as a payment service in the course of their business. It is appropriate as regards certain payment services to add to the documentation required in support of an application for authorisation as a payment institution a winding-up plan for the eventuality of failure, proportionate to the business model of the future payment institution. That winding-up plan should be appropriate to support an orderly wind-up of activities under applicable national law, including continuity or recovery of any critical activities performed by outsourced service providers, agents or distributors. To avoid that authorisation is granted for services that are not effectively provided by a payment institution, it is necessary to specify that a payment institution should not be obliged to obtain an authorisation for payment services that it does not intend to provide.

- (18) The EBA Peer Review on authorisation under Directive (EU) 2015/2366 published in January 2023⁷ concluded that deficiencies in the authorisation process have led to a situation where applicants are subject to different supervisory expectations as regards the requirements for authorisation as a payment institution or electronic money institution across the Union, and that sometimes the process of granting an authorisation may take an exceedingly long time. To ensure a level playing field and a harmonised process for the granting of an authorisation to undertakings applying for a payment institution license, it is appropriate to impose to competent authorities a time limit of 3 months for the authorisation process to be concluded, after the receipt of all the information required for the decision.
- (19) To ensure more consistency in the application process for payment institutions, it is appropriate to mandate the EBA to develop draft regulatory technical standards on authorisation, including on the information to be provided to the competent authorities in the application for the authorisation of payment institutions, a common assessment methodology for granting authorisation or for registration, what can be considered as a comparable guarantee to professional indemnity insurance and the criteria to be used to stipulate the minimum monetary amount of professional indemnity insurance or a comparable guarantee. The EBA should therefore take into account the experience acquired in the application of its Guidelines on the information to be provided by applicant payment service providers to national competent authorities for authorisation or registration, and of its Guidelines on the application of the criteria used to specify the minimum monetary amount of the professional indemnity insurance or other comparable guarantee.

⁷ European Banking Authority, EBA/REP/2023/01, Peer Review Report on authorisation under PSD2.

- (20) The prudential framework applicable to payment institutions should continue to rest on the premise that those institutions are prohibited from accepting deposits from payment service users and are only permitted to use funds received from payment service users for rendering payment services. Consequently, it is appropriate that prudential requirements applicable to payment institutions reflect the fact that payment institutions engage in more specialised and limited activities than credit institutions, thus generating risks that are narrower and easier to monitor and control than those that arise across the broader spectrum of activities of credit institutions.
- (21) Competent authorities should pay particular attention in considering applications for authorisation as a payment institution to the governance plan submitted as part of that application. Payment institutions should address the potentially detrimental effect of poorly designed governance arrangements on the sound management of risk by applying a sound risk culture at all levels. Competent authorities should monitor the adequacy of internal governance arrangements. It is appropriate for the EBA to adopt guidelines on internal governance arrangements, taking into account the variation of sizes and business models among payment institutions and respecting the principle of proportionality.

- (22) Whilst the authorisation requirements set out specific rules on information and communication technology (ICT) security controls and mitigation elements for obtaining an authorisation to provide payment services, those requirements should be aligned with the requirements under Regulation (EU) 2022/2554 of the European Parliament and of the Council⁸.
- (23) Payment institutions providing only payment initiation services or account information services do not hold client funds. Accordingly, it would be disproportionate to impose own funds requirements on those market players. Nevertheless, it is important to ensure that payment initiation service providers and account information service providers are able to meet their liabilities in relation to their activities. In order to ensure a proper coverage of the risks associated with payment initiation or account information services, it is appropriate to require providers offering those services to hold either a professional indemnity insurance or a comparable guarantee, and to further specify what risks need to be covered, in light of the provisions on liability included in Regulation XXX [PSR]. Taking into account the difficulties experienced by the providers of account information services and payment initiation services to contract a professional indemnity insurance covering the risks related to their activity, it is appropriate to provide for the possibility for those providers to choose to hold initial capital or own funds as an alternative to the professional indemnity insurance. Therefore, it is necessary to ensure that the level of own funds or initial capital that is beyond the level required pursuant to this Directive is not excluded from constituting a comparable guarantee, provided that the undertaking provides evidence, to the satisfaction of the relevant competent authority, that it has appropriate safeguards in place to ensure that the respective own funds or initial capital will be available at all times to cover the liabilities specified in this Directive.

⁸ Regulation (EU) 2022/2554 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 December 2022 on digital operational resilience for the financial sector and amending Regulations (EC) No 1060/2009, (EU) No 648/2012, (EU) No 600/2014, (EU) No 909/2014 and (EU) 2016/1011 (OJ L 333, 27.12.2022, p. 1).

- (24) To address the risks of acquisition of a qualified holding of a payment institution within the meaning of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council⁹, it is appropriate to require notification of the acquisition to the relevant competent authority.
- (25) To cater for the risks posed by their activities, payment institutions need to hold enough initial capital combined with own funds. Taking into account the possibility for payment institutions to engage in the wide range of activities covered by this Directive it is appropriate to adjust the level of the initial capital attached to individual services to the nature and the risks attached to these services.

- (26) Taking into account that the initial capital requirements applicable to payment institutions have not been adapted since the adoption of Directive 2007/64/EC, it is appropriate to adjust those requirements. In that context, the initial capital applicable to payment institutions that provide only money remittance services should be reviewed and adjusted in order to reflect inflation and to ensure a proportionate alignment with the initial capital requirements applicable to payment institutions that provide other payment services, thereby contributing to the harmonisation of prudential standards and the prevention of regulatory arbitrage. At the same time, given that many money remittance business models are relatively simple and present limited operational and prudential risks, such requirements should remain proportionate and lower than those applicable to payment institutions that provide other payment services, in order to avoid imposing an undue burden on such payment institutions, preserve competition and support financial inclusion. Furthermore, under Directive 2009/110/EC, electronic money institutions were authorised to provide electronic money issuance together with a broader range of payment services, which justified a higher initial capital requirement. Under this Directive, electronic money services should be limited to the issuance of electronic money and classified as a distinct payment service. In light of this narrower scope of activities and the associated risk profile, maintaining a high initial capital requirement would appear disproportionate. It is therefore appropriate to introduce a lower baseline initial capital requirement for electronic money services, aligned more closely with that applicable to other major payment services, while ensuring adequate prudential safeguards as part of the overall regulatory framework. Conversely, taking into account that the initial capital requirements applicable to payment institutions that provide only payment initiation services have only been implemented since the entry into force of Directive (EU) 2015/2366, and that no evidence was found with regard to the inadequacy of those requirements, those requirements should remain unchanged. Where a payment institution provides more than one payment service, a rule for the cumulation of initial capital requirements should apply to that institution.

- (27) The large variety of business models in the retail payments industry justifies the possibility to apply distinct methods for the calculation of own funds, which cannot however fall below the level of the relevant initial capital.
- (28) This Directive pursues the same approach as Directive (EU) 2015/2366, which allowed for several methods to be used for the purpose of calculating the combined own funds requirements with a certain degree of supervisory discretion to ensure that the same risks are treated the same way for all payment service providers. The use of the payment institution's payment volume of the previous year to compute its own funds requirements is the most adequate and the most applied own fund calculation method for most business models. For those reasons, and to improve consistency and ensure a level playing field, it is appropriate to require national competent authorities to prescribe the use of that method. It should however be possible for national competent authorities to deviate from that principle and to require payment institutions to apply other methods for business models that result in low volume but high value transactions. To ensure legal certainty and maximum clarity with regard to such business models, it is appropriate to mandate the EBA to develop draft regulatory technical standards.

- (29) Notwithstanding the objective of aligning the prudential requirements of payment institutions providing payment services ■ , it is appropriate to take account of the specificity of the business of issuing electronic money ■ , and to allow payment institutions that issue electronic money ■ to apply a more appropriate method to compute their own funds requirements.
- (29a) Unlike deposits held with a credit institution, funds of payment service users held with a payment institution are, in the case of insolvency of the payment institution, typically not covered by deposit guarantee schemes or the Union bank recovery and resolution framework. To protect users' funds in the case of insolvency of the payment institution, payment institutions should, therefore, be required to safeguard users' funds. Payment institutions should be able to meet the requirement to safeguard payment service users' funds by ensuring that those funds are, as soon as possible after having been received, no longer commingled with the funds of any natural or legal person other than payment service users, or by covering those funds by an insurance policy or some other comparable guarantee from an insurance company or a credit institution authorised in the EU. When the non-commingling option for safeguarding is implemented by a payment institution, it is appropriate to require that payment service users' funds, which by the end of the business day following the day when they were received by the payment institution have not been delivered by it to the payee, or transferred to the payee's payment service provider or to an intermediary payment service provider through which funds are transferred to the payee's payment service provider, be invested in secure, liquid low-risk assets or kept in a separate account with a credit institution or with a central bank. Member States and payment institutions should also ensure that payment service users funds are insulated in accordance with national law in the interest of the payment service users against the claims of other creditors of the payment institution, in particular in the event of insolvency. Insolvency law is not fully harmonised across the Union and procedures that are necessary to ensure that payment service users are seen as secured creditors may vary across Member States. Nevertheless, payment institutions should be able to safeguard payment service users' funds by depositing them in a separate account in a credit institution or at a central bank in a different Member State than its home Member State. As payment service users of payment institutions are only protected by insolvency law, it may take substantial time to wind up the estate and for the payment service users of an insolvent payment institution to receive their funds. Therefore, payment service users should, prior to entering into an agreement with a payment institution and to any material change in safeguarding measures used, be made aware of the payment institution's choice of safeguarding measures and the location of the safeguarded funds, as this might directly affect the payment service users' ability to raise a claim in the case of insolvency of the payment institution. In particular, the payment service user should always be made aware by the payment institution under the insolvency law and courts of which Member State a claim should be raised in the case of insolvency of the payment institution.

- (30) Where the same payment institution executes a payment transaction for both the payer and the payee and a credit line is provided to the payer, it is appropriate to safeguard the funds in favour of the payee once they represent the payee's claim towards the payment institution. International card schemes typically settle funds on a net basis, whereby the repayments and charge-backs are typically deducted from the gross amount received by the payment institution. As a result, a payment institution might receive less funds than the payment institution owes to its payment service users. To ensure that the payment service user's claims towards the payment institution are protected, the payment institution should always ensure that the safeguarded funds correspond to the claim of the payment service users.

(31) Considering the difficulties experienced by payment institutions in opening and maintaining payment accounts with credit institutions, payment institutions should also be able to safeguard payment service users' funds by holding those funds in a separate account, that is different from a settlement account, at a central bank. Opening of such an account should however be at the discretion of the central bank █, based on its organic law. Any refusal to open such an account by the central bank is expected to be duly justified to the relevant payment institution. To ensure a level playing field between payment institutions providing payment services by issuing electronic money and providing other services, it is appropriate to align as much as possible the regimes applicable to the safeguarding of users' funds, whilst preserving the specificities of electronic money. Furthermore, the requirements in this Directive should be without prejudice to the requirements in Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 regarding the investment of funds received by issuers of electronic money tokens in exchange for electronic money tokens. It is also appropriate to specify that the safeguarding measures in this Directive do not require payment institutions executing payment transactions with electronic money tokens to safeguard the electronic money tokens themselves. Applying the safeguarding methods set out in this Directive to electronic money tokens themselves would be very difficult to achieve in practice and disproportionate. Furthermore, Regulation (EU) 2023/1114 already requires crypto asset service providers to ensure the safekeeping of their clients' crypto assets, which includes electronic money tokens given the dual nature of these tokens as both crypto assets and funds. That requirement is without prejudice to the application of the safeguarding requirements in this Directive to funds other than electronic money tokens. Concentration risk is a significant risk faced by payment institutions, in particular where payment service users' funds are safeguarded in a single credit institution. It is therefore important to ensure that, where appropriate, payment institutions avoid concentration risk to the extent possible. For that reason, the EBA should be instructed █ to develop regulatory technical standards to specify circumstances in which it is appropriate to avoid concentration risk in the safeguarding of payment service users' funds.

(31a) Where a payment institution has been granted access to become a direct participant in a payment system designated under Directive 98/26/EC, including a payment system operated by a central bank, funds of payment service users held in a settlement account with such payment system should be considered as safeguarded to meet supervisory requirements provided that those funds are not commingled with the funds of any natural or legal person other than payment service users. This is necessary to ensure that payment institutions providing credit transfer services to their payment service users are able to compete with other payment service providers on equal conditions, including in the context of complying with the requirement to offer the service of sending and receiving instant credit transfers in euro in accordance with the Regulation (EU) 2024/886. Otherwise, those payment institutions would face a competitive disadvantage as they would incur additional costs stemming from the need to obtain either additional funds to ensure, in an efficient manner, sufficient liquidity in the settlement accounts to facilitate uninterrupted processing of outgoing and incoming payments, including instant payments, or insurance of the payment service users' funds held in the settlement accounts. Moreover, payment institutions' business models are based on provision of payment services and, therefore, when processing payments, they rely mostly on their client funds. In view of this, payment institutions should be able to use, in a safe manner and without significant additional costs, payment service users' funds to provide liquidity in their settlement account in a designated payment system. It should be the responsibility of a payment institution to ensure proper management of payment service users' funds when processing payments in the designated payment system. In cases where a part of an incoming payment transaction to a settlement account represents a fee earned by a payment institution for the services provided to its payment service user, the payment institution should ensure that such fee is separated from the funds of payment service users held in that settlement account without undue delay.

To ensure adequate protection of payment service users' funds, only funds held in settlement accounts with designated payment systems, which are subject to the Regulation (EU) 2025/1355 of the European Central Bank of 2 July 2025 on oversight requirements for systemically important payment systems or to a national framework for the oversight of payment systems based on the Principles for Financial Market Infrastructures of CPSS-IOSCO, should be considered to meet the safeguarding requirements of this Directive. In order to ensure comparability of prudential requirements as regards where payment service users' funds can be held for the purpose of their safeguarding, i.e. in credit institutions and central banks, such funds, when they are used for settlement of payment transactions, should be considered as safeguarded only in case of designated payment systems where they are ultimately held with credit institutions or central banks. The EBA should develop draft regulatory technical standards specifying the approach for segregation and reconciliation of payment service user funds held in settlement accounts, as part of a broader safeguarding risk management framework. Where deemed necessary for the soundness of monetary policy transmission mechanism or of financial system at large, operators of designated payment systems should be able to set a limit for a maximum amount of funds that can be held by a payment institution in a settlement account, which is sufficient for uninterrupted processing of outgoing and incoming payments, including instant credit transfers. To ensure protection of non-commingled payment service users' funds held in settlement accounts with designated payment systems in the event of the insolvency of a payment institution, Member States should ensure that those funds are insulated in accordance with national law in the interest of payment service users against the claims of other creditors of the payment institution. Where a payment institution uses an insurance policy or some other comparable guarantee from an insurance company or a credit institution to safeguard the funds of payment service users, it should be able to use both its funds and funds of payment service users in the same settlement account.

- (32) It should be possible for payment institutions to engage in other activities, beyond those covered by this Directive, including the provision of operational and closely related ancillary service and the operation of payment systems or other business activities regulated by applicable Union law and national law, such as foreign exchange services, safekeeping activities, storage and processing of data, as well as granting credit under the conditions established in this Directive. It should be noted that those ancillary services are not payment services and their provision on a cross-border basis is subject to the law host Member States may have in place.
- (33) Considering the higher risks of deposit-taking activity, it is appropriate to prohibit payment institutions offering payment services from accepting deposits from users, and to require them to only use funds received from users for providing payment services. Funds received from payment service users by payment institutions offering electronic money service should constitute neither a deposit nor other repayable funds received from the public within the meaning of Article 9 of Directive 2013/36/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council.¹⁰

¹⁰ Directive 2013/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 26 June 2013 on access to the activity of credit institutions and the prudential supervision of credit institutions and investment firms, amending Directive 2002/87/EC and repealing Directives 2006/48/EC and 2006/49/EC.

- (34) To limit the risks of payment accounts being used for other purposes than for the execution of payment transactions, it is appropriate to specify that when engaging in the provision of one or more of the payment services ■ , payment institutions should always hold payment accounts used exclusively for payment transactions.
- (34a) ‘Buy Now Pay Later’ services constitute primarily a consumer credit service subject therefore to EU legislation relating to consumer credit. Nonetheless, undertakings providing ‘Buy Now Pay Later’ services are subject to this Directive if they provide any of the payment services referred to in Annex I.
- (35) Payment institutions should be allowed to grant credit, but this activity should be subjected to some strict conditions. It is therefore appropriate to regulate the granting of credit by payment institutions in the form of credit lines and the issuance of credit cards, insofar as those services facilitate payment services and if credit is granted for a period not exceeding 12 months, including on a revolving basis. It is appropriate to allow payment institutions to grant short-term credit with regard to their cross-border activities, on the condition that it is refinanced using mainly the payment institution’s own funds, as well as other funds from the capital markets, and not the funds held on behalf of clients for payment services. That possibility should however be without prejudice to Directive 2008/48/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council¹¹ or other relevant Union law or national measures regarding conditions for granting credit to consumers. Given their principally lending nature, ‘Buy Now Pay Later’ services should not constitute a payment service. Those services are covered by ■ Directive 2023/2225 on consumer credits replacing Directive 2008/48/EC.

¹¹ Directive 2008/48/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 23 April 2008 on credit agreements for consumers and repealing Council Directive 87/102/EEC (OJ L 133, 22.5.2008, p. 66).

- (36) To ensure that evidence on the compliance with the obligations laid down in this Directive is duly preserved for a reasonable amount of time, it is appropriate to require payment institutions to keep all appropriate records for at least five years. Personal data should not be kept longer than necessary for ensuring that purpose and, where an authorisation has been withdrawn, data should not be kept longer than five years after that withdrawal.
- (37) To ensure that an undertaking does not provide payment services without being authorised, it is appropriate to require all undertakings intending to provide payment services to apply for an authorisation, except where this Directive provides for registration instead of authorisation. Furthermore, in order to ensure the stability and integrity of the financial system and payment systems and to protect consumers, such undertakings must be established in a Member State and effectively supervised. This requirement should also cover payment institutions issuing electronic money, given the significant new prudential risks associated with the possibility for electronic money institutions to also issue electronic money tokens. The establishment of a legal person in the EU should be required for electronic money issuers to enable effective supervision of those entities, and to align with Regulation 2023/1114/EU. Electronic money tokens are a form of crypto-asset which can scale up significantly in size and pose risks affecting financial stability, monetary sovereignty and monetary policy.

- (38) To avoid abuses of the right of establishment and to avoid cases where a payment institution establishes itself in a Member State without planning to perform any activity in that Member State, it is appropriate to require that a payment institution requesting authorisation in a Member State carries out at least part of its payment services business in that Member State. The obligation for an institution to carry out a part of its business in its home country, which was already imposed by Directive (EU) 2015/2366, has been interpreted very differently, with some home countries imposing that most of the business be carried out in their country. A ‘part’ should mean less than the majority of the institution’s business in order to preserve the “effet utile” of the payment institution’s freedom to provide cross-border services.
- (39) ■ To ensure a proper supervision of the payment institution that engages in activities other than the provision of payment services, it is appropriate to allow national competent authorities, where necessary, to require the establishment of a separate entity for the provision of payments ■ services. Such a decision by the competent authority should take account of the potential negative impact that an event affecting the other business activities could have on the payment institution’s financial soundness, or the potential negative impact arising from a situation where the payment institution would not be able to provide separate reporting on own funds in relation to its payment ■ activities and its other activities.

- (40) To ensure a proper ongoing supervision of payment institutions and the availability of accurate and up-to-date information, it is appropriate to require payment institutions to inform national competent authorities of any change in their business affecting the accuracy of the information provided with regard to authorisation, including with regard to additional agents or entities to which activities are outsourced. Competent authorities should, in the event of doubt, verify that the information received is correct.
- (41) To ensure a consistent authorisation regime of payment institutions throughout the Union, it is appropriate to lay out harmonised conditions under which national competent authorities may withdraw an authorisation issued to a payment institution.
- (42) To enhance transparency of the operations of payment institutions that are authorised by, or registered with, competent authorities of the home Member State, including their agents and branches, and to ensure a high level of consumer protection in the Union, it is necessary to ensure easy public access to the list of the undertakings providing payment services, with their related brands, which should be included in a public national register.

(43) To ensure that information on authorised or registered payment institutions or entities entitled under national law to provide payment services is available throughout the Union in a central register, the EBA should operate such a register in which it should publish a list of the names of the undertakings authorised or registered to provide payment services . Where that entails the processing of personal data, the publication at Union level of information on natural persons acting as agents is necessary to guarantee that only authorised agents operate in the internal market and is therefore in the interest of the adequate functioning of the internal market for payment services. Member States should ensure that the data that they provide on the undertakings concerned, including their agents and branches, is accurate and up-to-date, and transmitted to the EBA without undue delay and if possible in an automated way. The EBA should therefore develop draft regulatory technical standards to specify the methods and arrangements for the transmission of such information. Those draft regulatory technical standards should ensure a high level of granularity and consistency of the information. When developing those draft regulatory technical standards, the EBA should take into consideration the experience in applying Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2019/411.¹² To enhance transparency, it is appropriate that the information transmitted contains the brands of all payment services provided. Publication of personal data should occur in compliance with the rules on data protection in force. Where personal data are published, appropriate data protection safeguards that prevent further unintended dissemination of the information online should be implemented.

- (44) To enhance transparency and awareness of the services provided by payment initiation and account information service providers, it is appropriate that the EBA maintains a machine-readable list containing basic information on such undertakings and services provided by them. The information contained in this list should allow for the payment initiation and account information service providers to be identified unequivocally.
- (45) To expand the reach of their services, payment institutions may need to use entities providing payment services on their behalf, including agents ■. Payment institutions may also exercise their right of establishment in a host Member State, different from the home Member State, through branches. In such cases, it is appropriate that the payment institution communicates to the national competent authority all the relevant information related to agents ■ and branches and informs national competent authorities of any changes without undue delay. To ensure transparency vis-à-vis end users, it is also appropriate that agents, persons distributing or redeeming electronic money on behalf of a payment institution, and branches acting on behalf of a payment institution, inform payment service users of that fact. Moreover, in order to be considered as an agent, it should not be sufficient for a given entity merely to participate in the provision of a payment service or merely to carry out some client-facing activities. Only a natural or legal person acting in the name and on behalf of a payment institution in providing payment services that enters into possession of the funds on behalf of the payment institution or is directly involved in the payment institution's provision of payment services should be considered as an agent of a payment institution. In order to ensure clarity and trust in the provision of payment services via agents, it is essential that customers are made aware of the identity of the payment service provider whose services they are obtaining through the agent.

Further, payment institutions issuing electronic money should be allowed to distribute and redeem electronic money via persons acting on their behalf, without such distribution or redemption constituting a payment service. Those persons might involve other natural or legal persons. Neither those persons nor the other parties they involve should be deemed as agents unless they are providing payment services. The distribution of electronic money should also cover the receipt, in exchange for electronic money, of funds from the holder acquiring the electronic money. Where a person distributing electronic money acting on behalf of payment institutions receives, in exchange for electronic money, funds from a holder acquiring the electronic money, those funds should be considered to have been received by the payment institution itself, considering that this person is acting on behalf of the payment institution. The payment institution remains ultimately liable for those persons in the distribution or redemption of electronic money, for compliance with AML/CFT requirements, as regards those activities carried out via those persons, and for ensuring that policies, procedures and internal controls with regard to such distributors comply with Regulation (EU) 2024/1624. Where a payment institution that issues electronic money makes use of an agent, that agent should not itself issue electronic money. The issuance of electronic money should only be carried out by the payment institution authorised to issue electronic money.

- (46) In conducting their business, payment institutions might need to outsource operational functions ■ . To ensure that this is not done to the detriment of the continuing compliance of a payment institution with the requirements of its authorisation, or other applicable requirements under this Directive, it is appropriate to require a payment institution to inform without undue delay national competent authorities when it intends to outsource operational functions, and about any change regarding the use of entities to which activities are outsourced.
- (47) To ensure a proper mitigation of the risks that the outsourcing of operational functions might generate, it is appropriate to require that payment institutions take reasonable steps to ensure that such outsourcing does not violate the requirements of this Directive. Payment institutions should remain fully liable for any acts of their employees, or any agent ■ or outsourced entity.
- (48) To ensure the effective enforcement of the provisions of national law adopted pursuant to this Directive, Member States should designate competent authorities in charge of the authorisation and supervision of payment institutions, and the investigation of unauthorised payment services. Member States should ensure that competent authorities are granted all powers and resources necessary, including staff, to properly carry out their functions.

(49) The powers bestowed upon the competent authorities should include the power to intervene against unauthorised payment services, including the power to investigate alleged infringements, in particular of the authorisation requirement, to order the immediate cessation of business operations and the immediate full settlement of already concluded activities, and to investigate infringements of Regulation XXX (PSR) and of this Directive. To enable competent authorities to effectively enforce the authorisation requirement and to properly supervise payment institutions, it is appropriate to grant those authorities investigatory and supervisory powers and the possibility to impose or initiate administrative or legal proceedings to impose penalties and measures necessary to perform their tasks. For the same reason, it is appropriate to grant competent authorities the power to request information, conduct on-site inspections, search business premises as well as private home estate, ancillary facilities, movables and persons and to issue recommendations, guidelines and binding administrative decisions. Member States should lay down national provisions, harmonised under the provisions of this Directive, with respect to the suspension or withdrawal of the authorisation of a payment institution. Member States should empower their competent authorities to impose administrative sanctions and measures aimed specifically at ending infringements of provisions concerning the supervision or pursuit of the payment service business.

- (50) Due to the broad range of possible business models in the payments industry, it is appropriate to allow for a certain degree of supervisory discretion to ensure that the same risks are treated in the same way across all Member States.
- (51) When supervising compliance by payment institutions with their obligations, competent authorities should exercise their supervisory powers respecting fundamental rights, including the right to privacy. Without prejudice to the control of an independent authority (national data protection authority) and in accordance with the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, Member States should have in place adequate and effective safeguards where there is a risk that the exercise of those powers could lead to abuse or arbitrariness amounting to serious interference with such rights including, where appropriate, through the prior authorisation of the judicial authority of the Member State concerned.

- (52) To ensure the protection of individual and business rights, Member States should ensure that all persons who work or who have worked for competent authorities are subjected to the obligation of professional secrecy.
- (53) The activity of certain payment institutions crosses borders and is relevant for different competent authorities as well as the EBA, the European Central Bank ('ECB') and national central banks in their capacity as monetary and oversight authorities. It is therefore appropriate to provide for their effective cooperation and exchange of information. Information sharing arrangements should fully comply with the data protection rules laid down in Regulation (EU) 2016/679 of the European Parliament and of the Council¹³ and in Regulation (EU) 2018/1725 of the European Parliament and of the Council.¹⁴
- (54) Where disagreements occur in the context of the cross-border cooperation between competent authorities, those competent authorities should be able to request assistance from the EBA, which should take a decision without undue delay. The EBA should also be able to assist competent authorities in reaching an agreement on its own initiative.

¹³ Regulation (EU) 2016/679 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data, and repealing Directive 95/46/EC (General Data Protection Regulation) (OJ L 119, 4.5.2016, p. 1).

(55) A payment institution that exercises the right of establishment or freedom to provide services should provide the competent authority of the home Member State with any relevant information with regard to its business and notify that competent authority about which Member State(s) the payment institution intends to operate in, whether it intends to use branches or agents ■ and whether it intends to use outsourcing.

Where a payment institution intends to distribute or redeem electronic money in another Member State through a natural or legal person, a corresponding notification, adapted to the specificities of such persons, should also apply. While such natural or legal persons distributing or redeeming electronic money are not subject to registration requirements under this Directive, it is nevertheless appropriate to ensure that information relating to such cross-border activities is communicated by the payment institution to the competent authorities of the home Member State and transmitted to the competent authorities of the host Member States in the context of the home-host cooperation.

(56) To facilitate cooperation between competent authorities and an effective supervision of payment institutions, in the context of the use of the right of establishment or freedom to provide services, it is appropriate that competent authorities in the home Member State communicate information to the host Member State. In situations of so-called “triangular passporting” where a payment institution authorised in a country “A” uses an intermediary, such as an agent  or branch, located in a country “B” for offering payment services in another country “C”, the host Member State should be considered to be the one where the services are offered to end-users. Taking into account challenges in cross-border cooperation between competent authorities, it is appropriate that the EBA develops draft regulatory technical standards on cooperation and information exchange, taking into consideration the experience gained in applying Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2017/2055.¹⁵

¹⁵ Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2017/2055 of 23 June 2017 supplementing Directive (EU) 2015/2366 of the European Parliament and of the Council with regard to regulatory technical standards for the cooperation and exchange of information between competent authorities relating to the exercise of the right of establishment and the freedom to provide services of payment institutions (OJ L 294, 11.11.2017, p. 1).

(57) Member States should be able to require payment institutions operating on their territory, whose head office is situated in another Member State, to report to them periodically on their activities in their territory for information or statistical purposes. Where those payment institutions operate pursuant to the right of establishment, the competent authorities of the host Member State(s) should be able to require that information also to be used for monitoring compliance with Regulation XXX [PSR]. The same should apply where there is no establishment in the host Member State(s), and the payment institution is providing services in the host Member State(s) on the basis of the free provision of services. To facilitate the supervision of networks of agents or branches by competent authorities, it is appropriate that Member States where agents or branches operate are able to require the parent payment institution to appoint a central contact point in their territory. Where a Member State does impose such a requirement, each payment institution should appoint only one central contact point per Member State. The EBA should develop regulatory technical standards setting out the criteria to determine when the appointment of a central contact point is appropriate and what its functions should be. The requirement to appoint a central contact point should be proportionate to achieving the aim of adequate communication and information reporting on compliance with the relevant provisions in Regulation XXX [PSR] in the host Member State.

- (58) In emergency situations, where immediate action is necessary to address a serious threat to the collective interests of payment service users in the host Member State, including large scale fraud, it should be possible for the competent authorities of the host Member State to take precautionary measures in parallel with the cross-border cooperation between competent authorities of the host and the home Member States and pending measures by the competent authority of the home Member State. Those measures should be appropriate, proportionate to the aim, non-discriminatory and temporary in nature. Any measures should be properly justified. The competent authorities of the home Member State of the relevant payment institution and other authorities concerned, including the Commission and the EBA, should be informed in advance or, where not possible in view of the emergency situation, without undue delay.

(59) It is important to ensure that all entities providing payment services be brought within the scope of certain minimum legal and regulatory requirements. Thus, it is desirable to require the registration of the identity and whereabouts of all persons providing payment services, including of entities which are unable to meet the full range of conditions for authorisation as payment institutions, including some small payment institutions. Such an approach is in line with the rationale of Recommendation 14 of the Financial Action Task Force, which provides for a mechanism whereby payment service providers which are unable to meet all of the conditions set out in that Recommendation may nevertheless be treated as payment institutions. For those purposes, even where entities are exempt from all or part of the conditions for authorisation, Member States should enter them in the register of payment institutions. However, it is essential to make the possibility of an exemption from authorisation subject to strict requirements relating to the value of payment transactions. Entities benefiting from an exemption from authorisation should not enjoy the right of establishment or freedom to provide services and should not indirectly exercise those rights while being a participant in a payment system.

- (60) To ensure transparency with regard to possible exemptions for small payment institutions, it is appropriate to require Member States to communicate such decisions to the Commission.
- (61) In view of the specific nature of the activity performed and the risks connected to the provision of account information services, it is appropriate to provide for a specific prudential regime for account information service providers, without a need for a fully-fledged authorisation regime but with a lighter registration requirement, accompanied by documents and information to assist the competent authority with carrying out supervision. Account information service providers should be allowed to provide services on a cross-border basis, benefiting from the ‘passporting’ rules.

(62) To further improve access to cash, which is a priority of the Commission, retailers should be allowed to offer, in physical shops, cash provision services even in the absence of a purchase by a customer, without having to obtain a payment service provider authorisation, registration or being an agent of a payment institution. Those cash provision services should, however, be subject to the obligation to disclose fees charged to the customer, if any. Those services should be provided by retailers on a voluntary basis and should depend on the availability of cash by the retailer. To prevent unfair competition between ATM deployers not servicing payment accounts and retailers offering cash withdrawals without a purchase, and to ensure that shops do not rapidly run out of cash, it is appropriate to impose a maximum cap of EUR 150 per withdrawal or the equivalent in national currency. The payment transaction through which retailers provide cash services should be subject to strong customer authentication. Member States should also be able to adopt a lower limit, no lower than EUR 100, taking into account national specificities, such as the level of cash availability in a Member State and specific national AML risks. Moreover, to prevent the abuse of the set transaction limit and to ensure an adequate level of protection against money laundering and countering terrorist financing risks, Member States should be able to provide that cash provision services in retail stores are also subject to a daily withdrawal limit, per payment account. The account servicing payment service provider of the payer should be responsible for implementing the set limits.

(63) Directives 2007/64/EC and 2015/2366/EU conditionally excluded from their scope payment services offered by certain deployers of automated teller machines (ATMs). That exclusion has stimulated the growth of ATM services in many Member States, in particular in less populated areas, supplementing bank ATMs. However, this exclusion has proven difficult to apply due to its ambiguity with regard to the entities covered by it. To address this issue, it is appropriate to make explicit that previously excluded ATM deployers are those which do not service payment accounts and whose activities do not constitute any of the licensed services listed in Annex I, particularly service (1). Taking into account the limited risks involved in the activity of such ATM deployers, it is appropriate, instead of excluding them totally from the scope, to subject them to a registration regime tailored to the specific risks they present. Furthermore, to ensure proper implementation, registration might be refused or revoked if competent authorities consider that an ATM deployer does not comply with the requirements set out in this Directive. In such cases, competent authorities should inform the concerned ATM deployer justifying their decision.

(64) Service providers seeking to benefit from an exclusion from the scope of Directive (EU) 2015/2366 often did not consult their authorities on whether their activities are covered by, or excluded from, that Directive, but often relied on their own assessments. That has led to a divergent application of certain exclusions across Member States. It also appears that some exclusions may have been used by payment service providers to redesign business models so that the payment activities offered would fall outside the scope of that Directive. That may result in increased risks for payment service users and divergent conditions for payment service providers in the internal market. Service providers should therefore be obliged to notify relevant activities to competent authorities so that the competent authorities can assess whether the requirements set out in the relevant provisions are fulfilled and to ensure a homogenous interpretation of the rules throughout the internal market. In particular, for all exclusions based on the respect of a threshold, a notification procedure should be provided to ensure compliance with the specific requirements. Moreover, it is important to include a requirement for potential payment service providers to notify competent authorities of the activities that they provide in the framework of a limited network on the basis of the criteria set out in Regulation XXX [PSR] where the value of payment transactions exceeds a certain threshold. Competent authorities should assess whether the activities so notified can be considered to be activities provided in the framework of a limited network, to ascertain whether they should remain excluded from the scope.

- (65) The power to adopt acts in accordance with Article 290 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union should be delegated to the Commission in respect of updating any of the amounts to take account of inflation. The Commission, when preparing and drawing-up delegated acts, should ensure a simultaneous, timely and appropriate transmission of relevant documents to the European Parliament and to the Council.
- (66) To ensure a consistent application of the applicable requirements, the Commission should be able to rely on the expertise and support of the EBA, which should be given the task of preparing guidelines and draft regulatory technical standards. The Commission should be empowered to adopt those draft regulatory technical standards. Those specific tasks are fully in line with the role and responsibilities of the EBA as provided in Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council¹⁸.

¹⁸ Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 24 November 2010 establishing a European Supervisory Authority (European Banking Authority), amending Decision No 716/2009/EC and repealing Commission Decision 2009/78/EC (OJ L 331, 15.12.2010, p. 12).

- (67) Since the further integration of an internal market in payment services, cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States alone because it requires the harmonisation of different rules currently existing in the legal systems of the various Member States which would be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on European Union. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Directive does not go beyond what is necessary in order to achieve that objective.
- (68) This Directive does not include licensing requirements for payment systems, payment schemes or payment arrangements, taking into account the need to avoid any duplication with the Eurosystem's oversight framework over retail payment systems, including over Systemically Important Payment Systems and other systems, as well as the Eurosystem's new 'PISA' Framework, and oversight by national central banks. This Directive also does not cover, in its scope, the provision of technical services including processing or the operation of digital wallets. However, considering the pace of innovation in the payments sector and the possible emergence of new risks, it is necessary that in its future review of this Directive the Commission gives particular consideration to those developments and assesses whether the scope of the Directive should be extended to cover new services and entities.

- (69) In the interest of legal certainty, it is appropriate to make transitional arrangements allowing undertakings who have commenced the activities of payment institutions in accordance with the national law transposing Directive (EU) 2015/2366 before the entry into force of this Directive to continue those activities within the Member State concerned for a specified period.
- (70) In the interest of legal certainty, transitional arrangements should be made to ensure that electronic money institutions which have taken up their activities in accordance with the national laws transposing Directive 2009/110/EC are able to continue those activities within the Member State concerned for a specified period. That period should be longer for electronic money institutions that have benefited from the waiver provided for in Article 9 of Directive 2009/110/EC.

(74) In keeping with the principles of better regulation, this Directive should be reviewed for its effectiveness and efficiency in achieving its objectives, as laid out in the accompanying impact assessment. The review should take place a sufficient time after the entry into force █ to base the review on appropriate evidence. Seven years is considered to be an appropriate period. While the review should consider the entire Directive, certain topics should be singled out for particular attention, namely the █ safeguarding of payment institutions funds, and the number and market share of payment service providers authorised under this Directive, which may be affected by █ the rules proposed by the Commission on 18 April 2023¹ which, when adopted, would amend Directive 2014/49/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 April 2014 on deposit guarantee schemes. Regarding the scope of this Directive, however, it is appropriate for a review to take place earlier, three years after the entry into force of Regulation (EU) [.../...] of the European Parliament and of the Council² (Payment Services Regulation), given the importance attached to this subject in Regulation (EU) 2022/2554. That review of scope should consider both the possible extension of the list of covered payment services to include services such as those performed by payment systems and payment schemes, and the possible inclusion in the scope of some technical services currently excluded such as digital wallets.

- (75) Given the number of changes that need to be made to Directive (EU) 2015/2366 and Directive 2009/110/EC, it is appropriate to repeal both Directives and replace them by this Directive.
- (76) Any personal data processing in the context of this Directive must comply with Regulation (EU) 2016/679 and Regulation (EU) 2018/1725. Therefore, the supervisory authorities under Regulation (EU) 2016/679 and Regulation (EU) 2018/1725 are responsible for the supervision of processing of personal data carried out in the context of this Directive. When transposing this Directive, the Member States should ensure that the national legislation include appropriate data protection safeguards for processing of personal data.
- (77) The European Data Protection Supervisor was consulted in accordance with Article 42(1) of Regulation (EU) 2018/1725 and delivered an opinion on 22 August 2023.

The same applies to any natural or legal person who has taken a decision to dispose, directly or indirectly, of a qualifying holding, or to reduce its qualifying holding so that the proportion of the capital or of the voting rights held would fall below 20 %, 30 % or 50 %, or so that the payment institution would cease to be its subsidiary.
2. The proposed acquirer of a qualifying holding in the payment institution shall inform the competent authority about the size of the intended holding and relevant necessary information as referred to in Article 23(4) of Directive 2013/36/EU.

3. Member States shall require that where the influence exercised by a proposed acquirer, as referred to in paragraph 1, is likely to operate to the detriment of the prudent and sound management of the payment institution, the competent authorities shall express their opposition or take other appropriate measures to bring that situation to an end. Such measures may include injunctions, penalties against directors or the persons responsible for the management of the payment institution in question, or the suspension of the exercise of the voting rights attached to the shares held by the shareholders or members of this payment institution.

Similar measures shall apply to natural or legal persons who fail to comply with the obligation to provide prior information, as laid down in paragraph 2.

4. Where a holding as referred to in paragraph 1 is acquired despite the opposition of the competent authorities, Member States shall, regardless of any other penalty to be adopted, provide for the exercise of the corresponding voting rights to be suspended, the nullity of votes cast or the possibility of annulling those votes.

Article 5

Initial capital

Member States shall require payment institutions to hold, at the time of authorisation, initial capital, comprised of one or more of the items referred to in Article 26, points (1)(a) to (e), of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013 as follows:

Article 6

Own funds

1. Member States shall require that the payment institution's own funds do not fall below the amount of initial capital referred to in Article 5, or the amount of own funds either calculated in accordance with Article 7 for payment institutions that do not issue electronic money ■ , or calculated in accordance with Article 8 for payment institutions that issue electronic money ■ , whichever is the higher.
2. Member States shall take the necessary measures to prevent the multiple use of elements eligible for own funds where the payment institution belongs to the same group as another payment institution, credit institution, investment firm, asset management company or insurance undertaking. The same shall also apply where a payment institution has a hybrid character and carries out activities other than providing payment ■ services.
3. Where the conditions laid down in Article 7 of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013 are met, Member States or their competent authorities may choose not to apply Articles 7 or 8 of this Directive, as applicable, to payment institutions which are included in the consolidated supervision of the parent credit institution pursuant to Directive 2013/36/EU.

Article 7

Calculation of own funds for payment institutions that do not issue electronic money

1. Notwithstanding the initial capital requirements set out in Article 5, Member States shall require payment institutions, other than payment institutions that either only offer payment initiation services as referred to in Annex I, point (6), or only offer account information services as referred to in Annex I, point (7), or only both such services, and other than payment institutions that issue electronic money as referred to in Annex I, point (8), to hold own funds calculated in accordance with paragraph 2 at all times.
2. Competent authorities shall require payment institutions to apply, by default, method B as laid down in point b) below. Competent authorities may however decide that, in light of their specific business model, in particular where they only execute a small number of transactions but of a high individual value, payment institutions shall rather apply method A or C. For the purposes of methods A, B and C, the preceding year is to be understood as the 12-month period prior to the moment of calculation.

(a) Method A

The payment institution's own funds shall amount to at least 10 % of its fixed overheads of the preceding year. The competent authorities may adjust that requirement in the event of a material change in a payment institution's business since the preceding year. Where a payment institution has not completed a full year's business at the date of the calculation, payment institution's own funds shall amount to at least 10 % of the corresponding fixed overheads as projected in its business plan, unless the competent authorities have required an adjustment to that plan.

(b) Method B

The payment institution's own funds shall amount to at least the sum of the following elements multiplied by the scaling factor k referred to in paragraph 3, where payment volume (PV) represents one twelfth of the total amount of payment transactions executed by the payment institution in the preceding year:

- (i) 4,0 % of the slice of PV up to EUR 5 million;
plus
- (ii) 2,5 % of the slice of PV above EUR 5 million up to EUR 10 million;
plus
- (iii) 1 % of the slice of PV above EUR 10 million up to EUR 100 million;
plus
- (iv) 0,5 % of the slice of PV above EUR 100 million up to EUR 250 million;
plus
- (v) 0,25 % of the slice of PV above EUR 250 million.

Where a payment institution has not completed a 12-month period of operation at the date of the calculation, the PV may be based on the total amount of payment transactions as projected in its business plan, unless the competent authority has required an adjustment to that plan.

(c) Method C

The payment institution's own funds shall amount to at least the relevant indicator referred to in point (i), multiplied by the multiplication factor referred to in point (ii) and by the scaling factor k referred to in paragraph 3.

(i) The relevant indicator shall be the sum of the following:

- (1) interest income;
- (2) interest expenses;
- (3) commissions and fees received; and
- (4) other operating income.

Each element shall be included in the sum with its positive or negative sign. Income from extraordinary or irregular items shall not be used in the calculation of the relevant indicator. Expenditure on the outsourcing of services rendered by third parties may reduce the relevant indicator where the expenditure is incurred from an undertaking subject to supervision under this Directive. The relevant indicator shall be calculated on the basis of the 12-monthly observation at the end of the previous financial year. The relevant indicator shall be calculated over the previous financial year.

Own funds calculated in accordance with method C shall not fall below 80 % of the average of the previous 3 financial years for the relevant indicator. When audited figures are not available, business estimates may be used.

(ii) The multiplication factor shall be:

- (1) 10 % of the slice of the relevant indicator up to EUR 2,5 million;
- (2) 8 % of the slice of the relevant indicator from EUR 2,5 million up to EUR 5 million;
- (3) 6 % of the slice of the relevant indicator from EUR 5 million up to EUR 25 million;
- (4) 3 % of the slice of the relevant indicator from EUR 25 million up to 50 million;
- (5) 1,5 % above EUR 50 million.

3. The scaling factor k to be used in methods B and C shall be:

- (a) 0,5 where the payment institution provides only the payment service as referred to in point (5) of Annex I;
- (b) 1 where the payment institution provides any of the payment services as referred to in any of points (1) to (4) of Annex I.

4. Member States shall require that payment institutions other than payment institutions that either only offer payment initiation services as referred to in Annex I, point (6), or only offer account information services as referred to in Annex I, point (7), or only both such services, and other than payment institutions that only issue electronic money as referred to in Annex I, point (8), that also engage in the activities referred to in Article 10, ensure that the own funds held for the services listed in Annex I, points (1) to (5), are not considered as own funds held for the purpose of Article 10, paragraph 4, point (d) or other services not regulated under this Directive.
5. Competent authorities may, based on an evaluation of the risk-management processes, risk loss data base and internal control mechanisms of the payment institution, require the payment institution to hold an amount of own funds which is up to 20 % higher than the amount which would result from the application of the method chosen in accordance with paragraph 2. Competent authorities may permit the payment institution to hold an amount of own funds which is up to 20 % lower than the amount which would result from the application of the method to be applied in accordance with paragraph 2.

6. The EBA shall develop draft regulatory standards in accordance with Article 16 of Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010 concerning the criteria to determine when the payment institution's business model is such that they only execute a small number of transactions, but of a high individual value, as referred in paragraph 2 of this Article.

The EBA shall submit those draft regulatory technical standards to the Commission by []
OP please insert the date = 1 year after the date of entry into force of this Directive].

Power is delegated to the Commission to adopt the regulatory technical standards in accordance with Article 10 to 14 of Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010.

2. Notwithstanding the initial capital requirements set out in Article 5, Member States shall require payment institutions that only offer the payment service referred to in point (8) of Annex I to hold, at all times, own funds calculated in accordance with Method D as set out in paragraph 3.

3. Method D: The own funds ■ shall amount to at least 2 % of the average outstanding electronic money.

5. Member States shall allow payment institutions that both issue electronic money as referred to in point (8) of Annex I and

(a) offer any of the payment services referred to in points (1) to (5) of Annex I, where those payment services are not linked to the issuance of electronic money referred to in point (8) of Annex I, or to calculate their own funds requirements on the basis of a representative portion assumed to be used for the issuance of electronic money referred to in point (8) of Annex 1, provided that such a representative portion can be reasonably estimated on the basis of historical data and to the satisfaction of the competent authorities, where the amount of outstanding electronic money is unknown in advance. Where a payment institution providing the payment service referred to in point (8) of Annex 1 has not completed a sufficient period of business, its own funds requirements shall be calculated on the basis of projected outstanding electronic money evidenced by its business plan subject to any adjustment to that plan required by the competent authorities.

(b) offer any of the activities referred to in Article 10(1) and (4), ■

Article 9

Safeguarding requirements

1. Member States shall require a payment institution which provides payment services as referred to in Annex I, points (1) to (5), or point (8), to safeguard all funds other than electronic money tokens it has received from payment service users or through another payment service provider for the execution of payment transactions, or where applicable the funds received in exchange for electronic money that has been issued, in one or more of the following ways:
 - (a) the payment institution shall ensure that those funds as soon as possible are no longer commingled with the funds of any natural or legal person other than the payment service users on whose behalf the funds are held;
 - (b) those funds shall be covered by an insurance policy or some other comparable guarantee from an insurance company or a credit institution authorised in a Member State, which does not belong to the same group as the payment institution itself, for an amount equivalent to the amount that would have been segregated in the absence of the insurance policy or other comparable guarantee, payable in the event that the payment institution is unable to meet its financial obligations.

For the purposes of the first subparagraph, point (a), where the payment institution still holds the funds and has not yet by the end of the business day following the day when the funds have been received, delivered those funds to the payee or transferred those funds to another payment service provider in order to complete the transfer of the funds to the payee, the payment institution shall do either of the following:

- (a) deposit those funds either in a separate account in a credit institution authorised in a Member State, or at a central bank at the discretion of that central bank;
- (b) invest those funds in secure, liquid low-risk assets, as determined by the competent authorities of the home Member State;

For the purposes of the first subparagraph, point (a), Member States and payment institutions shall ensure that those funds are insulated in accordance with national law in the interest of the payment service users against the claims of other creditors of the payment institution, in particular in the event of insolvency.

By way of derogation from the second subparagraph, point (a), Member States may allow payment institutions to deposit those funds in a separate account in a post office giro institution referred to in Article 2, paragraph 1, point (b), of [Regulation XXX (PSR)], provided that that post office giro institution is established in a Member State and is supervised and subject to prudential requirements comparable to those applied to credit institutions.

For the purposes of the first subparagraph, payment institutions shall ensure that they safeguard the amount that corresponds to the claim against the payment institution of the payment service user arising from the provision of payment services.

Payment institutions shall inform their payment service users in a clear and transparent manner how funds of the individual user are safeguarded, the insolvency law of which Member State is applicable, and in which Member State a claim is to be raised in the event of the insolvency of the payment institution.

By way of derogation from subparagraph 1, and without prejudice to paragraph 4 of this Article, where a payment institution issues electronic money tokens, it shall safeguard the funds received in exchange for the electronic money tokens in accordance with the methods set out in Article 54 of Regulation (EU) 2023/1114.

Funds of payment service users held by a payment institution in settlement accounts with payment systems designated under the Directive 98/26/EC shall be considered as compliant with the requirements set out in paragraph 1 if those funds are not commingled with the funds of any natural or legal person other than payment service users. Member States shall ensure, without prejudice to requirements of Directive 98/26/EC, that funds of payment service users held in settlement accounts with payment systems are insulated in accordance with national law in the interest of payment service users against the claims of other creditors of the payment institution, in particular in the event of its insolvency.*

The first subparagraph shall apply only to those payment systems where the funds used for settlement are ultimately held in credit institutions or central banks.

2. Where payment institutions use the safeguarding method set out in paragraph 1, first subparagraph, point (a), they shall avoid, where appropriate, concentration risk to safeguarded payment service users' funds. In particular, they shall endeavour not to safeguard all payment service users' funds with one credit institution.
3. Where a payment institution is required to safeguard funds under paragraph 1 and a portion of those funds is to be used for future payment transactions with the remaining amount to be used for services other than payment services, that portion of the funds to be used for future payment transactions shall also be subject to the requirements of paragraph 1. Where that portion is variable or not known in advance, Member States shall allow payment institutions to apply this paragraph on the basis of a representative portion assumed to be used for payment services, provided that such a representative portion can be reasonably estimated on the basis of historical data to the satisfaction of the competent authorities.

4. ■ Funds received for the purpose of issuing electronic money need not be safeguarded until the funds are credited to the payment institution's payment account or are otherwise made available to the payment institution in accordance with the execution time requirements laid down in Regulation XXX [PSR]. In any event, such funds shall be safeguarded by no later than the end of the business day following the day when the funds have been received, after the issuance of electronic money.

A payment institution issuing electronic money shall ensure that holders of that electronic money, both the payment service user having exchanged funds for electronic money and the beneficiary of a payment transaction in electronic money, are always entitled to redemption at par value and upon request, through the issuing payment institution.

5. ■ For the purpose of application of paragraph 1, secure, liquid, low-risk assets are asset items falling into one of the categories set out in Table 1 of Article 336(1) of Regulation (EU) No 575/2013 for which the specific risk capital charge is no higher than 1,6 %, but excluding other qualifying items as defined in Article 336(4) of that Regulation.

For the purposes of paragraph 1, secure, liquid, low-risk assets are also units in an undertaking for collective investment in transferable securities (UCITS) which invests solely in assets as specified in the first subparagraph.

In exceptional circumstances and with a proper justification, the competent authorities may, based on an evaluation of security, maturity, value or other risk elements of the assets as specified in the first and second subparagraphs, determine which of those assets shall not be considered as secure, low-risk assets for the purposes of paragraph 1.

6. A payment institution shall inform the competent authorities in advance of any material change in measures taken for safeguarding of funds received for payment services provided and in case of the payment service referred to in Annex I, point (8), in exchange for electronic money issued.
7. The EBA shall develop regulatory technical standards on safeguarding requirements, laying down in particular safeguarding risk management frameworks for payment institutions to ensure protection of users' funds, and including requirements on segregation, designation, reconciliation and calculation of safeguarded funds. They shall in particular specify the circumstances in which it is appropriate to avoid concentration risks as referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, taking into account the principle of proportionality, and requirements on segregation and reconciliation of payment service users' funds held in settlement accounts pursuant to paragraph 1a of this Article.

The EBA shall submit those draft regulatory technical standards to the Commission by [OP please insert the date= 1 year after the date of entry into force of this Directive].

Power is delegated to the Commission to adopt the regulatory technical standards referred to in the first subparagraph in accordance with Articles 10 to 14 of Regulation (EU) No 1093/2010.

Where a payment institution providing the payment service referred to in point (8) of Annex 1 also offers any other payment service or any of the activities referred to in Article 10, and the amount of outstanding electronic money is unknown in advance, the competent authorities shall allow that payment institution to apply the first subparagraph point (b), on the basis of a representative portion assumed to be used for the payment service referred to in point (8) of Annex 1, provided that such a representative portion can be reasonably estimated on the basis of historical data and to the satisfaction of the competent authorities. Where a payment institution has not completed a sufficiently long period of business, that requirement shall be assessed on the basis of projected outstanding electronic money evidenced by its business plan subject to any adjustment to that plan required by the competent authorities.

Member States may also provide for the granting of the optional exemptions to be subject to an additional requirement of a maximum storage amount on the payment instrument or payment account of the consumer where the electronic money is stored.
