Statements by the Commission

High Speed services

"The Commission considers that the wording of Articles 11 and 11a does not, in respect of the different types of passenger services, lead to different results as regards the possibility to limit the right of access. In all cases covered by those Articles, and to the extent the Member State concerned has exercised the power to limit access in accordance with Article 11(1), the limitation contemplated therein may be imposed insofar as justified by an economic equilibrium test carried out by the regulatory body on a case by case basis, in accordance with Article 11(2) and (3) as well as with the implementing act adopted under Article 11(4)."

Conflict of interest

"The Commission considers that each of the provisions referring to "conflict of interest" has to be applied in its own right, in accordance with its wording and in line with the objective of this Directive. These provisions constitute a differentiated system fully in line with the principle of proportionality.

- Article 7(1), third subparagraph, does not distinguish between the various network management functions, but concerns exclusively the persons specified therein.
- Article 7a(2), third indent, applies only in respect of essential functions, as defined by the amending Directive.
- Article 7b(1) applies to traffic management and maintenance planning and requires Member States in particular to ensure that the persons taking decisions on these functions "are not affected by any conflict of interest". Hence, Member States are obliged to achieve this result, but are not required to go beyond what is necessary to this end.
- Article 7c(1) makes no distinction as between network management functions, but is limited to situations of outsourcing and sharing of such functions.

These articles compel Member States to ensure that the results defined therein be achieved, but leave them the choice of the national framework to be employed to this end, when transposing these provisions into national legislation and applying them. In this context, Member States shall take account of the objectives of the Directive. In line with the wording of Articles 7a and 7b, they have to ensure independence for essential functions on the one hand and impartiality of the infrastructure manager in respect of traffic management and maintenance planning on the other hand.

Member States bear the responsibility of complying with the provisions of Article 7(1), 7a(2), 7b(1) and 7c(1) and of ensuring that no conflict of interests arise. The reference to "requirements regarding conflict of interests" in point (j) of Article 56(1) and (2) implies that the regulatory body will monitor and control the compliance of the infrastructure manager with the national provisions transposing this Directive into national law."

Statement by HU

"Hungary acknowledges the importance of structural reforms in achieving sound regulatory and institutional environment and a smoothly-functioning economy across the EU and supports the idea of establishing a more structured way of providing assistance to Member States that deem this necessary for the implementation of their structural reforms.

At the same time the proposal, which establishes the SRSP for the period of 2017-2020, includes several elements with possible long-term impacts on the future of Union policies. Hungary is of the view that the Regulation shall not constitute a precedent for future debates, including on the next Multiannual Financial Framework and prejudice the outcome of them either, with special regard to the financing aspects of SRSP and the definition of "European added value".

Furthermore, Hungary deems it necessary that this support mechanism be established independently from the Cohesion Policy of the European Union and without endangering the policy's objectives enshrined in Article 174 of TFEU (strengthening of the economic, social and territorial cohesion of the EU).

Therefore Hungary is not able to support the proposal in its current form and abstains from the adoption of the Council's general approach."

Statement by AT

"Austria can support the draft proposal for a Regulation only subject to major reservations with regards to content.

Article 4a of the proposal provides for voluntary pilot studies concerning the statistical surveying of passenger transports on inland waterways. Austria, however, is of the opinion, that this should not be part of a regulation in general. The question to carry out such pilot studies should have been examined in advance within Eurostat's Working Parties – and where appropriate implemented within that scope.

With regards to the aim of a statistical survey of passenger transports on inland waterways – to monitor shifts from other modes of transport towards the inland waterway transport – Austria underlines that it strongly supports the policy of a modal shift.

However, since passenger transport on Austrian inland waterways is of touristic nature only, such a survey could not meet the objectives mentioned above, but would cause disproportionate costs in relation to the output.

Austria therefore recommends – in case of a future amendment of the Regulation with a view to implement a survey – to include a clear exemption for Member States without significant passenger transport on their inland waterways."
