Proposal for a REGULATION OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL establishing a Single Market emergency instrument and repealing Council Regulation No (EC) 2679/98	FR (Drafting): Proposal for a REGULATION OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL establishing a Single an Internal Market emergency instrument and repealing Council Regulation No (EC) 2679/98	SK (Comments): General comments by Slovakia: Provided comments are preliminary, we are still analysing the proposal and preparing our position. We have doubts about the implementation of SMEI in practice, therefore we would welcome concrete examples of the SMEI implementation in practice from the Commission. FR (Comments): The French authorities propose to replace “Single Market” by “Internal Market”, in accordance with the Treaty. RO (Comments): Romania maintains a general scrutiny reserve

(2) The Union was not sufficiently prepared to ensure efficient manufacturing, procurement and distribution of crisis-relevant non-medical goods such as personal protective equipment, especially in the early phase of the COVID-19 pandemic and the ad-hoc measures taken by the Commission in order to re-establish the functioning of the Single Market and to ensure the availability of crisis-relevant non-medical goods during the COVID-19 pandemic were necessarily reactive The pandemic also revealed insufficient overview of manufacturing capacities across the Union as well as vulnerabilities related to the global supply chains.

(3) Actions by the Commission were delayed by several weeks due to the lack of any Union wide contingency planning measures and of clarity as to which part of the national administration to contact to find rapid solutions to the impact on the Single Market being caused by the crisis. In addition it became clear that uncoordinated restrictive actions taken by the Member States would further aggravate the impacts of the crisis on the Single market. It emerged that there is a need for arrangements between the Member States and Union authorities as regards contingency planning, technical level coordination and cooperation and information exchange.		NL (Comments): No comments from NL. ES (Comments): ES considers that the recitals do not contain sufficient information on the Advisory Group, its composition and functions. (4) Representative organisations of economic operators have suggested that economic operators did not have sufficient information on the crisis response measures of the Member States during the pandemics, partly due to not knowing where to obtain such information, partly due to language constraints and the administrative burden implied in making repeated inquiries in all the Member States, especially in a constantly changing regulatory environment. This prevented them from making informed business decisions as to what extent they may rely on their free movement rights or continue cross-border business operations during the crisis. DK (Comments): Typo. NL (Comments): This recital does not mention who should anticipate, prepare, mitigate, etc. The NL would like to stress that the own responsibility of businesses for working on their resilience should not be ignored or undermined. There is a risk of a moral hazard (of businesses leaning back if public authorities take an active role in this regard).

SMEI is intended to complement the IPCR mechanism in relation to those horizontal crises of the internal market that require political decisions, which is not precise enough, especially in light of Art. 13 of the project. There is a different mode and different reasons for the activation of both mechanisms in the field of crisis response, as well as different definitions of a crisis / crisis situation, which are used in the IPCR decision and the draft regulation on SMEI.

(17) Article 21 TFEU lays down the right of EU citizens to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States, subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in the Treaties and the measures adopted to give them effect. The detailed conditions and limitations are laid down in Directive 2004/38/EC. Crisis management mechanisms should not be duplicated and contradictory. The multitude of instruments and mechanisms and the lack of a clear delineation of the scope of their application may cause legal and coordination difficulties for the administrations of the Member States and economic operators. It must be clear for Member State administrations what instruments should be used in a given crisis situation, which bodies are to deal with a given crisis situation, who and how should make decisions regarding a given crisis situation and what role Member States will play in this process. On the other hand, it must be clear for

The impact of a crisis on the Single Market can be two-fold. On the one hand, a crisis can lead to obstacles to free movement within the Single Market. On the other hand, a crisis can amplify shortages of crisis-relevant goods and services on the Single Market. The Regulation should address both types of impacts on the Single Market and this should be reflected in the definition. LT (Comments): In our view, events, if they are to be treated as a single market crisis, should have a negative impact on freedoms of movement of goods, services and persons. Therefore we suggest adding another pre-condition: detrimental effect to the functioning of the Single Market. On the same note, we could support DK NL FI proposal. In addition, the reference to a crisis "outside of the Union" makes sense only if there is a direct link to an impact on the Single market. In addition, examples and explanations of the components which constitute crisis (exceptional/ unexpected/ sudden/ natural or man-made/ happening inside and outside of the Union) should be provided in the recitals. IT (Comments): It is necessary to align the text with Recital 6 to better define the meaning of crisis and its impact

		on the Single Market. For SMEI to be effective and targeted, so that crisis mitigation measures are proportionate and strictly defined, a legally certain definition of “crisis” is essential. Instead, the proposal provides a broad definition that leaves ample room for interpretation and consequently legal uncertainty. The definition also makes no reference to the interruption of the free movement of goods, services and persons, which ought to be an important requirement. The definition of 'crisis' should include a reference to the negative impact of the exceptional event on the single market and its functioning to better circumscribe its scope, in line with the provisions of recital (6) and other emergency regulatory instruments (such as, for instance, Decision No. 1313/2013/UE of the European Parliament and the Council (Art. 4, par. 1) or Council Implementing Decision (EU) 2018/1993 (Art. 3, par.1, lett.a). The revised definition of ‘crisis’ is necessary also to support and contain the definition of ‘crisis relevant good and services’ according to the following paragraph 6. It would be preferable to connect this definition with the following point (2) and with the art. 8 which provide for propagation times of the relative effects of up to 6 months. The indicated integration is proposed.

Transparency of the process needs to be assured. AT (Comments): AT is questioning the need for a delegated act here. In AT's view para. 1 contains important elements of the Regulation. The involvement of the Member States must be ensured. Generally AT prefers this delegation to be removed, and this element of legislation to be regulated in the main body/enacting terms of this Regulation. According to CLS comments in the WP meeting at the 13.01.2023, regarding a possible council implementing act, para. 1 would need a concretisation of the points regulated. We would kindly ask for this concretisation. BE (Comments):

Crisis cooperation, exchange of information and crisis communication are essential elements before and during the crisis, therefore they should be agreed in advance by the co-legislators. It is essential that all stakeholders would have a saying in this process as all of them will be required to comply with the rules afterwards. One of the examples which comes to our mind – the Digital Services act (Art 48, Crisis Protocols: “2. The Commission shall encourage and facilitate the providers of very large online platforms, of very large online search engines and, where appropriate, the providers of other online platforms or of other online search engines, to participate in the drawing up, testing and application of those crisis protocols”. DK (Comments): An implementing act is considered more appropriate rather than a delegated act. 	activated in accordance with Article 9, national competent authorities shall monitor the supply chains of goods and services of strategic critical importance that have been identified in the implementing act activating the vigilance mode.	DK (Comments): As a general comment, much more clarity is needed on what it entails that national competent authorities “shall monitor”. From a technical and practical point of view, what is exactly expected of national authorities in this regard? Without any details on what “monitoring” entails, this paragraph seem very open to interpretation. Amendment of changing strategic to critical follows proposed changes in Article 3. SI (Comments): The question is which authorities will monitor supply chains. However, the COM also mentioned, that emergency mode can be activated WITHOUT vigilance mode, meaning that inventory in this case will not be necessary. In addition, in small MS, where you can count businesses on your hands, this list makes no sense; however administrative costs creating it and maintaining will still have to be covered. Furthermore, para 4 of this Art states, that voluntary information requests should be directed not only to the businesses, listed in the inventory, but to „other relevant stakeholders established in their respective” (aka inventory plays no important role in the vigilance mode). It must be clear for which products and in which circumstances this can apply. In this regard many questions remain unanswered. Business' and public actors' own material preparedness is always the primary means of securing security of supply. The three different types of emergency stockpiles can only be supplementary to that – to be used only in major crises or serious disruptions as a last resort. The national emergency stockpiles contain, for example, imported fuels, grain, hospital supplies, medicines, alloy metals, chemicals and critical imported raw materials. The Government decides on the release of the national emergency stockpiles. The NESA does not have actual stockpiles of its own. Instead, the amounts of goods to be stockpiled are agreed upon with the relevant companies to ensure that the products included in stockpiles

Its purpose is to secure the country's security of supply in the event of a serious disruption in the supply of imported fuels or medicines. Compulsory storage products include crude oil, oil products, coal, natural gas, medicines and medicinal substances. Security stockpiling is agreed upon between the companies in the industry and the NESAs. The purpose is to secure the livelihood of the population and the production activities of companies in the event of disruptions in the supply of essential raw materials and materials. The products to be stored are critical products and materials. The NESAs do not have their own security stockpiles. The quantities to be stored are agreed with the companies in the industry, so that the products circulate with normal operations. The company owns the stored material, but its release into use requires a permission from the Ministry of Economic Affairs and Employment. Sufficient financial resources are reserved for plant breeding and variety maintenance.

The Commission shall provide support to Member States to coordinate and streamline their efforts.	SI (Comments): It is not entirely clear whether the Member State's efforts to build up stocks refer to national stocks or to encouraging the creation of commercial stocks by companies. The establishment of new stocks also raises the question of financing stocks, as the amounts involved are usually large. In addition to the purchase of the stocks themselves, it is necessary to ensure storage capacity and to take into account the possibility of maintaining the quality of the goods. There're also questions regarding the relation between national and strategical reserves and the issue of what happens with the stocks when they're no longer needed when the issue becomes of logistical and financial nature.

When adopting and applying national measures in response to a underlying crisis, Member States shall ensure that their actions fully comply with the Treaty and Union law and, in particular, with the requirements laid down in this Article. 2. Any restriction shall be limited in time and removed as soon as the situation allows it. Additionally, any restriction should take into account the situation of border regions. 3. Any requirement imposed on citizens and businesses shall not create an undue or unnecessary administrative burden. 4. Member States shall inform citizens, consumers, businesses, workers and their representatives about measures that affect their free movement rights in a clear and unambiguous manner. 5. Member States shall ensure that all affected stakeholders are informed of measures restricting free movement of goods, services and persons, including workers and service 	principle that restrictions on free movement of goods, persons and services are in principle prohibited should be stated unequivocally prior to the other articles on which restrictive measures MS are and are not allowed to take. This principle as well as the framework for which Member States are and are not allowed to take should apply to all three modes foreseen in the Regulation. Therefore, it should be part of Part I which includes the general provisions of the Regulation. This should avoid for example Member States introducing intra-EU export restrictions in the vigilance mode which may lead to shortages and to a crisis. We would like to suggest to devote a specific title to the aforementioned provisions.
