| 43. | (31) Border surveillance at sea is considered one of the coastguard functions performed in the Union maritime domain. National authorities carrying out coast guard functions are also responsible for a wide range of tasks, which may include, but would not be limited to, maritime safety, security, search and rescue, border control, fisheries control, customs control, general law enforcement and environmental protection. The broad scope of coastguard functions brings them under the remit of different Union policies which should seek synergies to achieve more effective and efficient results. | (31) Border surveillance at sea is considered one of the coastguard functions performed in the Union maritime domain. For those projects, managing authorities should have the possibility to limit their management verifications provided that the beneficiary delivers all necessary data and information on the progress of the project and the eligibility of underlying expenditure in a timely manner. In addition, where a project implemented by such an international organisation is part of an audit sample, it should be possible for the audit authority to carry out its work in line with the principles of the International Standard on Related Services (ISRS) 4400, 'Engagements to Perform Agreed-upon Procedures Regarding Financial Information. |

For the purposes of the mid-term review, the report referred to in paragraph 10 shall identify the average impact level for each border section based on the latest average figures covering the years 2021, 2022 and 2023 prior the mid-term review in 2024. It shall determine the following specific weighting factors per section applying the impact levels determined in accordance with Article 34(1) of Regulation (EU) 2019/1896: |
