Y 23a		(11a) Regulation (EU) 2024/2747 establishes a framework of measures related to an internal market emergency and to the resilience of the internal market (IMERA). That Regulation defines the 'internal market emergency mode' and lays down the conditions and effects of its activation by the Council. The 'internal market emergency mode' is activated in exceptional circumstances to address any significant negative impact on the internal market which severely disrupts the free movement of goods, services and persons. The lack of harmonised standards might, in certain cases, have a severe negative impact on the functioning of the internal market, making reliance on the activation of the internal market		(11a) Where the lack of cooperation by international standardisation organisations prevents European standardisation organisations from developing relevant harmonised standards, [and where such situation cannot be adequately mitigated by alternative measures,] implementing powers should be conferred on the Commission to adopt, as a measure of last resort, common specifications without requesting one or more European standardisation organisations to draft or to revise European standards. In order to account for the potential far-reaching consequences for the functioning of the internal market and the international standardisation system of such a situation, implementing powers should Y

In view of the upcoming revision of the standardisation regulation, it is appropriate to limit the scope of the last resort clause to a limited period of time. When drafting such implementing acts, the Commission should make public in its website, in a timely manner, all relevant information concerning the third parties, where appropriate, contracted for supporting the drafting process of the implementing act.

	such as Regulation (EU) 2023/1542, it is essential to require economic operators to store the information contained in the EU declaration of conformity and instructions in the digital product passport where a product is covered by multiple pieces of legislation. This approach would reduce the administrative burden on manufacturers, as they would no longer need to maintain separate storage locations for compliance documents. By storing the documentation in one place, all necessary documents demonstrating product compliance would be easily accessible, ensuring transparency and facilitating compliance. This streamlined approach would enhance the overall efficiency of the regulatory framework, and it aligns with the principle that where several pieces of Union harmonisation legislation apply to a product, the manufacturer or other economic operator, where appropriate, should provide a single EU declaration of conformity.	such as Regulation (EU) 2023/1542, it is essential to require economic operators to store the information contained in the EU declaration of conformity and instructions in the digital product passport where a product is covered by multiple pieces of legislation. 143a		1a. In accordance with paragraph 1(a), when there is no harmonised standard that enables compliance with the essential requirements set out in Annex II and no reference in the Official Journal of the European Union is expected to be published within a reasonable period, the Commission may, as a last resort, by means of implementing acts, adopt common specifications in order to address an urgent concern with regard to non-compliant PPE, which cannot be adequately mitigated by alternative measures. A situation shall be considered to constitute an urgent concern:		1a. In exceptional cases where the lack of cooperation by international standardisation organisations prevents European standardisation organisations from adopting relevant international standards as harmonised standards and that situation cannot be adequately mitigated by alternative measures, and where the condition set out in point (a) of paragraph 1 is met, the Commission may, as a measure of last resort, adopt implementing acts establishing common specifications without prior request to one or more European standardisation organisations to draft or revise European standards. The draft implementing act shall be accompanied by a report justifying the exceptional situation and describing its implications for the internal market, the alternative measures which were taken and did not adequately mitigate the situation, and the reasons justifying the need to adopt common specifications. This report shall be presented to the Committee referred in paragraph 3.
